trite, there's usually enough amusing dialog to offset.

Sunday's segment was a good at self with Ann Sothern, as a good-hearted neighbor, acting as an enforced babysitter when the couple next door had a spat over their unemployed situation and fied their separate ways. Miss Sothern's boss (Don Porter) got helplessly involved, to find himself playing assistant nursemaid while engrossed in an important business and deal. Crisis worked itself out alright under Miss Sothern's wise, assured ministrations, for a satisfactory finale and a satisfying half-hour.

Lehn & Fink and Dorothy Gray, pioneers in television programming, know a good thing when they spot one. They took one look at the blueprints of Ray Bolger's second season program plans for television and immediately tied him up for ABC's Friday night spot following ozzie and harriet. Tying up Ray Bolger, of course, means letting those "million dollar legs" dance their way through the most lavish half-hour musi-comedy program in television. It's a star-spangled vehicle for the most exciting talent in the business.

WPIX, owned by the Daily News, was all over the place and copped considerable newspaper attention on a number of fronts. It clocked some 2,000 phone calls following, tour de force coverage anent the fate of a small motor launch, christened Con Edna, caught Saturday in the storm at Rockaway Park. Chairborne and mccoy boatswain's mates among the 2,000 offered suggestions on how to maneuver the craft to safety with John Tillman keeping all hands informed on the operation. Station's staff was alerted midafternoon Friday and operated on an emergency basis throughout. Cameras trained on Rockaway Park, on weatherman Joe Bolton at "Hurricane Center," Jack McCarthy at the News' weather bureau and Grand Central area atop the newspaper's East 42d St. building. Tillman's appointment with Edna was a climax to his milady menu in which he interviewed Zsa Zsa Gabor (Tuesday), and Marilyn Monroe (Thursday), and thus he was able to meet Edna without blushing since he admittedly was too dazed to observe Edna's tantrum. Also all over the place was Consolidated Edison (ConEdna, that is) with special "flirt alert" programs wPIX and other stations.

WABD, the DuMont flagship, showcased a special called "Operations Hurricane." NBC (radio and tv) were pitching at various points on the Eastern Seaboard as part of the remote processional. WOR and sisters (Mutual) operated along the coast from Cape Hatteras to Portland to feed in reports as Edna galloped, northward. WOR-TV featured gigantic weather maps which were first displayed on Ted Steele's show. ABC-TV placed lensers, at strategic points, with the web's radio side in N.Y. and elsewhere also on the qui vive.

Imown vocalists for its live shows. At a time when the music-and-news pattern it helped to fashion is becoming more and more "mechanized" as Buckley puts it, WNEW hopes to reverse the trend by the application of its known personalities and fresh talent working largely without disks.

Shuffle has Ford coming off hi dawn patrol and going into a 4-5-p.m. disk segment (featuring his offbeat selections rather than the customary straight pop stuff) and into a live-and-disk nightly stanza from 7.35 to 9, with the Roy Ross house orch and new talent (there's a "one-week stand" segment in which a new vocalist or vocal group tries out on the show—first, set for this week, is Arlene James). Also in the live vein is Bill Kemp, who'll follow Ford at 5-p.m. with a half-hour extension of his early morning show with the Ross combo. Al (Jazzbo) Collins takes over the midnight shift while retaining his 9-10 p.m. "Collins on the Moon" segment.

the midnight shift wine retaining his 9-10 p.m. "Collins on the Moon" segment.

Program topper Bill Kaland says that while there's an element of "calculated risk" in the shuffle, the live programming pitch is based on the fact that over the past several months, the outlet's existing live-music shows (Kemp in the morning and the Bill Harrington stanza at noon) have shown a steady rating increase. He feels that the public tends to identify itself with and stay with a recognizable live stanza as opposed to straight disk jockeying. And he points out that previous time-and-format shuffles haven't hurt the station's ratings, as in the case of Jerry Marshall, who moved into Martin Block's old "Make Believe Ballroom" time.

Station, incidentally, is doing onthe-air promotion on the Ford switch in typical WNEW fashion. Recorded announcements feature two switchboard operators, one of whom is completely upset over the midnight-to-afternoon switch, voicing such comments as "it comes as shock," "I'm all confused" and reference to Ford as "that guy I got bags under the eyes from staying up late to listen to."

OKLAHOMA CITY

COLLECTOR'S ITEM

$4.00 for a 1-minute TV spot in the Number 1 U.S. market! That was what our first advertiser, Bulova Watch Company, paid, based on the very first television rate card in America — issued by WNBT, NBC's key station in New York. The year was 1941.

Today — in 1954 — a 20-second station break costs $350 and is a better buy! Here's why: Thirteen years ago there were 3,000 TV homes in the New York area. A 5.0 rating meant a $4.00 spot gave a cost-per-thousand-homes of $26.67.

Today, with 4,327,000 TV homes in the WNBT area, the same rating of 5.0 means a cost-per-thousand of only $1.62.

For collecting customers, today's WNBT rate card is really the precious collector's item. But economy isn't the whole story. WNBT is first by many standards.

FIRST IN NET BILLINGS

During the month of August, WNBT sold $$2\frac{1}{2}$ -million in television advertising — more than any other New York TV station.

FIRST IN ADVERTISER-SERVICE

WNBT made a clean sweep in the 1954 Billboard Competition for excellence in merchandising, promotion, and advertising. 3 out of 3 first prizes!

FIRST IN NEWS

The 11th HOUR NEWS, with John K. M. McCaffrey, is by far New York's highest-rated daily local TV news program.

FIRST IN COLOR

WNBT schedules more color television programs than any other New York television station. No doubt about it, in the 13 years since WNBT's historic Rate Card #1, almost everything about television has changed except the basic superiority of WNBT.

If you'd like a souvenir copy of television's first rate card—a fascinating collector's item and useful conversation piece—call or write WNBT, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York 20, New York.

Only a few years ago, this program slot was probably the choicest time on the airlanes. It still is—but for video—and now the radio boys have to fight a last-ditch battle to retain their foothold in the Sunday night picture against top competition from tw. With the Edgar Bergen show, radio may not turn back the tide, but CBS at least is counterpunching as hard as it can.

Hergen is heading an excellent stanza made up of a smattering of music, chatter and news and all blended with unpretentious good humor: Aided by his familiar dummy characters, Charlie McCarthy-and Mortimer Snerd, Bergen works in his comedy routines defly. On the preem (13), for instance, Lt. Gen. Hubert Harmon of the U. S. Air-Force made a pitch for service volunters that was made doubly effective by the Bergen-McCarthy repartee with the general. The gags were laugh-getters, but not enough to drown the main point of the general's appearance. In a similar vein, although more hoked up, was the chat with a Dept. of Agriculture rep who tried to explain some of the department's functions. Fact that Bergen is originating from the Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D. C., is giving the show an almost semi-official character. Gale. This was routine stuff with a straight plug payoff.

Bergen also showcases pop records on this stanza but it's far from a disk jockey stanza. Only a few disks are used per session and they are obviously designed as breathers for Bergen. The repertoire, moreover, has none of that "hit parade" flavor, the initiater covering such offbeat items as Jane Morgan's "Baseball" side. Bulawayo Sweet Rhythm Boys rendition of "In the Mood," and Sauter-Finegan's "Midnight Steighride." Bergen's comments about the music is mostly of the gap variety and far removed from the usual deejay chatter.

Bergen also has a brief segment for a rundown of news bulletins. Tone of show was Bergen's finale inspirational thought for the day. "when breathing, always try to use your lungs." In short, it's a breezy, tongue-in-cheek stanza not designed to bring radio back but one that will give Kraft a good run for its AM money.

Chicago, Sept. 14.

Although the starting date for NBC-TV's "Tonight" is less than two weeks away, the clearance problem with WNBQ, web's Chicago, is still to be resolved. Prior to the decision to go ahead with the Steve Allen late-nighter, the Windy City outlet peddled the Tuesday and Friday night 11 p.m. hour to the De Met Pontiac agency for a repeat this season of its bowling show that caught on last year. Per contract, twice a week bow-

Robert Cummings was in for a brief interview with Billingsley, and a good trailer for his own upcoming tv package, "which our mutual agent MCA just sold" he told Billingsley. Russell Nype did a walkthrough, as did Yvonne Adair and Myron McCormick; Eloise McElhone was identified as one of the main-room diners, along with Paul Warwick, her husband, among a string of socialite and show biz personalities scattered throughout the sundry rooms that comprise the eight-story establishment.

the sundry rooms that comprise the eight-story establishment.

"Stork Club" is easily the biggest namedropping half-hour show in television. Since most of these names have automatic identification, the audience appeal is in like ratio. This is no surreptitious Alfred Hitchcock "Rear Window" sneaker-upper on some asserted Greenwich Village characters; the four ABC-TV cameras give a generous, fullsized, frontal closeup on life and the pursuit of nocturnal happiness as paraded in what is perhaps the most famed nitery in the world today.

It's the next best thing to being part of the parade; in some respects it's better—the price is right from the home looker's vantage point. From "The Stork Club" shows point, the late-evening Saturday night is the most natural slotting, not only as a means to insure a better cross-the-board timetabling, but certainly an improvement over the 7:30 p.m., as heretofore; when adult lookers were probably still wrestling with Junior whether some western varmint or Billingsley would have to bite the Nielsenrating dust.

Any attempt to televise a function in an outsized showshop such as Atlantic City's Convention Hall presents a lot of problems. It's especially true when the event is something of the calibre of the Miss America contest in which the most rewarding moments come with the facial closeups. There were a lot of problems in capturing a close view of the contestants; many of them indicated only an inkling of them indicated only an inkling of them indicated only an inkling of the beauty of these pigeons. Much of it was left to the imagination.

pigeons. Much of it was left to the imagination.

Generally, ABC-TV did a creditable job in televising this summer's end feature of the resort, and one of the most publicized gimmicks this town has. The most rewarding moments came at the end as the time to choose the winner approached. But perhaps the top bit of drama was contained at the backstage moment when the pageant's directress Lenora Slaughter informed Miss California that she was the winner by pinning the Miss America ribbon on her. For a long while the winner was pretty much of a mixed up kid and didn't regain her composure until a long-time afterward.

while the winner was pretty much of a mixed up kid and didn't regain her composure until a long-time afterward.

The description by John Daly and Bess Myerson, latter a Miss America of several years ago, constituted a well-constructed gab session that carried a lot of enlightenment. Miss Myerson, knowing the topes, spoke with authority and hemed to know what to look for. Another good item in the show ras the emceeing of Bob Russell, who has been conferenciering this pageant as well as the Miss Universe show for many years.

The teleshow moved in on Convention Hall as the talent eliminations were under way. It seems that beauty contests have changed considerably during the past two decades when the general run of Igentry looked down on girls who went in for these things. These days, the cameras and various speakers impressed, the girls must have more than looks. The finalists were all college girls, they all had to have talent in some direction, and all had to be able to speak extemporaneously. The major award is college scholarships.

During the talent exhibits, Daly and Miss Myerson trotted out film clips of the other events in the week-long pageant including the float parade in the rain. The finale with interviews was well conducted. The initial try resulted in a fairly good show. Philloo, sponsoring the tele pickup, got good display space in several directions not only with Jay Jackson's commercials, but with the presentation of a telested to the new Miss America.

Per tradition, fall curtainraiser was a lively action-packed 60 minutes whipped along smartly by major domo Kirchner. Miss Hartline, with seemingly one of the snap jobs in tv, batoned the Bruce Chase ABC band through a couple of fast tunes for a bit of cheeseake window dressing that's become a "Circus" trademark. Clowns Cliff Soubier, Nicky Francis and Sandy Dobritch threw in the comic highlinks with plenty of gusty slapstick.

Visiting acts had lots of kid appeal. Beebe's Hollywood Bears, featuring a singing animal that played to big laughs, had the studio youngsters in a tizzy. Los Robertos, juggling duo, opened the proceedings in flashy style. Middlespot was filled by the Great Conrad, escape artist, for okay impact and the roller skating Roulettes closed with a bangup set of spins and tosses.

Rettig, who though a moppet has probably more vidpix work under his belt than most Hollywood stars, handles his role with poise and naturalness. He's an appealing little chap and that's a big help when the action's at a minimum and mawkishness at its acme. Jan Clayton is attractive and sympathetic as his widowed mother and George Cleveland pleasantly hearty as his grandfather. And of course the dog is a beauty that goes through its on-camera paces without a hitch. Leslie Goodwin's direction failed to speed up the slow script, but camerawork and other production details were good.

Sockages is one of the most impressive in the business, in terms of number of shows, length of time on the air and an always solid sponsorship picture. "The Big Story" is as good an indication of why this is true than any other—it's commercial from the ground up and it's produced in a thoroughly professional manner, and that's all a sponsor or network can ask. And proof of the pudding lies in the fact that it's consistently pulled down, strong ratings in its Friday at 9 spot.

Series, based on stories or campaigns by newspapers and newspapermen, starts in an aura of realism right off the bat via that "true happening" appellation. Opening show of the season trimmings give it that sense of the real and the immediate that makes for forceful drama.

Opening show of the season more than lived up to the standard. Story concerned a Denver Post newspaperman's campaign to rid Colorado of slot machines and the criminal element that was running them. Wesley Addy, playing the newsman, digs up information that the apparently respectable brothers running the slots (and holding membership in the best Denver clubs and recognized as sturdy citizens) are really gangsters from way back, with long records and a penchant for expanding their horizons from just slots to other rackets. Bucking public and official apathy, he succeeds in a campaign that eventually rids the state of the slots and winds the brothers up in jail in income tax and jury tampering raps.

Addy played the newspaperman forcefully, and Paul Huber and Vince Kellogg were properly menacing as the hoods. Ray Bramley, Jeffrey Bryant, Jack Davis, Gene Leonard and Robert Hull rounded out a good cast.

Key element in the Everett Rosenthal production is that live-and-film technique, and an effective one it S. A Procketer crew shoots lots of outdoor footage, and it's smoothly and realistically interpolated into the live scenes. Footage is good, and the transposition into the live program goes without a hitch and lends lots of dimension to the show. Another plus is Vladimir Selinsky's music. All told, a thoroughly professional job. Chan.

Since the network's researchers last season came up with the conclusion that the then resident "Life With Father" wasn't doing too well because Sunday at 7 has a large juve audience which didn't sufficiently appreciate the adult qualities of "Father," it's fair to assume that the "Lassie" slotting is a good one. It's the kind of series that should appeal to the kiddies.

Tom O'Neil's On-the-Air Bulllishness On Future of Four Radio Networks

Following through on the intratrade debate on network radio's future that was sparked two weeks

CBS prexy Frank Stanton, Mutual's prexy-board chairman Tom O'Neal took the issue into the publle domain this week via a network (Tues.). Sneaking on Mutual's airing of the matter last night
"State of the Nation," O'Neil was bullish on network radio's future, expressing his belief that four radio networks could and would survive.

But O'Neil's comments, optimistic as they were, fell far short of providing any solution for the multiplicity of problems hitting network radio today. His bullishness was based on his belief that radio networks are desirable and necessary, but he failed to provide concrete answers as to how the problems of declining billings, fewer advertisers, lower ratings and falling rate cards could be countered.

Instead he took a negative ap-

Instead he took a negative approach in declaring that networks are the most economic program service opposed to transcriptions, that a purely program service network setup working on a co-op basis wouldn't work because of the high costs and complicated operations involved, and that networks are necessary because the cost of maintaining lines for occasional special event and national emer-

Adenauer defined his meaning f sovereignity for western Gerann. It doesn't mean the German and the German He said the German heople no longer embraced a neutralist' attitude and that German membership in NATO was moortant. He also didn't see much loint in a Big Four conference at his time, Faced by a trio of trade reporters topped by the N. Y. Daily News' Ben Gross, O'Neil said that Mutual is planning fresh program-sales approaches as soon as it completes a new $100,000 study of listening and duying habits of the American audience. It's an out-of-home only survey, which may pinnoint the direction of Mutual's thinking for the future, O'Neil added that networks will survive, even if on an increditable basis, in order to provide program and sales services for their profitable odes stations.

O'Neil expressed a somewhat vide program and sales services for their profitable obe stations.

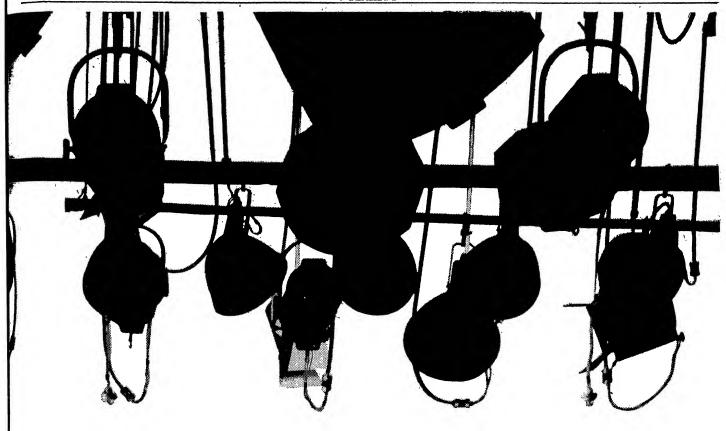

O'Nell expressed a somewhat downbeat attitude toward musicand-news programming by local stations. Asked by Gross why a station, when it can program community shows, recorded music and trenscribed syndicated shows with too names, should belong to a network. O'Neil answered that new and records weren't radio's exclusive propertion and therefore not an audience must, and that network programming was more economical to the stations than transcribed shows.

O'Neil said "we would be playing the ostrich" if broadcasters didn't recordize to inroads on listening habits, but he pointed out that while average per-home per-day listening has declined in the last 10 years by 35%, the number of radio homes have increased by 50%. And auto sets have increased since 1943 from 9.000.000 to 28.000.000 sets. The "character of listening has changed." he said, "and so must the character of programming." But he failed to secify list what changes should be made.

Newsmen falled to ask O'Neil about decil ing network revenues and about rate card cuts. Panel comprised Gross, Broedcasting-Telecasting's Rufus Crater and Ad Ade's John Crichton.

ırns on its power

To an advertiser this must surely seem the most rewarding and exciting season in television's history.

This year for the first time Publishers Information Bureau reports a television network rolling up the largest seven-month total of advertising revenue of any network, magazine or newspaper—over $77 million.

This year television is exploiting all of its complex skills, to make it an even greater catapult to sales.

This year, for example, every television network is exerting its all-out effort to bring the richest possible variety of entertainment to its audience.

Take tonight. On CBS Television you find the first of a brilliant new series entitled "The Best of Broadway," originating from its new modern Color Studio 72.

Tonight's broadcast stars Helen Hayes, Claudette Colbert, Fredric March and Charles Coburn in "The Royal Family" — four Academy Award winners in a single play.

You also find Arthur Godfrey, one of the cornerstones that form the solid foundation of the CBS Television program schedule—a schedule designed to provide lasting entertainment value and lowest cost-per-thousand.

It is this basic design which gives the real clue to why advertisers today are committing more of their investment to CBS Television than to any other single medium.

Except for sound effects and a voiced punchline, Vick Chemical Co.'s spot commercial will be in the sphinx class in which the story of the product (VapoRub) is told entirely in cartoon pantomime. Chemical outfit launches it today (Wed.) on WCBS-TV, N. 'Y., and later in 39 other markets. Sound effects include such old reliables as (1) gentle snoring by a father who's awakened by his child's (2) coughing; then the old boy's (3) footsteps on the bare floor; his (4) yawning; (5) a side whistle sound as product zooms into th picture, and (6), the little girl sniffing vapor, with resultant (7) easier breathing. WABC, the ABC Radio flagship in New York, will return to an allnight schedule next week after being dark since the Birdland remote show switched to WINS. Station has slotted deejay Gene Stuart a midnight-to-5:45 a.m. "Club 770" format.
Show will feature pops, lusher music, a segment on a particular performer, a segment on performers playing around N.Y. and a final segment with disks chosen by various performers. He'll be followed on the station by Marion Colby in a 5:45-6:30 a.m. segment. Stuart starts Tuesday (21) ayem.

Broadcast Music Inc. will schedule 47 radio program clinics i 1955, beginning Feb. 21. At that date, according to BMI station relations v.p. Glenn Dolberg, two teams will begin traveling simultaneously to separate parts of the country so that 39 clinics will be completed by April 22. Remaining eight will be held in June. Schedule was completed earlier than usual so that state broadcasters associations can plan their annual meetings around the program clinics. Schedule kicks off Feb. 21 with meetings at Vancouver and in Arkansas, closing April 22 in Amherst, N.B. June meets will open June 6 in Winnipeg and close June 17 in Minnesota.

NBC-CBS Press

Oppenhelm's appointment has some intriguing overtones. For more than two years he's been administrative manager of advertising and sales promotion for the radio web, so the new berth finds him switching to tv and in a publicity capacity, although he goes back about 15 years as a flack, having headed up that department for WINS and WOR in N. Y. (He Joined CBS in 1948 and a year after that was tapped as director of program promotion.) The trade press end of press info tv remains status quo via the veteran Jim Kane, and the radio side is ditto with George Crandall the PI chief and Harry Feeney the No. 1 tradester.

NBC's press shift is perhaps less drastic. Two main points are in-exploitation, becomes Oppenheim's No. 1 man (just as Perles was Jacobson's chief aide and worked in an adjoi ing office at 485 Madison headquarters (whereas rest of publicity staff operates out of "leftfield" 57th Street). In status quo are Jack Goldstein (exploitation) and Dorothy Leffler (magazines).

VARIETY - ARB City-By-City Syndicated and National Spot Film Chart

VARIETY'S weekly chart of city-by-city ratings of syndicated and national spot film covers 40 to 60 cities reported by American Research Bureau on a monthly basis. Cities will be rotated each week, with the 10 top-rated film shows listed in each case, and their competition shown opposite. All ratings are furnished by ARB, based on the latest reports.

This VARIETY chart represents a gathering of all pertinent information about film in each market, which can be used by distributors, agencies, stations and clients as an aid in determining the effectiveness of a filmed show in the specific market. Attention should be paid to time—day and time factors, since sets-in-use and audience composition vary according to time slot, i.e., a Saturday afternoon children's show, with a low rating, may have a large share and an audience composed largely of children, with corresponding results for the sponsor aiming at the children's market. Abbreviations and symbols are as follows: (Adv.), adventure; (Ch), children's; (Co), comedy; (Dr), drama; (Doc), documentary; (Mus), musical; (Myst), mystery; (Q), quis; (Sp), sports; (W), western; (Wom), women's. Numbered symbols next to station call letters represent the station's channel; all channels above 13 are UHF. Those ad agencies listed as distributors rep the national spot sponsor for whom the film is aired.

VIDPIX OUT-SYNDICATING ITSELF?

Like Two Different Series

Change of cast in Gross-Krasne's "Big Town" vidpixers for Lever ros., with Mark Stevens and Trudy Wroe replacing Pat McVey and Jane Nigh when the series moves over to NBC-TV this fall, has its interesting angles in the syndication field. Switch comes as a welcome one to exces of United Television Programs, the Gross-Krasne distribution outfit which among many other properties handles the "Big Town" reruns under the title of "Heart of the City."

the City."

Cast change eliminates one of the biggest deterrents to sales on the series that's faced the UTP hucksters—namely, selling against their own show. When pitching the reruns to stations and sponsors, they always faced the comment that the same show was playing on CBS (although the reruns came about six months after the network run). Now, since no deal has been set for rerunning the Stevens-Miss Wroe starrers and even when one is the films won't hit the market for at least a year, the UTP boys have clear sailing ahead. They can pitch the reruns on the basis that a completely different "Big Town" is playing the net, and so far as the station and public are concerned, it's like two different series.

Funt's $2,225,000 'Candid' Gross In 5 Years (Oh Those Residuals!)

Virtually unlimited areas of residual values and the long staying-power of some vidpix series are pointed up in the recent sale by Alan Funt of his "Candid Camera" series to Ellot Hyman's Associated Artists vidpix distribution untift. Deal was an outright sale of 89 films, on a capital gains basis, with Funt relinquishing all tv. rights to the name and series and enioned from future production basis with Hyman.

Fact , though, that together with the sale to Hyman, Funt has grossed over $2,225,000 on the films and associated properties over the past five years. That in spite of the widespread exposure of the films over this period, Associated Artists should buy them at his time in an outright deal for future syndication is an indication of the lengths to which residuals can be employed.

Actually, while the films have received multiple exposure, this an be employed.

Actually, while the films have received multiple exposure, this has been confined to only two-thirds of the country. Series started on tele in 1949, with a 13-week run on ABC-TV, thereafter moving over to NBC for another 13 weeks. It was during 1950 and 1951, when Philip Morris sponsored the series on CBS-TV for 65 weeks, that most of the films were made. Subsequent to that, Funt himself sold the series regionally, with Pfeiffer Breweries taking 11 markets in the midwest and Ruppert Breweries picking up five (including N. Y.) in the set, Regionals, which ran for some

Vitapix Network Snagged on Preem

Vitapix's plan for a film net-work initiated via a national deal on Hal Roach Jr.'s Pat O'Brien starrer, "Parole Chief," may have on hat koach Jr.'s Pat O'Brien starrer, "Parole Chief," may have to wait till the first of the year for fruition. Station-owned distrib outfil, while, having secured prime clearances from its key member-stations and other outlets, still has not firmed a sponsorship deal, and is now discussing a January start ith some bankrollers.

Possibility of a fall preem hasn't been ruled out, according to Vitapix national sales v.p. Ned Koenig. But the firm has a tough deadline to meet, in that only a pilot has been filmed and it would take upwards of four weeks after a deal was signed to get the show on the air. In view of this, Koenig, while still dickering a fall deal, has begun talks with sponsors interested in a January start.

One reason for the holdup was the rush of summertime activity on the Roach lot, with the result that the pilot print, scheduled to reach N.Y. on June 15, didn't arrive until Aug. 5. Since that time, Koenig has been screening it, but with no success to date. Under Vitapix's projected deal, the vidpix outfit would supply: a lineup of prime stations with time already cleared for the aponsor.

EXCEEDS DEMAND

Tremendous expansion in the distribution of telepix over the past year is giving rise to fears by already established syndicators that the entire industry is hitting a pace of over-expansion far exceeding the needs of stations and sponsors. That the industry is in a pricecutting dogight that's not even approached in severity by anything in telecasting history is no secret, and the distribs themselves agree that the cause is a simple case of supply far exceeding the demand.

Yet the industry continues to

Yet the industry continues to add new giant distribution outfits and the flow of syndicated product is gaining in acceleration. Latest of string of strongly-financed newcomers is Affiliated Artists, the Eliot Hyman outfit which set up shop three weeks ago. Preceding them was another outgrowth of the old Motion Pictures for Television combine, Flamingo Films, which also reactivated itself. Another was National Telefilm Associates, which also reactivated itself, Another was National Telefilm Associates, which also reactivated itself, Another was National Telefilm Associates, which at the beginning of the year took over the Prockter Syndication International catalog and added product of its own.

Others which have formed over syndication International catalog and added product of its own.

Others which have formed over the past year include Television Programs of America, the Edward Small-Milton Gordon-Michael Sill-erman combine which this week is celebrating its first anni, Vitapix Corp. was organized on a station-stockholder basis about this time last year, and so was ABC Syndication with George Shupert at its head. MPTV, long a feature film operation, set up its syndication arm last fall Hollywood Television Service, the Republic Pictures subsid, started its syndication operation after a couple of years in the feature business. Charles Amory tied in, with a couple of theatrical commercial sales groups to peddle his new Minot: TV catalog.

Nor has the supply of product been drained by the expansion of distributor outlets. Flamingo not only took over the "Cowboy G-Men" series from the folded United Artists Television, but added the distributor-less "International "Police." picked up "Beulah", and "Jewelers' Showcase" reruns and "leased a new quarter-hour series. Associated Artists picked up the "Candid Camera" series and next year's "Douglas Fairbanks Presents" in addition to a lot of feature product. Example of how a new distribution setup can actually increase the amount of product is furnished by NTA, which when it built a sales force started to peddie several shows produced previously by prexy Ely Landan but unit il then confined to the confined to a few viting the confined to the confined to a few viting the confined to the confined to a few viting the confined to the confined to a few viting the confined to the confin die several shows produced previ-ously by prexy Ely Landau but un-til then confined to a few situa-tions. This, of course, is to say nothing of the sharp upbeat in new product.

These factors, combined with an increase in network time to the exclusion of local programming, have combined to cause the price-cutting war. That stream of product continues with little chance of abatement, and there's no immediate prospect of an increase in demand by stations. The only hope of distribs, of whom very few are operating in the black, is that the UHF problem will be licked and a good number of independent stations will go into operation in the key markets, These, without network affiliations, would provide an ample market for all of vidpix's product. But some distribs say this will have to happen soon, before they're out of business.

McCadden had, until this season, confined itself to the telefilming of the Burns and Allen series, but Burns decided to branch out, and the company is now lensing "That's My Boy" for CBS-TV; shooting and bankrolling the Robert Cummings show; gunning four Jack Benny films, a pilot on CBS "Professional Father," has an upcoming "Craig Rice" series, and is continually shooting numerous tale-blurbs.

Burns explained that with ty pi becoming so competitive, it brings the production cost factor down to shoot multiple series. He added, with prices going through the roof, the only way you can cut down on price and give the sponsor a break is to have more than one show. This cuts office and production expense, a must with the business, so competitive. It's tough to keep a crew if you only have one series unless you pay them way overscale.

B&A shown cost $4,500 more week this year due to upped production costs, but Burns is putting the coin in, figuring it will pay off eventually on reruns. "I don't think residuals will be as great as everyone thinks, because there will be so much merchandise around in two of three years," added Burns, starting his third year under the sponosrship of Carnation Milk and B. Because he feels it's important to continually improve the B&A format, Burns now uses 15 sets inside plus outside sets whereas the show had only four sets when it went to film. Where they would use only four supporting players, the figure now ranges up to 20 per show.

General Service Studios Never Had It So Good—Even at Peak '46

General Service studios is operating at 100% capacity for the first time since the peak pix production of 1946, all its stages occupied with telefilm companies.

Studio owner Jim Nasser said he anticipates biz will far exceed the best years of pix production, and consequently three more stages are being blueprinted to bring the total up to 11. There will be no easing up of the current space squeeze at the Las Palmas lot until December, when Donald O'Connor will have filmed all his tv shows, and the "Lone Ranger" will wind. Because of the tight space situation, studio owners are increasingly hesitant about taking deals with anyone unless they have a firm production contract for at least 39 shows, Nasser commented.

Official's, a four and one-half minute trailer, comprises some dozen stars from the series each introing their story and telling a little about it. Among the stars in the film are David Niven, Brian Aherne, Edmund Gwenn, Teresa Wright, Angela Lansbury, Edmond O'Brien, Thomas Mitchell, Judith Anderson, Frank Lovejoy and Alexis Smith. Reason Official was able to bring the trailer out at such low cost is the fact that on the show itself the stars intro the stories for their particular episode. Official had Four Star Productions merely splice together each of the introductory clips from individual episodes.

He does not want a live audience, however, theorizing without it "you get better photography, and there is less distraction." "It's very hard to lay an egg when you don't shoot it in front of an audience. As it is, if there are any bad jokes, we can take them out." Despite his preference for film, Burns feels comedians such as Milburns feels and Jackie Gleason are best on live tv because their presentation is that of a vaude show, and they wouldn't gai via film: "On shows like theirs it doesn't matter too much if an actor blows his lines—it gives you that feeling of live tv. But on a situation comedy show like ours, it would be murderous. It's a luxury to be able to slice a couple of minutes of bad jokes, as you can on film; if the same thing happens on live, you're dead," he said.

Yet, at a production cost of well under $500,000 and in limited areas, it's already brought back that $2,225,000 in gross revenue. This figure, besides the coin from the Associated deal, includes revenues from the 28 theatrical shorts made for Columbia Pictures, three record albums, a book, the eight industrial films made and revenue from the radio "Candid Microphone," which although it preceded the telepix didn't go commercial until after the vidpix were on the air. And that Hyman, one of the vidpix veterans, believes that the films will continue to sell as syndicated properties, is obvious from the fact that he bought them.

More British Pix For U.S. TV Marts

That flow of feature film product Isn't completely stopped, not with English pictures still being made available for television on a sporadic basis. Latest package to hit the video rounds is a group of 18 British films acquired last week by Arthur Kerman's Governor Television Attractions, which will distribute the pix on a firstrun basis throughout the country. Films, ranging in age from three to 16 years, were acquired from Timely Pictures on the Coast by way of the Moe Kerman-Joe Felder Monarch Pictures combine. They've never been shown in the U. S. on television. Two best-known pix in the group are the 1940 Edmund Gwen-Gordon Harker starrer, "Condemned to Death," and the J. B. BOMC's Music Innovation

Book-of-the-Month Club has launched an interesting and what may become a profitable sideline with its new adjunct: Music Appreciation Records. Following its successful method of hook distribution, the firm is sending out to subscribers an LP every month, of two types—a 12-inch disk, at $3.60, with a performance on one side and an analysis on the other, and a 10-inch platter, at $2.40, giving the analysis only. Monthly announcements will be written by Deems Taylor. Original plan for music education shapes up as a smart one, Initial demonstration issue, last weekend, comprised Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, played briskly and surely on one side by the London Symphony Orchestra under baton of Norman Del Mar. On the reverse is an analysis of the same work, with Thomas Scherman (MAR's musical director) as narrator. Scherman, son of the BOMC founder and a conductor in his own right with the Little Orchestra Society, uses the MAR orch to play the work, in bits, themes, whole sections, while he discourses on the work, explaining its significances, the themes, the developments, etc.

Exposition is simple, clear and interesting, as well as valuable and educational. This is a valuable project, for adults as well as young, and an excellent promoter of the cause of good music.

Berlioz: Damnation of Faust (RCA Victor, 3 LP; $17.85. Rarely-done choral-symph work is a prodigious, graphic musical narrative, Here it gets highgrade fullscale treatment from the Boston Symph under Charles Munch, with solopits and choruses in support. David Poleri, sometimes too metallic, is otherwise fine as Faust.

Beethoven: Symphony No. 3 (Decca; $5.85). Brisk, forthright reading of the "Eroica" by Leonard Bernstein and Stadium Concerts Orch, that exudes vitality and strength.

Many Platteries Adopting RCA's New SMALL COMBOS BMI Nears Reciprocal Deal With 'Gruve Gard'; Longer Life to Disks

New design by RCA Victor to give longer life to disks is getting favorable reaction from most of the other major diskers and will probably be adopted by them shortly. Design, called "Gruve Gard," calls for a raised label surface and outer rim to prevent contact between the playing on automatic phonograph and to prevent damage to sensitive grooves when disks are removed from envelopes. Manie Sacks, RCA veepee over the disk division, offered the design to the other companies to make it an other colonial and national the other companies to make it an industrywide move.

Engineers of Decca, Capitol and MGM have already contacted Victor for the details and engineering specifications; and will likely adopt the "Gruve Eard." Columbia Records' execs said they were "carefully studying" the design but expressed no enthusiasm about it. Victor, meantime, is making it available to indie labels, for which it presses through its custom records division, at no extra manufacturing cost.

John A. Griffin, exec secretary of John A. Griffin, exec secretary of the Record Industry Assn. of America, stated: "The management of RCA Victor should certainly be congratulated on the accomplishments of its engineering department in developing a practical means for protecting the delicate playing surfaces of longplaying records. Of equal and most significant importance is the decision of RCA Victor to make this engineering advance available for use by all other record manufacturers on a royaltyvance available for use by all other record manufacturers on a royalty-free basis. This fair and farsighted decision on the part of RCA. Victor is a most conspicuous example of effective cooperation on the part of a leading member of our organization."

Frisco Outlet Squawks Over Disk Name Tracks Plugging Rival Station

San Francisco, Sept. 14.
Letters to all major record companies drawing their attention to the fact that record artists are making taped voice tracks plugging one Bay Area station, have been sent by Bob Hansen, program director of indie station KSFO, which is heavily programmed with recorded music KROW, Oakland indie has been featuring a series of voice tracks taped while record artists are in the Bay Area, plugging KROW.

Hansen pointed out this was "bad industry practice" and might spread to other areas. It also, Hansen says, raises the point of how much a station wants to plug the records of an artist who plugs another station and KSFO is keeping track of the most flagrant cases. "We are not doing this with the idea of boycotting any label or any artist," Hansen says. "We are pointing out what we feel is generally bad industry practice. It's a ques(Continued on page 44)

Paul Weston Cuts 15th Mood Music Set for Col

Hollywood, Sept. 14. Hollywood, Sept. 14.
Upcoming "Music for a Rainy Night" album is the 15th mood music package put out by Paul Weston, Columbia Records' Coast recording director. First few attempts in this direction were when Weston was with Capitol Records. The 14 already released have sold in excess of 1,000,000 copies.

However, Weston recalled today, in 1944, after the initial album, he and Cap execs had a lengthy huddle in an effort to determine whether the market would stand a second such package—and it was finally decided to take a chance.

"Distinguished Jewish names dot our colonial and national history—Joseph Buene, Sampson Simson, Haym Solomon, Benjamin Seixas, Commodore Uriah Levy, Col. Alfred Mordecai Jr., Emma Lazarus, Benjamin N. Cardoze, Bernard M. Baruch, Irving Berlin—to mention only a few."

'Stranger' Pic Sparks 4-Way Title Tangle

Dorinda Morgan has also written a tune with that title that Guild Music is publishing, while the Maguire Sisters have cut still another tune with that tag for Decco. Latter number was written by Linda Roberts and Lawrence Elow Sylvester Pindyck, representing the estate of the late Mort Thompson, author of the book, "Not as a Stranger," is planning to block further exploitation of the tunes on the grounds that it's damaging an important property right.

Unusual aspect of the title tangle is that the Kramer pic won't be ready for release for another six to eight months. It's only going into production next week.

MGM TO ISSUE 78 RPM ALBUM ON BRIGADOON

MGM Records is unique in the industry in not believing that 78 rpm albums are dead. Diskery is putting out the soundtrack album from the Metro pic, "Brigadoon," in 78 rpm form, along with longplay 33 and extended-play sets, because it finds that many hinterlanders are still using oldstyle machines.

MGM is currently rushing re-lease of the Alan Jay Lerner-Fred-erick Loewe score to the up with its preem at the Music Hall, N. Y., tomorrow (Thurs.).

REAP TOP COIN

Chicago, Sept. 14.

While steady work is only a sometimes thing for the majority of pop bands today, there's a segment of the orch industry that hasn't known tough times since 1939 and, what's more, is finding its sphere growing. Where polkas, schottiches, waltzes and the circle two-step still flourish, mostly in Germanic or Slavic farm towns, the Polka or Oldtime Bands thrive. A seven-day per week ithnerary is nothing unusual, nor is a yearly skein of 350 one-nighters for some of the bigger bass-horn bands. In fact, they lay off the other 15 days voluntarily, because they're tired. Harold Loeffelmacher and his Six Fat Dutchmen, one of the larger units, visited Chi last month to cut 10 sides in a session for RCA Victor. Group etches an average of 16 sides per year, more by far than the average pops orchestra, and has a virtually automatic age of 16 sides per year, more by far than the average pops orchestra, and has a virtually automatic sales run of 15,000 per disk. Of the other major oldtime bands, Whoopee John Wilfshrt slices for Decca, Frank Yankovic for Columbia, and Lawrence Duchow for his own label, Bob Wagner, who used to have a Columbia pact, now is on a smaller indie label as are most of the other polka bands.

Headquarters for the oldtime bands is New Ulm, Minn., a predominately German community whose AFM local lists 21 bands currently, 15 of which will and do travel. The ever-widening circle in which the bands tour includes Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Nebraska, Kanrow Wirespers in Mishiras Vilveria.

At the present time, the seniority payoff for writers can vary up or down, depending on longterm performance factors. The proponents of a revision want to establish a floor below which the seniority payoff cannot fall. Also proposed is a ceiling that would limit the seniority rating to a maximum figure.

Under ASCAP's distribution system, seniority accounts for 20% of the payoff, current performances for another 20%, a sustained performance average over five years for 30%, and an availability category, also linked to sustained performances, accounts for the final 30%.

ASCAP membership is generally in accord with the present payof plan and there have been few beefs in the last couple of years. The only irritant has been the semiority mechanism and it's expected that the current talks will ultimately lead to a solution. ly lead to a solution.

London, Sept. 14. Concluding a long series of ne gotiations, a reciprocal pact be-tween the British Performing Rights Society and Broadcast Music Inc. is expected to be inked in the next couple of weeks. BMI vice-prexy Robert J. Burton is due here for wrap-up talks during the next few days and he'll be joined by Jean Geiringer, head of BMI's foreign relations staff.

The pact would mean that English tunes, placed with U.S. pubs affiliated with BMI, can collect performance money throoh BMI. Likewise, BMI affiliates in the U.S. can collect from PRS under the reciprocal arranement. BMI already has deals with most of the other European licensing groups.

At one time, the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers had exclusive deals with European societies, but antitust consent decrees banned such pacts. Currently, ASCAP has only non-exclusive short-term deals with overseas licensing societies.

RCA Not Sitting Back On 'Fanny'; Preps Big Drive on Cast Album

RCA Victor, which has the cast RCA Victor, which has the cast album rights to the upcoming Broadway musical, "Fanny," is going all out in its promotion of the Harold Rome score. Diskery is rushing an Eddie Fisher slice of the title tune, "Fanny," with the aim of getting another "Wish You Were Here" hit, also by Fisher on a Rome title showtune. In addition, Dinah Shore and Tony Marti have been scheduled to cut singles from the Ezio Pinza-Walter Slezak starrer. Reason why Victorgot the cast set is that Pinza is pacted to the diskery.

Play, based on the Marcel Pagnol trilogy, is localed in Marseilles. Because of this, Rome had to give an international quality to the music and avoid any American slang or cliches in the lyrics. Rome said he was more concerned about writing a hit score, namely one that blended with the book, rather than a hit song. "A hit song," he said, "is so much gravy, but it's a mistake if you focus on it while doing a musical."

Rome underlined the differences in the songwriters and legit producers' status joday as contrasted to 1948 when Jack Kapp inaugurated original cast albums for Decca with his waxing of "Oklahoma." At that time, the producers were sold on the album's advertising value and so gave the albums rights away for nothing. Fact that the set subsequently sold over 1,000,000 copies means that the producers, the Theatre Guild, dropped about $500,000 at the present 10% royalty rate.

Rome hailed Karp as being a Rome underlined the differences

Rome hailed Kapp as being a genius for seeing the value of the original cast album idea, but the songwriter regretted that it wasn't thought of many years before. The performances of the 1920s and 'so, if they had been preserved on disks, would have made an invaluable addition to the show biz library, Rome stated.

These audiences, oldine band leaders point out, have a way of perpetuating themselves generation after generation as local cultures are kept intact despite changing times. A good indicationis the fact that the dances are mostly family affairs, where young and old alike know all the steps. Since the bands play many ball-themselves flexible.

In most cases, the bandleader does all his own booking which; more often than not, is accomplished merely by answering requests that come in the mail. This is painfully ironic today alongside the feverish toutings of one-night bookers for pop bands. An exception among oldtime units, the Frank Yankovic group is an MCA property, but this band probably of the New Ulm school.

Most of the bands have seven or eight pieces, though the Six Fat Dutchmen, which is one of the largest, carries eleven men despite their tag. Wilfahrt, Duchow, Yankovic, and the Fezz Fritsche Goosetown Band are also of larger dimension. Smaller units number among them Schell's Hobo Band, Clem Brau & His Jolly Lumberjacks, Cousin Fuzzy, Elmer Larson & His Northern Knights, Bob Wagner, Jolly Brewers, Don Frank & ner, Jolly Brewers, Don Frank & the Skinny Dutchmen, Slim Kalz, Ann's Accordion Band, Eddie Skeet's Band, and the Jerry Dostal Band.

Almost all have a big bass tuba in their instrumentation and most have accordions or concertinas. Clarinets and saxes predominate, and some units like the Dutchmen carry along a Hammond organ. The Dutchmen have been on ty in Omaha, Cedar Rapids, and Milwaukee and get regular cross-the-board 15-minute disk airings on radio station KFAB in Omaha.

It's not uncommon for the bands to rent halls and promote their own dances at various times in the year, especially when it's a matter of getting the gall of an unfriendly competitor who is playing the same town. Oldtime bands still resort to gimmicks like greased pig chases, free and hard-time dances, and festivals as competitive measures.

Death of Harry C. (Bud) Fisher on Sept. 7 recalls the affinity, i the heyday of the topical song, between the comic strips and poptunes. As a rule, the Alley cleffers were "inspired" to write a ditty commenting on the antics of some funny page character. But in at least one instance the name of an antique waltz song suggested the title of a still popular comic.

The comice as we know them to.

The comics, as we know them today, got under way in the late '90s with the late R. F. Outcault's long, defunct. "Yellow Kid" and Rudolph Dirks' still active "Captain and the Kids." They were followed by F.
Opper's. "Hauny Hooligan". Frank Schulte's "Foxy Grandpa," and James Swinnerton's still current "Little Jimmy," among many others still remembered. Fisher's saga of Augustus Mutt didn't get under way until 1907, and Little Jeff came along a couple of years later, resulting in the title being changed to "Mutt & Jeff."
Without extensive research, it

Without extensive research, it can be said that songs for descrip-tive instrumental numbers were tive instrumental numbers were written about most of the early comic characters. There was a "Happy Hooligan Two-Step" in the early 1900s and similar tribute was paid to Happy's saturnine brother Gus. "Foxy Grandpa's" mischievous achievements also were recognized, and more than one opus, now buried in obscurity hymned Buster Brown, his cousin, Mary Jane, and his dog, Tige. Around 1910, the title of a comedy number, "Let George Do It," was taken from a strip which George MacManus drew in the days before Jirgs and Maggie.

Irving Berlin's 1913 comedy suc-

Manus drew in the days before Jiggs and Maggie.

Irving Berlin's 1913 comedy success, "Snooky Ookums," may have had its name suggested by "Snookums," the Newlywed's baby in another MacManus comic, "Their Only Child," but that is merely a guess. Incidentally, wasn't the musical comedy, "The Newlyweds," based on the strip?

'Little Nemo," 'Abe Kabibble' Victor Herbert's light opera, "Little Nemo," took its title from the principal character in the late Winsor McKay's Sunday color page, "In the Land of Wonderful Dreams." This, perhaps, was the most ambitious musical production so far based on a comic page, with the exception of John Alden Carpenter's "Krazy Kat" hallet, which of course was inspired by George Herriman's whimsical drawings of Krazy, Ignatz the Mouse and Officer Pup. "Krazy Kat" has also been used as the title of compositions by Chauncey Morehouse & Frank Trumbauer and by Emil Velazco. Max Kortlander, Pete Wendling and Alfred Bryan wrote "Felix the Cat."

Songwriters' 100G Suit On Play's Title Use Of 'The Anniversary Waltz'

The Anniversary Waltz'

Songwriter Dave Franklin and Mrs. Helen Dubin, wildow of Al Dubin, are seeking $100,000 in damages from the producers of legit play, "The Anniversary Waltz." for using the song title without authorization. Filed in N. Y. Federal Court yesterday (Tues.), the suit named Bernard Hart and Joseph M. Hyman, producers of the play, as defendants along with Mayfair Music, publishesr of the tune, "Anniversary Waltz." Mayfair was named defendant because of its alleged failure to demand a license from the producers.

Capitol branch managers around the country will work with Kenton in locating newcomers who might fit into the plans to develop "SKP" as a jazz label completely apart from the pop field.

as a jazz label completely apart from the pop field.

Kenton emphasized that the "SKP" label will operate separately from Capitol's pop division and will concentrate solely on developing jazz and jazz musicians. Its operation could be compared to that of the classical wing of the plattery.

"This step toward a separate jazz label is typical of Capitol's progress since its development. I've maintained for some time that jazz is achieving its own position in our daily life and people are recognizing that it is our only native culture. We hope to help develop it and popularize it."

Jazz Festival treks northward after the San Diego date and one here the following night, for stands in San Francisco and Portland and then starts east. Kenton will emce as well as conduct his own 20-piece crew. In addition, he'll present such top jazz artists as Art Tatum, Shorty Rogers and his Giants featuring Shelley Manne, the Charlle Ventura Combo, occalist Mary Ana McCall, guitarist Johnny Smith and bongo player Candido.

Inside Stuff—Music

Don Cornell's latest release, "Hold My Hand," is currently breaking away as the fastest hit in Coral Records history. Time was originally released two months ago but has taken off as a result of its showcasing in the RKO pic, "Susan Slept Here." Sales of the tune have been hypoed strongly by the film's playdates. Cornell is currently touring in a package show with The Gaylords and Jerry Fielding's orch which is being booked through the Associated Booking Corp. (not General Artists Corp., as erratumed last week.)

An anonymous but apparently Constant Reader calls VARIETY's attention to the Decca double-truck ad i the special Sept. 1 section commemorating that company's 20th anniversary. Signing him(her)self as "a loyal Garland fan," the letter wants to know, "Where is Miss Judy Garland's picture? Who could have slipped up on not having one of the greatest stars in show biz represented in their ad?"
Obvious trade answer is that Miss Garland has since shifted to Columbia which is bringing out "A Star Is Born" (WB) in album form.

Ad agency St. Georges & Keyes spotlights the coincidence of Edwin H. Morris & Co.'s "Give Music For Xmas" campaign with their client's upcoming slick mag ad campaign, "Give Them Muzak For Christmas." Muzak's veep Ed Hochhauser had approved the campaign two months ago, and St. Georges & Keyes' account executive, J. C. A number, "Bernie's Tune," is causing a bit of confusion. Author is listed on the RCA Victor mambo slice by Tony Martinez's Quintet as Bernie Miller, but latter is no relation to Victor's pop promotion manager who spells his name the same way. At the same time, London Records has released "Bernie's Tune" with the British Ted Heath band. That tune was cleffed by Gerry Mulligan, jazz combo leader who just finished a run at Basin Street, N.Y.

Louis Braille Institute For The Blind is issuing specially-made disks with spoken commentaries. Dr. Sigmund Spaeth will do the spoken "liner notes" for the longhair releases. Remington Records is handling the project for the Institute. Disks will be distributed cuffo when funds are available. Otherwise, they will cost about $2.50 each for a 12-inch platter.

Indie Diskery Buys 18 Laughton Readings

Hollywood, Sept. 14.
A new series of Charles Laughton reading records will be placed on sale in time for Christmas business under a deal completed here by Marc Frederic's TeeVee Company. Disks will be issued under the Tempo label.

Frederic purchased a total of 18 soundtracks from Laughton vidpix and has edited them down for album purposes. Soundtracks, none of which came from telepix sold around the country, ran about 12½ minutes each. They feature Laughton in a variety of readings from the classics and from the Bible. Understood Frederic pald a flat $12,000 to Paul Gregory Associates which produced the original telefilms.

Tatle will be determined this week, but the disks probably will be released under the tag "This Is Charles Laughton."

Decision had been made to close the house to stageshows because of the AFM squabble with the American Guild of Variety Artists in which the musicians wouldn't play for AGVA acts. Murray Little, house manager, subsequently appealed to the Board.
Former Casino contracts with AFM ended Labor Day, with all new AFM contracts theneforth stipulating that musicians would not be required to play for AGVA acts, but permitting the Casino pit band to play for Casino acts under the former contract expiring Labor Day. Under the present AFM arrangement, this would permit the Casino to play Canadian vaude acts only; but Little insists that these wouldn't carry his house a fortnight. They claimed that some of the showgirls "took off practically everything"—a wistful exaggeration—but didn't mention the one act which wasn't mild for a midway, the two-headed, man-woman, dance-and-seduction scene done by one very sexy anonymous girl, who never crashed the news stories at all. Miss Lee, "the Bazoom Girl," got all the play, including her picture and measurements.

Following day, after a brainwave on someone's part, the Tonoto Star, largest daily in Canada, ran a clever page one interview with Miss Lee, by vet. feature writer James Y. Nicol. He, quoted her as saying she'd paid a morning visit to the CNE art gallery and been shocked to find paintings of girls wearing far less than she, in fact in some cases nothing whatever.
"I'm an amateur artist myself," she added, "but I paint landscapes, never nudes!"

Of course, the generally cool weather that prevailed in New York helped the total trade considerably. It's seen that much of the business that might have gone to resorts went into New York. The Catskill mountain area had a fairly bad season this year, and the Adirondack and Pocono Mountain spots were also hit, although not as badly as the Borscht Belt However, the Times Square area men feel that the Festival promotion was the telling factor in getting more tourism, and with it, upped takes into New York.

ATLANTA JUDGE OPENS WAR VS. DRINK SPOTS

Atlanta, Sept. 14.

A couple of months ago Fulton Superior Court Judge George P. Whitman teed off against slot machines in his charge to the July-August grand jury. Net result was that every one-armed bandit in Atlanta and Fulton County went out of business. Same jurist last week, in charging September-October grand jury, took dead aim at Atlanta's dining and night spots which serve mixed drinks under city's $1,000 pouring license for alcoholic beverages. Judge Whitman said the license cannot be justified by law.

If this grand jury heeds Judge Whitman's instructions like the previous one did about the slot machines, mixed drinks will soon become a thing of the past in Atlanta and dine-dance spots are going to suffer a gevere body blow. Especially those that offer entertainment along with the food and drink they serve. Food, itself, won't pay the freight.

N. Y. Cafe Biz Outlook Solid

With Labor Day and Edna out of the way, nitery business in New York is on an upbeat. Takes are being aided considerably by a vanguard of visitors who have come to New York for the Marciano-Charles fight tonight (Wed.) at the Yankee Stadium. Hotels have started filling up and a lot of visitors are hitting the niteries to contribute to the general increase in business.

The fight crowds are expected to remain around New York for a day or so after the fracas and so an increase in nocturnal takes is seen. Fight fans started coming in at the beginning of the week right after Edna passed through.

On the other hand, Saturday's hurricane didn't diminish nitery hurricane didn't diminish nitery grosses appreciably. There was boxofice magic in Alexander's billing, "The Man Who Knows." Mystic Clayton used it too and so, for a while, did Blackstone, the magician. Madame Ellis, not to be outdone, called herself "The Woman Who Knows."

The see-all, tell-all troupers were surefire attractions in those days. Anna Eva Fay, her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Eva Fay, Leona LaMarr and Alla Axiom (who left the Clayton show to go on his own) shared in the bonanza, but none reaped a richer harvest than Alexander.

Overwork and the strain of round the clock activities caught up with Alexander in late 1919. His physicians ordered him to his home in Los Angeles for a rest, but he was soon on the road again with a raft of new wonders he had dreamed up in his "rest" period.

During his engagement in Atlanta in 1930, his question-and-answer column in a local paper drew 25.
000 queries. On stage, at the Atlanta Theatre he created a sensation when one of the fathers in a "mixed baby" incident at the Grady Hospital asked if his child had died, or if the other infant was his offspring. Alexander answered immediately that there had been no switching of infants and that the baby which had died had been the man's child. There was much local conjecture as to the scientific basis for "The Man Who Knows" answer and it was rumored that Alexander would be hauled into court to testify when the case was tried.

A year later Alexander, at least momentarily, lost contact with his secret sources of advance information. He was not on hand to save his settings and equipment when the Burtis Theatre burned in Davenport, Iowa. His loss was estimated at $20,000.

Fortunately for those interested in mentalists and their methods Alexander wrote extensively on the subject. Hi "The Life and Mysteries of the Celebrated Dr. 'Q'' was published in 1921. Several years ago Bob Nelson, of Nelson Enterprises, Columbus, O., purchased Alexander', stage fects, paper and the rights to his publications. Nelson estimates that Alexander accumulated more than $1.000,000 during his career as "The Man Who Know."

Spanish-Speaking Cugat Unit of 45 Wows Italo Customers at $5 Top

Rome, Sept. 7.

They loved Xavier Cugat Rome and paid up to 3,125 lire (about $5) for down-front seats in the Teatro Palazzo Sistina. Which is a lot, but a lot, of money in Italy. Curiously enough the near-capacity house was almost 100% Italian, very few American tourists being in evidence, though the town was jumping with them. A possible explanation is that the attraction was promoted mostly by three-sheets and not in the tourist media. Thus the Cugat unit stood entirely on its international-appeal talent, solid underpinning. It was a melange of Mexican, Cuban, Filipino, general Latino and whirlwind Harlem items. The show was fast, exciting and vastly likeable. The Romans were all thumbs-up, Everything went. in evidence, though the town was

While the Cugat brand of showmanship is familiar in the States, it is arresting to view it as an "port" commodity. Cugat is trouping some 45 people, a considerable feat in foreign currency to start with. Playing the class Sistina (all seats foamrubber) for five nights, Cugat was dishing Spanish lingo in an Italian city (and getting giggles with his effortless ingratiation). What emerged in the end was not only an awareness of the hard-hitting, constantly upbeat performance of the Cugat performers with their roof-raising "drive" (and rehearsed-to-every - smallest - detail), but the American show biz observer came away with a new respect While the Cugat brand of show-but the American show biz observer came away with a new respect for sheer live vaudeville as a package with a world market. Language is no barrier here. Cugat can literally play anywhere.

All of the individual specialists generate so much light and warmth that the performance which began at 9:45 and ended at midnight (you don't have to worry about stagehands in Rome) was literally, a succession of wows. These are cleverly dovetailed for maximum impact.

WHEN IN BOSTON It's the HOTEL AVERY scene in a stunning gown and the Italians gave every audible testimony a she-entertainer could wish that they were with her, in the order of Italian importance, as (1) a lovely bundle, and (2) an entertainer with lots of animation. Juan Mendel, who sings with a Latin schmaltz, even included an Italian aria without hazard (although it might be riskier in operatic Milano). He was an authentic whammo. So, too, was the Mexican virtuoso of the trumpet, Rafael Mendez. The Italian audience greeted with anticipatory gleefulness the four Step Bros. Negro talent is very popular in Europe and this act has all the vitality, bounce, humor and hoofing needed to clean up. Especially beguling to the Romans was the Harlem use of the Italian idiom.

The maestro takes the spotlight at one point for a fiddle display and rates a personal hit. Cugat gets quite a few chuckles now and again with his studied underplaying. Very diverting is his husbandly deadpan while Abbe Lane is cavorting in her sexiest heatwave style. This was distinctly superior pantomime with Latin innuendo that the Romans appreciated.

British Act Charges Hamid Stranded 'Em In U. S.. Consul Investigates

George A. Hamid has become the centre of an international incident. The British consul in New York has been investigating the status of the contract between the Hamid office and the Jerry Builders, a British act, and the Variety Artists Federation is expected to act on the basis of the report handed them by the consulate. If negative action is taken, VAF members would be forbidden to work for Hamid, would be forbidden to work for Hamid.

Act claimed it had been stranded by Hamid, who reportedly had given them a contract for 10 weeks work to be played out in 12 weeks. After three weeks the turn was given walking papers at a time when it claimed it had no money to return to the mother-country. The Jerry Builders appealed to the American Guild of Varlety Artists, but since the act hadn't joined that union when working here case was referred to the British consulate which advanced them passage back to England. Act comprised of two men who came from England and another performer, Harry Santos, who combined with them in the U.S. at the request of the Hamid office.

According to correspondence the act hadn't come up to expectations and Hamid kept them on for three weeks in an effort to permit them to improve the act. Hamid acted as producer of the show on which the Jerry Builders were touring, with Solti & Grund agenting on behalf of Hamid.
Act claims it's owed $4,550 representing the unworked balance of the contract.

In many instances it has been among the leaders in volume sales of all securities listed on the hig board.

The stock dealers say they haven't heard any complaints concerning the Skouras management. However, they add, possibly open to investor criticism is the theatre corporation's restrictions on dividends. A condition of bank-loan agreements is that the circuit can pay out in one year divises of only up to 50% of the previous year's earnings. NT is sufficiently wellheeled to set up new financing that wouldn't curb the stockholder benefits, it's felt.

"instead of lissuing statements back and forth, we'll have meetings with O'Brien and other British labor leaders. We'll talk about the problems before they become aggravated," Walsh said. Walsh emphasized that the IA hadn't changed its idea on the subject of foreign production and was still opposed to producers who went abroad simply to make "cheap" pictures. "We realize that the film business is international one and that some foreign production is necessary." he said. However, he made a point in castigating producers of vidpix commercials who employed foreign-made films to sell American products to the American public. "We'll continue to fight this type of production vigorously." he declared.

Walsh leaves for the Coast Sunday (14) for confabs with the AFL Film Council "to clear up some things" pertaining to O'Brien's visit. He'll remain on the Coast to attend the AFL convention which starts Sept. 20.

While friendly relations have been established with the British units. Walsh noted that no specific details had been worked out. He also emphasized that foreign production did not only involve England but also other countries. "We have surveyed other countries," he said, "and have been wondering how we can work things out. If unions in other foreign countries were in the same strong position as the British unions; we might be able to work with them. If not, we may have to go to a Government agency."

we may have to go to a Government agency."
Suppose, Walsh was asked, the foreign unions were dominated by Communists? "If they're dominated by Communists, we won't get into it," he stressed. "We don't have any truck with them here, and we don't want to get involved with them abroad." He admitted that the IA faced many difficulties in dealing with foreign unions and that no conclusions had been reached on just how things could be worked out. "Their union rates might be cheap by our standards," he said, "and they might resent us telling them not to handle the pictures of U. S. producers." The job, he said, would be to convince the American producers not to go abroad when absolutely unnecessary.

Walsh said that there had been some communication between the Hollywood AFL film council and the AFL rep in Rome and the Italian labor unions. He said there were two factions in the Italian labor movement and although the Communist faction was currently in the dominant position, the anti-Red group was growing stronger and "may be able to swing the balance."

Indication of the desperate situation facing all elements of the Canadian amusement industry because of the hassle between the American Federation of Musicians and the American Guild of Varlety Artists is seen by the fact that Georgie Jessel has cancelled out of the Elmwood Casino, Windsor, Ont., and Sophie Tucker has postponed her date there until it's safe to play the area.

AFM members in Canada will not play for AGVA acts during the current strife between both unions until AGVA renews its 1951 agreement with the AFM, which defines jurisdiction of musical acts and until AGVA drops its court cases it has pending in Montreal, Toronto and Pittsburgh.

King-size Marine Dining Room of this hotel is teeing off the fall season with a two-act, low-budget show that's noticeably lacking in headline values, both from the standpoint of name strength and program punch. Layout also is wanting in variety, compared with previous shows, being essentially an arrangement of comedy and dance. Opening show (10) played to half a house.

Pete Marshall & Tommy Farrell have scored strongly in other Chicago rooms recently before family and conventioneer audiences alike, but on neither of two occasions have they had to shoulder the burden of toplining. As the act shapes now it's lacking material, both in quality and quantity, for that kind of slotting. Boys have good two-man comedy conception that may carry them far h time, but present headlining is premature.

With Marshall as the straight and Farrell the begoggled foil, they open with snappy repartee and aunch into spoofery of pop songs and Texas radio programs that strike the fumybone solidly. Brace of standard impressions register okay, but longish skit on filmmak-ing in France gets less than mild results. Ditto the word-association nonsense, Among better offerings are a fashion show barb and the offstage revelation of a cafe singer's thoughts while he sings. Wrapup is a laughable tidbit in which Farrell runs riot on the bandstand trying to accompany his singing partner on a number of instruments.

Kristofer & King are a slick boy-and-girl dance team who have youth, looks, and lightness of limbs in their favor. Couple essays three three novelty numbers in buoyant mood with changes of costume for each, accomplished onstage by shedding the outermost vestments. All routines land nicely with the onlookers.

CONSTANCE MOORE Comedienne 30 Mins. Hotel St. Regis, New York

This "New Act" is intended to accent the musicomedy-film song-stress-comedienne's emergence into the truly big leagues. Marking a return to the Hotel St. Regis' class Maisonette, she is a worthy reopening-of-the-season attraction. From her personal viewpoint Miss Moore has finally scaled the heights.

It's a double credit to her obviously painstaking schooling and to her special material writer. Who ever he/she is evidences a flair for adult yet socko humor not within the usual ken of "sophisticated" specialty songsmiths. It is savy stuff and Miss Moore projects it in just the right degree.

just the right degree.

When it's offbeat like "Observe the Niceties," it is not too subtle although, in as large measure, it is to the comedienne's credit that she knows how to best purvey her stuff for best impact.

Earl Brent and Matt Dennis get floor billing for "Forever," a new ballad "inspired" by Midred Cram's novel, and it has the earmarks of broad popular appeal. It is presumed both figured largely in authoring the rest of the reperiore. Thus, even when she resorts to familiars like "I Love the Guy," Will You Still Be Mine," "Do It Again," a 'Cole Porter oldie, and "Who Cares?", another Gershwin standard, it's 'the special lyrical treatments, along with Miss Moore's interpretations, which give it all such extraordinary impact. Some of the lines are as up-to-the-minute as last night's newspaper, including references to FHA "windfalls," and the like. Her pace is varied, running from the saucy and sophisticated to the barrelhouse "Coffee" stylizing.

All this adds up to a socko sum

ning from the sauey and sophisticated to the barrelhouse "Coffee" stylizing.

All this adds up to a socko sum total in the posh Maisonette. Fortified by Miss Moore's good looks, classy chassis and sleek coutoure, it all makes for very chic chatter and patter, via her clever lyrical interpretations.

Milt Shaw, batoning the accompanying music, is obviously the songstress' delight, as has been observed and notated before. His suave fiddling and intensive back-stopping with his 802ers is in the best tradition and does a lot for almost any floorshow personality in this botte. His brand of "society" dansapation gets em out on the floor pronto. He has a good sextet combination in accordion, drums, plano, clarinet, string bass and a second violin to support his own fiddle-maestroing. Ray Bari ensemble is an equally proficient relief combination.

ble is an equally proficient relief combination.

The Maisonette marks the first of the Gotham "smart" rooms to reopen for the fall season, getting the jump on the Plazo's Persian Room (Julie Wilson), Pierre's Cotillion (Hildegarde & Jack Whiting) and Waldort's Empire (Jose Greco) rooms, slated to follow in that order. Per usual, August is back at the velvet rope and, per usual, the St. Regis is one of the few remaining hostels in Manhattan to maintain the "old guard" tradition of a brand of service and hospitality that seems to be fast disappearing the world over—or becoming too expensive.

Biggest handicap here, aside from insufficient rehearsal, was the failure to arrive of the "head" for awater curtai perfected by Gage and scheduled for use in a climactic "dry swimming" bit by Miss Williams. Its elimination left the closing flat. Balkiness of a baby elephant—bearing a sign for Miss Williams' coming picture, "Jupiter's Darling"—hurt the second and third shows. The cute animal, which had been flown east and apparently was upset, would not be persuaded to do a single trick. The mike setup also appeared to give her and Gage slight trouble. Chief asset of the unit is, naturally, the beautiful, curvaceous, and strikingly-gowned Miss Williams—even though she does not swim. Her singing voice is pleasing, though not, unusual; her dancing, with two male partners, is reasonably good. Miss Williams managed to project her attractive personality across the footlights of the Vast Palace auditorium. The emphasis, kidding and serious, on happy family life, with Gage and their three small children, is in taste, and subtly beneficial to Hollywood. "Like To Be a Movie Star" and "Hurtin' Mambo" were Miss Williams gown for it rated the description "gorgeous."

The tall, deep voiced Gage shone brightest in "I Love You For Sentimental Reasons" and "You Are My. One Love" (co-authored by him, on a Pagliacci strain)—and both recorded for MGM. His rendition of the tunes improved noticeably at the final show. Gage also emceed competently.

With experience and an enlargement of his material, he should be able to move out of the intimery field and into tv and general situations. He is a sight as well as sound comedian, the visual aspect being a rubberface screwed up in Barry Fitzgerald fashion. His best bit is a record pantomine in which he provides the actions for the voices of the Ink Spots. He would do well to eliminate his whistling number, the weakest bit of his repertoire.

The Palace, this week, host to the Harvest Moon Ball winners, six couples who battled their way through the N. Y. Daily News annual promotion held at Madison Square Garden. Previously, the winners played out their prize week at the Latin Quarter, N. Y. and before that at the Roxy and Loew's State on Broadway. The Palace has this 12-person act for the first time this year.

The calibre of the contestants seems to be generally high, with near-professional polish displayed by the fox-trot and tango winners. The presentation is well-paced with an offstage voice emeeing and the brief turn around the stage beach pair made for a good curtain closer. However, it seems that every few years the catalog of dances has to be refurbished. It would indeed be a difficult problem to eliminate any of the present categories, but certainly, a mambo team would seem a necessity this year also showing were couples doing the rhumba, polka, Vienese waltz, and jitterbug.

The rest of the show has its moments, albeit one segment failed to hit its full impact because of the design of the bill. Buddy Clayton, who does a fairly good set of impressions, had to follow another impersonation act. Two acts in succession of this category is much too much. Burton & Janet relies on the male's takeoffs on Chaplin and Groucho Marx, otherwise the turn is nil. Clayton has some fairly good moments in his stand, but it was unfair for him to follow a similar act.

A major turn here is Maxine Sullivan, the Negro songstress who has an intimate voice that registers in theatres as well, Miss Sullivan does a trio of tunes before responding with her familiar "Loch Lomond" for a clean sweep.

There are two workable acts in the comedy department. Tommy Hanlon Jr. with a femme assistant does his usually likeable turn. He's a nice-appearing and personabe lad who has always done excellently in this house. Wally Dean, during the early nart of his cort.

Syd. Paummer, long-time xylophonist on the U. K. vaude loops, uses comedy business to add humor effect to an instrument which can often fore with similarity. Frinstance, he has a pair of hand-clappers attached to front of instrument to indulge in mitting, a red-colored snake that strings and streads through the cylindrical pipes, flowers that shoot up, a ratthat is throwfi up from the instrument, and a dönkey's face, tail and legs that fit themselves up button touch when he gives out with "Donkey Serenade." With these in proper arrangement it is hard to miss, and this one rates well on most counts.

The brand newness sticks out in many instances, with a misstephere and there, a trick that doesn't come off and some spotty pacing. In a couple of spots there is noticeable lagging by experienced performers, but largely these are kinks that should come out with a few more performances under the belt.

However, for a country venture to succeed in New York, there has to be a breath of mountain greenery, some honest folk music, new ballads and material with more depth and maturity than that which as presented here. It would be difficult to find that kind of music these days. The mountain fastnesses, where Elizabethean folk shut themselves up for centuries have long been infiltrated by radio and other emissaries of civilization. It would be difficult to find enough unadulterated country ballads and entertainers to make up a contingent of the size of the "Hayride" company.

"I understand that theatres do not, have to accept pictures of this type for public exhibition, and therefore the owners of theatres have a real opportunity to make a worth-while contribution to the public good in these days of juvenile delinquency and general lawlessness by refusing to show them."

While the industry's Production Code does not specifically nix the depiction of cops as criminals, it states as one of its general principles that "law, natural or human, shall not be ridiculed, nor shall sympathy be created for its violation." The only other reference to law-enforcing officers is clause which says: "There must be no scenes, at any times, showing law-enforcing officers dying at the hands of criminals unless such scenes are absolutely necesary to the development of the plot. This includes private detectives and quards for banks, motor trucks. scenes are absolutely necessry to the development of the plot. This includes private detectives and guards for banks, motor trucks, etc."

Almost simultaneous with the is-Almost simultaneous with the issuance of Carton's blast at crooked cop pkx, members of the New York States Assn. of Police Chiefs were lending their support to Warner Bros. "Dragnet." At the invitation of Warners, members of the group, headed by John C. Hergenham, Police Chief of Armonk, N. Y., atcheded a performance of "Dragnet" at the Victoria Theatre, N. Y., Monday (13).

Pix Abroad

$180,000,000 Remittance

Basing their opinion on the per-formance of the year to date, for-eign department execs say the in-dustry today is in its strongest and most favorable position abroad, with no real trouble spots looming. Consequently, they're confident that remittances will surpass the 1953 record of around $170,000,000 and may climb this year as high as $180,000,000 or $185,000,000.

and may climb this year as high as $180,000,000 or $185,000,000.

It pointed out parenthetically that, even were the remittance level to remain constant at $170,000,000, this would still be an excellent showing since, in 1953, the total was boosted by the thawing of large chunks of coin accrued over a long period of time.

Credited for the strong b.o. performance of U. S. pix abroad is the quality of the productions, which, execs hold, has improved a great deal, as well as gradually diminishing restrictions. Furthermore, native pix, while popular, haven't developed the kind of b.o. strength originally ascribed to them.

Continued foreign market upbeat is notable in the light of predictions from a number of industry leaders, including the Motion Ptcture Export Assn.'s Eric Johnston, earlier in the year that 1954 would fall slightly short of 1953 totals.

'54 BUMPER BARN TRYOUT CROP

Temper! Temper!

That back-and-forth discussion between some of the New York drama critics on the subject of early opening night curtains has gotten a little edgy. In a recent column on the subject, John Chapman, of the N. Y. Dally News, was a trifle acid in referring to another aislesitter as a "bon-vivant" and explaining that his own stand in favor of an 8:30 or 8:40 ring-up opening night was not for personal reasons but merely i behalf of the general play-going public.

stand in tavor of an above of the state of the general playgoing public.

Richard Watts Jr., of the N. Y. Post, apparently the "bon-vivant" referred to, took a sarcastic dig at Chapman (without mentioning his name) in a reply last Thursday (9), as follows:

When I recently expressed surprise that one of my distinguished colleagues objected to the early first-night curtains, I seem to, have done him an injustice. I was astonished by his attitude because premieres at 8 o'clock make things so much easier for the reviewer. Where I was unfair to him was in not realizing that he was guided solely by idealistic motives; that he is, in fact, a splendid do-gooder at heart. To favor the later curtains entirely out of an unselfish concern for the comforts of that neglected and underprivileged class the carriage-trade first-nighters, is so touching that I am reduced to embarrassment for my selfishness.

Ward Morehouse, drama columnist of the N. Y. World-Telegram & Sun, also commented again on the opening night curtain; issue last Saturday (11). He wrote, "I've made a personal poll of firstnighters and have found that not one in 50 desire a return to the old-time 8:40 opening night curtains, which are favored by one critic. He seems to be able to write faster than all the others and he doesn't seem to mind scrambling for an 11:30 taxi on a rainy night." He added that he had received "two dozen letters" favoring the early premiere curtain and quoted one Broadway producer as saying, "We have found that we can get playgoers into the theatre and into their seats much easier for the early first-night curtain than we could when we started the shows at 8:40 and 8:50. In those days late diners were still drifting in at 9 o'clock.

New Stock Mgrs., ATPAM Pact Seen Likely As Followup To Lycett Tiff

Dispute between the Assn. of Theatrical Press Agents & Managers and the management of the Westport (Conn.) Playhouse is in process of settlement. Meanwhile, Ralph Lycett, who was pulled off the job as pressagent and subscription manager of the strawhat during the summer, when the union put the theatre on its "unfair" list, was back at work for the last few weeks of the season. Barn had refused to hire an ATPAM member as manager.

Settlement of the ATPAM-West-

ATPAM member as manager.

Settlement of the ATPAM-Westport dispute may involve a general agreement between the union and the Stock Managers Assn., representing most of the barn managements. Attorneys for the union and Westport have been confabbing and a full meeting to include the stock producers is expected to be held soon.

As steps toward an agreement.
Lycett was permitted by ATPAM to resume his Westport duties, and

D. C. Post-Times-Herald Has 'Problems'; Too Fat For Next-Day Reviews

Washington, Sept. 14.
There'll be no morning-after legit reviews in Washington until the Post and Times Herald licks the mechanical problems in connection with printing the greatly enlarged paper. That will likely be matter of months and will hurt at the boxoffices, since Washingtonians generally like to read the reviews before buying legit tickets. Sale of the Times-Herald to the Washington Post some months ago added about 75% to the circulation of the Post, now the town's sole morning paper, and has resulted in much fatter editions, with considerably more advertising. Result is that part of the paper is printed on the old Times-Herald presses several blocks from the Post building.

82 SHOWS GET INITIAL TESTS

By HOBE MORRISON

Strawhat tryouts had a bumper season in 1954. That was true in both quantity and quality. There were 84 shows given initial tests on the barn circuit, believed lieved to be the biggest season's crop on record. The figure does not include two more break-ins listed for October.

Itsted for October.

Two of the tryouts are definite Broadway entries for the early fall.

"Dear Charles," with Tallulah Bankhead dittoing her star stink from the silo trail, opens tonight (Wed.) at the Morosco, N. Y., and "Home Is the Hero," with Walter Macken in the author-actor parlay he had recently in the test stand at the Westport (Conn.) Playhouse, arrives next Wednesday (22) at the Booth, N. Y.

There are 10 other citronella arrives next weunesuay (22) at an Booth, N. Y.

There are 10 other citronella tryouts rating as probable Broadway productions. They include William McCleery's "The Lady Chooses," Justin Sturm's "Reunion '54," John O'Hara's "Farmer's Hotel," John Cecil Holm's "Southwest Corner," Leslie Stevens' "Champagne Complex," Hy Kraft's dramatization of F. Scott Fitzger-ald's "Last Tycoon," John F. Matthews' "Michael and Lavinia," the Louis Pelletier-Jack Finke "Other Devil," Mary Chase's "Lollia" and John Hess' "Facts of Life."

Two other tryouts, Frederic Morton's "Millicent's Castle" and John Hess "Facts of Life."

Two other tryouts, Frederic Morton's: "Millicent's Castle" and Phoebe and Henry Ephron's "Shoemaker's Children," are scheduled for October at the Bucks County Playhouse, New Hope, Pa., at least potential Broadway candidates. Various other shows, listed in Variety's weekly Strawhat Tryouts tabulation during the summer, were tested from previous year, and thus do not qualify as new breakins. A number of other efforts were in the semi-pro or frankly amateur category and are also excluded.

Some Not Due for N.Y.

Among the notable 1954 tryouts apparently not due for ultimate Broadway production (although some may be likely bets for stock, off-Broadway, etc., or even films, and television adaptation) were Calder Willingham's "The Automobile Man," Pierre La Mure's dramatization of his own "Moulin Rouge" novel, Jerome Chodorov's "Brother Cain," Anita Loos "Darling, Darling" adaptation from the French of Pierre Barilet and Jean-Pierre Gredy, and the Albert Halper and Joseph Schrank "My Aunt Daisy."

SKED SIMENON 'SNOW' FOR OFF-B'WAY PREEM

"The Snow Was Black," by Georges Simenon, will be given an off-Broadway production this fall at the Theatre de Lys, N.Y., by John Griffin and Gene Frankel. The drama, adapted from his wn novel, had a two-year run in Paris and was recently tested at the White Barn Theatre, Westport, Conn., under the direction of Frankel, who will also stage the off-Broadway edition. Griffin has directed and produced in London and has worked in legit and television in Canada. Frankel has directed in stock and films.

Thomson-Allen to Tour 'My 3 Angels' With Jory

"My 3 Angels" is being sent on tour this fall by Archie Thomson and Rita Allen, who were associated with Saint Subber in the original Broadway production in 1952-53. Victor Jory is starring and Herbert Evers is featured in the Sam and Bella Spewack adaptation of Albert Husson's farce, "La Cuisine des Anges."

Charles Harrow, who is operating the subway circuit in Brooklyn and Jamaica (N. Y.) this season, is associated in the presentation the show at those two spots (

Channing Poser Via New Tuner

Carol Channing, currently star-ring in "Wonderful Town" in Chicago, will probably decide within three weeks the next two whether she will remain with the musical or leave it to star in a new tuner, "Delilah." Latter show is by John Latouche, Sam Locke and James Mundy, who will submit a first draft to the star in a few days.

first draft to the star in a few days. Miss Channing's contract with producer Robert Fryer permits her to leave "Town" on six weeks' notice. But although she'd like to do a new show on Broadway, she's getting $3,500 a week (plus a percentage over $30,000) in "Town," and her performance in the show has drawn unusual praise from the Chi critics and, she feels, has gotten her out of the one-role ("Gentlemen Prefer Blondes") category. Fryer would like to persuade the tlemen Prefer Blondes") category.

Fryer would like to persuade the star to remain with "Town" for a full season's tour, including the potentialy lucrative Coast engagements. She has done excellent business in Chicago, considering the fact that the show had to start from scratch there, with virtually no advance sale, at the start of the summer lull. Also, she was taking over a role with which her predecessor, Rosalind Russell, was identified.

Gov't Appeals Shubert Suit to Supreme Court; Sez Trust Law Applies

Washington, Sept. 14. Appeal was taken to the Supreme Court last week by the Department of Justice in the Government's anti-trust suit against Lee (deceased) and Jacob J. Shubert and Marcus Heiman. The Department asked for review of the ruling of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York which held that the theatrical business is excluded from the anti-trust laws.

Case results from an action brought by the Department in 1950 charging the Shuberts and Heiman with conspiring to restrain competition in production, booking and presentation of legit shows throughout the U.S. in violation of the Sherman Act. The suit was dismissed by a N.Y. District Court on the basis of a 1922 Supreme Court opinion that professional baseball not interstate commerce.

Shirley Booth has decided not to go on the road with "By the Beau-tiful Sea," so the projected tour go on the road with "By the Beautiful Sea." so the projected tour apparently off.

Star was willing to take the musical out if two new songs were written for her, but composer Arthur Schwartz and lyricist Dorothy Fields have current assignments on the Coast, so Miss Booth has notified producers Robert Fryer and Lawrence Carr that she won't be available for the road, A replacement is figured out of the question. Although "Sea" has picked up at the boxoffice recently, there's a question how long it will continue on Broadway. With the S. N. Behrman-Joshua Logan-Harold Rome musical, "Fanny," due Nov. 4 at the Majestic, the Fryer-Carr offering must vacate the house Oct. 30. Since no other desirable musical house is available for an extended run, it may not be a good financial bet to pay the cost of moving for a limited stay, particularly with the pre-Christmas decline due to start immediately after Thanksgiving. So unless the Shuberts will underwrite the move to another house, "Sea" may have to fold.

When the musical winds up, Miss Booth plans to go to Chatham, on Cape Cod, where she bought a home last summer, for an extended vacation. She has not yet had a chance to occupy the cottage, and wants to furnish it and familiarize herself with the place.

Actress has no immediate legit or film plans. Her contract with Hal Wallis calls for two more pictures, of which she and the producer can each select one. However, she doesn't have to take any assignments under the deal until she gives notice that she's ready.

'Complex' Too Scrambled; Cohen Returns 32G Coin

With plans for his production of "Champagne Complex" indefinitely delayed, Alexander H. Cohen this delayed, Alexander H. Cohen this week returned to the backers the $32,000 he had raised toward the show's $50,000 budget. Producer now hopes to do the play next spring, provided Leslie Stevens' script revisions are satisfactory. "Complex" recently played a two-week tryout at the Bucks County Playhouse, New Hope, Pa. It was scheduled for further tune-up engagements in Hartford and Boston, with a Broadway opening Oct. 27. Gayle Stine was to have been associated with Cohen in the production of the three-character comedy.

Philadelphia, Sept. 14.
The Playhouse in the Park, Philly's municipally operated tent theatre in West Fairmount Park, completed its third summer season completed its third summer season last Saturday night (11) with a bang-up closing week gross of almost $13,000. Final offering was Noel Coward's "Tonight at 8:30." with Beatrice Straight and John Baragrey starred. The critics were enthusiastic.

enthusiastic.
Third season of the Playhouse showed a marked gain over last season, which was well ahead of the initial 11-week season in 1952. Figures given by John B. Kelly in his report to the Fairmount Park Commission, of which he is vice-president, did not include the final treet's ferre. Kelly tidd the Commendation. week's figure. Kelly told the Com-mission that the Playhouse, which mission that the Playhouse, which has been specially sponsored by him from its inception, grossed $149,634, for the 12-week season for an operating profit of $34,000, less preliminary costs and producer's salary.

He added that although total gross was $23,000 higher than in 1953, the net profit for the 12 weeks was $4,000 less, due to the weeks was $4,000 less, due to the mid-season troubles with the tent, which necessitated the buying of an entirely new canvas structure. Another limiting factor was that Margaret Truman's contract called for a percentage of the gate during the capacity week of Aug. 23 and 30 and 30.

Two of this season's 12 shows grossed over $14,000. They were "Sabrina Fair" and Miss Truman's "Autumn Crocus" (the latter for both of her two weeks), while the Shaw revival. "Too True to Be Good," was very close to that figure.

Good, was very close to that ligture.

Four offerings grossed around the $13,000 mark. They were "Affairs of State," "Front Page." "Little Hut" and "Time of the Cuckoo." Three others, "Happy Birthday," "Boy Meets Girl."-and "Golden Boy," grossed approximately $12,000 each, and only one show, Eugene O'Neill's "Ah Wilderness," fell below that figure.

Is Blue," with film star Grace Kelly, daughter of the Park Commissioner and Playhouse sponsor, at $12,573.

record of the Bucks County Playhouse last week drawing $7.807

With last week's local stand, Miss Bennett concluded a seven-week strawhat tour, during which she set five b.o. marks, She opened the trek week of July 5-10 at the Lakewood Theatre, Barnesville, Pa, grossing $5,000. The following stanza at the Triple Cities Playhouse, Binghamton, N. Y., drew about $5,600. Next week at Lakes Region Playhouse, Gilford-Laconia, N. H., she set a straight-play record $8,370.

First week, despite a big opening-night press list (160 seats), grossed a lusty $41,000, with a Sunday night SRO. Last week, the second stanza, with another press list for last Tuesday's (7) "Western Symphony" premiere, the take was even better with a boff $44,800 gross.

Jacobson Mulling Fall Tour for Brown 'Showoff

Joe E. Brown, who toured the silo circuit this summer in "The Show-Off," may be sent on a regular tour this fall by indie booker Clarence Jacobson. Financing would be supplied by various keycity theatre managers. Show would play on two-for-ones.

Principal question is whether the 1923-24 comedy by George Kelly retains enough strength for regular tour.

Inside Stuff—Legit

Although he describes himself as "being totally humorless so far as Washington's good name as a theatre town is concerned," Richard L. Coe, drama critic of the Washington Post & Times Herald, resents what he considers the "provincialism of Broadway." He was sufficiently what he considers the "provincialism of Broadway." He was sufficiently steamed on that account last week to write a column attacking Brooks Atkinson, critic of the N. Y. Times. Irritated at a recent Sunday column in which Atkinson noted that "Room Service" had been more successful than "Cretan Woman" at Washington's Arena Stage, the D. C. aislesitter took a couple of long paragraphs to rap some of the "feeble efforts" current on Broadway and added a not-entirely-clear snapper about "our much-maligned city" being "the butt of. his (Atkinson's) little joke." Odd angle on the piece is that on the basis of his reviewing, Atkinson is perhaps the least provincial of critics, not only in New York but in the U. S. and perhaps abroad. In the last few seasons he has covered more off-Broadway shows than any other New York reviewer and has gone to such spots as Washington, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Dallas, Houston, Seattle, Pasadena, Stratford (Ont.), Stratford (England) and London to cover local theatre.

"Operation Midsummer Night's Dream" was completed very rapidly at Prestwick, Scotland, as impresario Sol Hurok tied up final ends over the weekend in whisking the cast and scenery of the Shakespeare comedy to N. Y. for its Metropolitan Opera House opening. "Dream," wound up its run in Edinburgh Saturday (11): sets and costumes w in N. Y. Monday (13), and the cast came in yesterday (Tues.).

Entire show, led by Moira Shearer, Robert Helpmann and Stanley Holloway, was airlifted from the Empire Theatre, Edinburgh, direct to New York. A specially-chartered freight plane carried sets and costumes, while the company of 55 actors and 10 staffers followed in a BOAC Stratocruiser.

Scenery for the Shakespeare oldie was built with the airlift in mind. It weighs a minimum, and even the grassy mounds of the forest were designed in sections so that they packed away like children's building blocks: "Dream" has its N.Y. bow next Tuesday (21). Tour of America and Canada will involve over 20,000 miles of travelling. Cast is skedded to be home in England Dec. 22. "Operation Midsummer Night's Dream" was completed very Pending a turndown by the Actors Equity council, producer Cheryl Crawford is going on the assumption that her contract with Betsy von Furstenberg as featured femme lead in "Oh Men, Oh Women" is cancelled. Because of the actress' repeated absences from the cast without explanation or even word where she could be reached, Sam Schwartz, the producer's general manager, went to Equity for permission to get out of the contract. He did not bring formal charges against Miss von Furstenberg, but merely explained the situation and reported that Miss Crawford is going on the assumption that since the actress has breached the contract, the deal is no longer in effect, unless the council rules otherwise. Miss von Furstenberg has reportedly said she has been out of the Edward Chodorov comedy because of illness, but it could not be learned whether she has appealed to Equity on the matter. Meanwhile, Joan Gray has been upped from the role of secretary to take over regularly for Miss von Furstenberg. The part of the secretary has been played by Lilyan Wilder, but she goes back to her regular understudy-assistant stage manager stint and Julie McMillan has been engaged to play the secretary.

"Fanny," upcoming musical by S. N. Behrman, Joshua Logan and Harold Rome, based on three-Marcel Pagnol stories, has already been done as two different straight plays on the Paris stage, as three French films costarring Raimu and Pierre Fresnay, and as a Metro picture titled "Port of Seven Seas" in 1938 with Wallace Beery, Frank Morgan, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Beal, Jessie Ralph and Cora Witherspoon, That screen treatment was written by Preston Sturges, directed by James Whale and produced by Henry Henigson. French pictures took the titles of the original Pagnol stories, "Marius," "Cessare" and "Fanny." Latter yarn provided the plot of the Metro picture. Screen rights were leased to the studio by Pagnol, who received the print when the deal expired. Author still has the picture, as well as the three French films. Merrick and Logan acquired the screen rights before going ahead with the musical adaptation.

"Open House," by Victor Clement and Francis Swann, opening last night (Tues.) for a four-week tryout at Nina Vance's Alley Theatre, Houston, is not to be confused with several other plays of the same title. One of the latter, by Samuel R. Golding, was produced on Broadway by the author in December, 1925. Another, by Harry Young, was produced on Broadway in June, 1947, by Rex Carlton. Still another, by Jo Barrett and Daniel Durning, was tried out last July 27-31 by Ross Vaughn, with Durning as stager, at the Town Hall, Brandon, Vi. The Clement-Swann script, formerly titled "The Three Thieves," was tried out in December, 1952, at Albany.

Vacationing Broadwayite, a recent patron at the Oakdale Musical Theatre, Wallingford, Conn., was impressed by the way manager Ben Simon had arranged bus transportation for showgoers from New Haven. Although many strawhats are off the bus lines and main highways, and very few can be reached conveniently from trains, only a handful have arranged adequate bus service. According to the Broadway visitor, the only practical way of reaching most barn theatres is by car. Even then, he has noted, few spots have adequate free parking. Significantly, Oakdale has had a successful summer season.

Cast of "Wonderful Town," currently in Chicago, have had virtually a strawhat theatre setup during the summer. Most of them have been staying at lake-front hotels and have been spending much of the time on the Lake Michigan beach during the hot weather. Carol Channing, star of the musical, has her 18-month-old son with her and featured actor Dort Clark has his wife, ex-actress Marilyn Sable, and their four children there for the Chi engagement.

27% Profit On Run Of 'Ondine'

"Ondi" Playwrights Co. production of the Jean Giraudoux fantasy, adapted by Maurice Valency, earned $37,648 profit on its July 3. On the basis of the standard 50-50 split between management and backers, that gives the latter a 37% profit on their $102,000 investment.

The Audrey Hepburn-Mel Ferrer starrer, staged by Alfred Lunt, cost $116,370 to open on Broadway, it earned $158,801 operating profit on its New York run, less $3,947 (doing expenses and $335 New York State unincorporated busiess tax. In addition to the $85,000 closing expenses and $835 New York State unincorporated busi-ness tax. In addition to the $85,000 previously returned to the backers, the $17,000 balance on the invest-ment was returned last week, and $34,000 profit was distributed. That left $3,648 available for fu-ture contingencies or distribution.

There was talk of the production going on tour this fall, either with Miss Hepburn and Ferrer or with replacement stars. There has also been mention of a London produc-tion with the Hepburn-Ferrer star-ring combo. However, liquidation of the Playwrights-Ondine Co. partnership presumably means that all such prospects are cold.

Barn Tryouts

Summer," Franz Spencer's "Happy Ant Hill," the John Latouche-Lee Falk "Happy Dollar" musical, a retue titled "Walk Tall," the Annold Sundgaard-Alec Wilder "Kittiwake Island" musical, and Virginia Card's new English-language versions of "Carmen" and "Barber of Seville."

Few strawhat seasons unearth more than one or perhaps two shows that ultimately reach Broadshows that ultimately reach Broadway, so the 1954 semester is at least up to par on "Dear Charles" and "Home Is the Hero." If, as seems likely, several of the probable bets also make the grade, this summer will have hit a new peak in that regard as well as in total number of tryouts.

As it happens, 1954 was also a boom summer for barn business, with many spots setting new weekly gross records (in some instance) doing so several times) and a number piling up their biggest season totals on record. The biz upbeat and the bumper tryout crop were probably not directly related, however.

For Theatre Collection

Theatrical photographer G. Maillard Kesslere, who has made for and presented to the N.Y. Public Library's main branch at 42d St. & 5th Ave. an elaborate collection of show biz personality portraits, is SOS'ing many of his subjects for additional biographical material.

A fire at Kesslere's town house-studio, 131 East 62d St., destroyed between 1;500 and 2;000 biogs. The portraits are intact, but now await the necessary bio material before George Freedley, curator of the Theatrical Collection at the N.Y. Library, can exhibit them anew. There was a limited exhibition thereof in April 1952, when Kesslere presented the first, major segment. He has been abroad for some 18 months, during which time the fire loss occurred. Kesslere requests anybody and everybody who has been "done" in camera portraiture by him to communicate with him at the East 62d St. address, or phone. Templeton 2-2365, as a means to expedite the completion of the collection.

Coincidentally, Kesslere is now making duplicate copies of these collections for donation to other galleries and libraries in the U.S., and—a few similar institutions abroad, which have requested them.

It is one of the most complete anthologies of camera portraits of show biz personalities from all walks of the theatre—thesps, directors, authors, critics, impresarios, and the like.

for months' more run on Broadway. it's currently in its 96th week). Elliott Nugent, producer with Courtney Burr, has now taken over as 'star while Tom Ewell recreates his role of the constantly jammed-up summer bachelor in the 20th-Fox film version of the play. It's an effective coinedy performance, credible despite the age discrepancy (the anxiety, conscience-ridden hero is supposed to be 39, while Nugent's age is listed as 54) and skillfully varied, though thus far lacking the full dimension or pacing that Ewell gave the part. Nugent veteran and expert hand at underplaying for laughs, however, and he gets them all.

Film ingenue Sally Forrest, who took over some time ago for Vanessa Brown as the loquaciously eager girl from upstairs, has modified her tendency toward breathlessly rushing her lines (an old and common failing of actresses trying to suggest girlishness), but she still works too hard and seems over-intense.

Physical production is still in excellent condition, but the playing of the incidental song. "The Girl Without a Name" (which sounds too much like that "Third Man" tune, incidentally), over the house p.a. system could be modulated considerably at times. Hobe.

The Fifth Season (CORT, N. Y.)

"The Fifth Season" has become a sort of old grey mare of legit. Back for a brief Broadway run before going on the road, it's a sorry substitute for the hokey but funny and ingratiating comedy that crossed up the critics and delighted audiences and backers last season.

The Sylvia Regan, antic about the frenzied finance, and romance of New York's garment industry is unquestionably not Nobel Prize drama. But as originally played by the hilarious, disarming Menasha Skulnik, the bustling, staccato Richard Whorf and the decorative, skillful Phyllis Hill, it provided bullseye entertalment not merely for the denizens of N. Y.'s Seventh Ave. and their visiting buyers, but also sent general audiences out of the theatre in happy mood.

But the recast, badly directed and ill-rehearsed roughhouse that reopened last week is not worthy of Broadway or the road. It is, in fact, shocking and inexcusable.

Without dwelling on the embarrassing details, merely note that Joseph Buloff is woefully lacking in either the comic or endearing qualities that made Skulnik a delight in the all-important role of woebegone but shrewd tallor-partner. His ponderous mugging gets only a fraction of the comedy and not even a suggestion of the sincerity, gentleness, and guile that skulnik had in the role.

Chester Morris overacts accute-

guile that skulnik had in the role. Chester Morris overacts accuted as the dynamic self-indulgent but essentially likable salesman-partner. His drunk scene, like Buloff's, is an ossified orgy, and unfortunately typical. Under such circumstances, the secondary and supporting players obviously can't be blamed too much. Also, perhaps, whoever staged this reopened show must have been watching rehearsals through the wrong end of a telescope.

Anyway, John Griggs, a holdover as the lecherous buyer, now goes way overboard. Augusta Roeland, continuing her original portrayal as the bigshot salesman's two-timed wife, seems comparatively expressionless, possibly in an attempt to escape the general contagion. Eric Brotherson flounces in what is presumably a recognizable caricature of a dress designer.

Patricia Jenkins is agreeably di-recognizable caricature of a dress designer.

Patricia Jenkins is agreeably direct and uncontaminated by the overacting virus, although her Continental accent lapses a bit occasionally. Fran Keegan is suitably pretty and proportioned as the on-the-make model, if not exactly a dramatic Duse. Andy Sanders is properly juvenile looking as the salesman's rebellious son. Lucille Patton is adequate as the garrulous bookkeeper with a "delicate condition" and there are the requisite assortment of nifty phizzes and figgers for the modeling scenes.

At least one aspect of the show is as fresh as originally. The girls' costumes have apparently been kept in excellent condition and in some instances the latest fashions have been added. It's little enough.

In Theatre 12's studied revival there is little emotional impact, although Orestes' murder of Aegistheus and subsequent matricide are sanguinary episodes. Director Denis Vaughan has not been afraid of novelty, keeping his modern dress chorus simple and frank, and handling the Furies with satiric touches.

Although the young company doesn't consistently master the Sartre convolutions, the actors compensate in passionate intention what they lack in technique. Edward Eastland is a youthfully unaffected Orestes and Mary Miller is vigorously tortured as Electra. As the king who murdered Orestes' father, Edward Ragazzino is the most mature, accepting his own violent death with regal authority. In white the and tails Hugh violent death with regal authority.

In white tie and tails, Hugh Mosher is a suave Zeus, with a clarity that should infuse the entire cast. Robert Anderson and Harriette Bigus are a personable chorus, George Currier is Orestes' timid tutor, and Myra Greene the bejewelled Clytenmestra. Bert Greene's easy sets are visually helpful.

Although this Sartre opus requires intense audience concentration, Theatre 12's revival is worthwhile.

When John D. Hess wrote "The Grey-Eyed People" a couple of seasons ago, it was generally agreed that he was a playwright with something on the ball. In "The Facts of Life," which preemed tonight at the Bucks County Playhouse here, the author, shifting his mood further towards comedy, again makes a bid for respectful attention.

Hess again displays unusually keen theatrical sense, ability at interesting characterizations, and most of all, striking command of dialog. Even when the play's situations may verge on the trite, the lines are fresh and agreeably spontaneous. taneous.

"Facts of Life," as it stands now, may be classed as an ambitious if uncertain candidate for commercial success. But it offers further promise that Hess will sooner of later fuse talents into something outstanding.

Meantime, however, with careful handling, the present opus can get somewhere on its own. Hess has created an interesting and provocative heroine and is fortunate enough at Michael Ellis' strawhat to have a young and attractive leading lady, who doesn't miss a trick in her portrayal of the character.

This is familiar and finds its weakest moments when the heroine's husband and father descend on the artist's studio together to demand an explanation. To the author's credit, however, he brings his play back to its original high level in a charming final scene.

Miss Shearer's pas de deux with Helpmann, a highly successful Oberon, in the second act, is one of the more beautiful moments of the piece. Slick mechanical touch is offered in the last scene when Oberon and Titania are mechanically whisked upwards and offstage out of mortal ken.

From opening scene, there is no doubt as to the success of actor-dancer Helpmann as the Fairy King. Trailing a long green cloak, he conveys throughout an aerial quality as he's hoisted from the ground by his retinue of green-clad sprites. His performance is the standout of the show.

Holloway, English character actor-comedian, is a breezy smilling Bottom the weaver, bringing to the role an almost contemporary worldigar. He has the poised assurance of a veteran trouper, and sings well beneath the artistic ass's head mask, which he works with deft finger skill so as to suggest self-conscious shyness and lovesick awkwardness. Rest of the rustic company of mechanics are adequately portrayed, especially by the chuckling Quince of Eliot Makeham, another vet English thesper, and Philip Locke's Flute. Play-acting episode of Pyramus and Thisbe is a richly-contrived episode of the colorful third act.

The young mixed-up lovers, victims of the love-potion adi inistered by an extremely active and agile Puck (Philip Guard), have been well cast. The two males, Demetrius and Lysander, are particularly well played by Patrick Macnee and Terence Longdon, while the physically-contrasted types of Hermia and Helena, the damsels of the piece, are soundly characterized by Ann Walford and Joan Benham. The Egeis of John Dearth is a rich, crusty job, while Anthony Nicholls is suitably regal and dignified as Theseus, Duke of Athens.

Athens.

Color and lighting effects have been carefully chosen, and use of transparent curtains are effective. Major attraction is the tuneful Mendelssohn music with the famous Wedding March, and in this respect the Scottish National Orch under Hugo Rignold does a commendable stint. Robin and Christopher Ironside have devised glittery sets, with a moonlit lake scene being especially memorable, and the fairy costumes reveal imaginative use of wardrobe, as do the clothes worn by Theseus and his countiers.

tive use of wardrobe as do the clothes wor by Theseus and his courtiers.

Play, penned by Shakespeare as a young man in the mid-1590s; has much magic of language apart from its spectacular effect. It adds up to romantic legit fodder that should divert the modern playgoer for the best part of three colorful hours and, with added b.o. impetus of star names, should justify the already high U.S. and Canadian interest in its visit. At performance caught, cast and principals took some dozen curtain calls.

Actress In 3-D Nude?
Halifax, Eng., Sept. 14.
City magistrates here examined a book titled "Diana Dors in 3-D." A detective-inspector demonstrated its use with red and green spectacles. Miss Dors is a British film and legit actress.
He said it was necessary to use spectacles, supplied with the book, to look at the pictures in it. This made them stand out.

"Are the pictures nude?" he was asked. "Practically nude," he replied. A solicitor, J. Bastian, pointing to the book, told the magistrates: "These pictures of a well-know. British film star scantily clad cannot be regarded as anything else but obscene."

The book and 60 other copies of 16 publications were shown to the court when a summons was brought against a local shopkeeper. The magistrates will give a decision in a month.

Corp., which planned to install a system manufactured by Spencer-Kennedy Labs of Cambridge, Mass. Reason for the election was an Iowa law which provides that any franchise granted by a city council must be submitted to a popular referendum. Hassle started when the Dubuque City Council appointed an engineering consultancy firm headed by Dr. George Town, director of research at Iowa State College, to recommend which of the competing systems was best. Town reported Aug. 2 that the city's best interests would be served by adoption of the Jerrold system. City Council promptly rejected the report, and that set of a hassle that led to the election.

The Skiatron TV petition, a 35page document, not only presented the case for toll-tv, but also submitted, a number of detailed surveys to show the public's willingness to pay for superior tv entertainment in the home. Furthermore, it outlined the results of several public demonstrations of Subscriber-Vision in N. Y.

"Scrambled' Technique

'Scrambled' Technique
Subscriber - Vision system involves a "scrambled" image and sound. A decoder card, inserted into a unit attached to an ordinary, receiver, to clear and steady the picture. There are two other toll - tv systems — Zenith's Phonevision, which has had an application pending with the FCC since February, 1952, and Paramount's Telemeter.

mount's Telemeter.

In view of the urgency of the UHF situation, the FCC is expected to call hearings on subscription-tw within the next three months. Considerable opposition to their form of broadcasting is expected by the toll-tv interests from the regular tv networks and very likely also from film industry interests. There's been no indication what position will be taken by Skiatron-TV's competitors who'll necessarily be a part of any hearing.

Question also arises whether the FCC will okay a single system, or whether it:ll give its blessings to subscription-tv per se without going into detail on how it's to bedone. Observers believe that the Commission will set a single standard for toll-tv broadcasting and that even though different systems may be authorized in various parts of the country they may be obliged to infroduce a method that will permit a pickup by all sets equipped with decoders.

N. Y. Paradox

N. Y. Paradox

Curious aspect of the Fox petition is the situation in N. Y. which has no UHF transmitter. Single UHF channel has been granted to WNYC. There's no question that Subscriber-Vision granted to WNYC. There's no question that Subscriber-Vision would be launched in N. Y. If the FCC approves toll-tv along the lines suggested by Fox, this would mean that Skiatron TV would have to operate from a "fringe" UHF transmitter with enough power to penetrate the N. Y. metropolitan area. New UHF transmitters with 1,000,000 watt power, will be brought out by General Electric in area. New UHF transmitters with 1,000,000 watt power, will be brought out by General Electric in the fall. On the other hand, it's in the realm of possibility that one of the current VHF stations, such as WOR-TV for instance, might be induced to switch to UHF. Both Skiatron and Zenith have been using WOR for test purposes in the past; the past.

Observers in N. Y. yesterday were puzzled by the suggested three-year limitation to UHF in the Fox petition. It was suggested that this was an excellent opening wedge, and that—should pay-as-you-see prove successful—it wouldn't be long before the VHF interests also would petition the FCC to get in on the act. Queried on that point, Fox would merely say that the UHF situation required obvious attention, and that toll-tv was the answer he was sugesting to rescue that broadcasting segment from economic disaster. The VHF stations didn't need toll-tv. so badly, he said, tv. so badly, he said, them are doing well.

Fox's Vidpix Setup

FOX'S VIDIX Setup

Still another consideration is that Fox heads up Motion Pictures for Television. Business of syndia dating pix must increasingly rely on UHF since these are the stations that have no network affiliation and therefore have time to spare.

The Fox licensing agreement, which gives Skiatron Electronics & which gives Skiatron Electronics & TV 5% of the gross income from Subscriber-Vision operations—that figures to about 50% of the net—also provided for the Fox group to spend $300,000 on the processing of the FCC application and the hearings. So far, Fox has laid out approximately $160,000 on the pre-liminaries.

$15.-20.000.000 Investment

Cost of launching pay-as-youin N. Y. has been estimated at approximately $15,000,000 to $20,000,000. Amount includes the cost of the decoders and advances to promoters and others who'll have to provide the shows at the start.

In his application to the FCC, Fox not only spelled out toll-tv advantages to UHF, but went into the limitations of the current system of telecasting which, he said, tem of telecasting which, he said, features "an essential sameness about the types of entertainment proffered to the public, springing less from the cost of programming than the constant effort to reach a common denominator for the greatest mass of people."

"Television," the—Commission was told, "has yet to evolve a system for the distribution of entertainment competitive with the older systems of distribution presently in existence. It has no paying boxoffice to supplement or even supplant those now in operation."

Were pay-as-you-see approved,

Were pay-as-you-see approved, "the viewer would be offered programs and services which free twoes not now and probably cannot make available," the petition stated. "But subscription tw will do more. For many it will open the door to areas of entertainment, education and training which at present are altogether inaccessible to them." It went on that, to millions, top Broadway and other events are out of the question for economic as well as geographical reasons, and that subscription twould bring this type of attraction to the home. Costs to the subscriber would be reasonable, it was said. Were pay-as-you-see approved,

The document cited a Skiatron survey involving 1,000 questionnaires. It showed that 93.8% of the viewers would be willing to pay for events in the home ordinarily unavailable on tv. The largest percentage, 83.1%, indicated they'd pay to see a hit Broadway show on their tv screen; 78.9% indicated they'd pay to see new feature pix, and 58.7% indicated interest i educational courses.

Both can take place every year if they so wish. However, both are still fighting this and next year will tell the would help it immeasureably, both wish. However, both are still righting this and next year will tell the story. "B" fests are being held down to only local prizes but visiting scribes usually get up a prize and these too will try to be controlled by IAP.

So, though the U. S. took it in the neck again this year, they will probably be in the running again next year with top product, and this year's bad publicity may wise up the intramural ball playing and background dodges, and put the fest on as closely a merit level as possible. However, there is no gain-saying that a fest can serve as an open meeting ground for film people from all over the world, fin and in general, be a good reviewing stand of the general level of world film production. Venice Fest will reinstitute its Selection Committee next year to invite outstand-mittee next year to invite outstand-So, though the U.S. took it in and therefore have time to spare.

then it would be smart to plug the songs in advance; get them on the air; then maybe it won't be the 'sudden death' to the score. The sudden death to the score. The songs will have a chance to continue. As I said, songs must be heard over and over to be appreciated, and a one-time interpretation will never be the answer.

"I don't care who it is—Rodgers & Hammerstein, Friml, Kern, Porter, Victor Herbert or Berlin melodies take on audience impact only with pleasant repetitiveness."

Berlin recalls how the late Jack Kapp; founder-president of Decca Records, in the first flush of "Okla-homa!" albui big success, when it started selling into the hundreds it started selling into the hundreds of thousands—eventually topping 1,300,000 sets at $5 per album—envisioned Berlin and Rodgers & Hammerstin both writing original scores directly for the wax. Berlin says "We laughted at Kapp and bleasantly kidded him out of the idea, because it would be suicide. How coild we tell what song rated the values, without first trying them out? Some throwaway number could well turn out to be the hit, and some tune we personally liked and some tune we personally liked could be a bomb."

Those 'Unsuspected' Hits

Berlin cites a number of in-orable instances where throwaway or unsuspected numbers emerge as the wallop numbers. He recalls He recalls re for "As the Music the wallop numbers. He recalls the pannings his score for "As Thousands Cheer" at the Music Box got, and today he has two standards, "Easter Parade" and "Heat Wave," out of the show.

"A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody" was written as a throwaway 'pa-rade' number for the Ziegfeld beauts in the 1917 Follies,' and to-day it's a theme for every fashion show and kindred display. Berlin's prize illustration of what Berlin's prize illustration of what may be unsuspected "special material" emerging as walloping hits is the "Annie Get Your Gun" score which sold 1.250.000 sheet music copies of "Doin' What Comes Naturally," "Sun In the Morning." "They Say That Falling In Love Is. Wonderful" and "The Girl That I Marry."

A throwaway number, really in the category of "special material" says Berlin. "was 'There's No Busi-ness Like Show Business.' Well, I'd give away the entire score for just that one number which today has become the 'theme song' of all show biz."

Bumper Season For B'way Revues

This stacks up as a bumper season for revues. Whatever the quality may be, indications are that a big lineup of plotless musical shows may buck the firstnight test on Broadway.

Tax Court Friday (17) was highlighted by the comedian's denial that he personally negotiated for the sale of Amusement Enterprises, Inc., to CBS or arranged for switch of networks for his show in 1948. Internal Revenue Bureau has ruled Benny should pay personal income taxes on his share of $2.260.000 which CBS paid for the stock of corporation which Benny contends his portion of the money constituted longterm capital gains which requires him to pay 25% rather than 75% on personal come tax.

Approximately $1,000,000 is the difference in amount of taxes to be paid by Benny. The Government claims most of the $2,260,000 was given Benny for transferring his show from NBC to CBS.

Judge Rice has taken the case under submission pending acceptance of depositions from two other witnesses, MCA prexy Lew Wasserman and Ralph Colin, CBS attorney in N. Y.

When the Judge asked Benny what his motivating factor was inselling the corporation. Benny replied: "It didn't want to sell, It was first time in my life for me to collect a hunk of money. "Rear Window" (Par), which gradually has been pushing ahead for several weeks, surged to second position. Addition of new, strong playdates and ability of the James Stewart starrer to hold so big on extehded-runs has stamped it as a money picture. "Cinerama" (Indie) is climbing to third as compared with fifth spot a week ago.

"On Waterfront" (Col) is roaring ahead currently to fourth place, highest spot it has hit. Marlon Brando starring vehicle was seventh last round. "Dragnet" (WB), second last week, is, winding fifth. "Seven Brides" (M-G), which had dipped to fourth last week, slid down further to sixth, playing in nine keys. "Broken Lance" (20th) is seventh. "Magnificent Obsession" (U), ninth a week ago, finished eighth, making the seventh week this film has been on VARIETY'S high-grosser list.

"Duel in Sun" (SRO) (reissue) also climbed to capture ninth spot. "Black Shield of Falworth" (U)

SELL RUSSIA OUR PIX, URGES SALISBURY; RKO $6 Share U.S. RADIO PROPAGANDA BLAH TO IVAN Offer Now Open

Hollywood is missing an important bet in refus-ing to sell its features to the Russians, according to Harrison E. Salisbury, the N. Y. Times corre-spondent just returned from Moscow.

spondent just returned from Moscow.
"People in Russia are crazy about the few old American films they get to see. In fact, they prefer them to their own," Salisbury told Variety last week i N. Y. "It seems like pure nonsense not to put our case before the Russian people. Here the Kremlin is willing to let us in in spite of itself. We have the key to the biggest captive audience in the world, and we're throwing it away."

American film companies, whe the Motion Picture.

American film companies, via the Motion Picture Export Assn., have had bids for pix from the Russians. However, both in the light of past experiences and in view of a "guide line" from the State Dept., they are refusing to enter into negotiations with the Red authorities.

Garbo 'Camille' Current

Salisbury said the current hit in Moscow was Greta Garbo in "Camille" and that a number of new British, French and Italian productions also can be seen. Among them is a dubbed version of "The Pickwick Papers," a British film. (When it was reported by Varietry some months back that "Pickwick" had been sold to the Soviets, this was immediately and strenuously denied.—Editor.)

The Times scribe, who's travelled all over th Soviet Union, said Russian audiences were fascinated by the detail in American films. "Hollywood pictures, almost irregardless of their quality content," re big ads for the United States," he opined. "The mere fact that we can make films without propaganda content is in our favor and always a matter of comment. There is no question that in Russia, as everywhere else. American pictures are the best and most forceful medium for selling the U. S. It's a shame we're not availing ourselves of that opportunity."

Not Used to 'Freedom'

Not Used to 'Freedom' |
Salisbury reported that Russian features tended not to be very good or very popular, but that the government has now instituted a new line which sees the content of pix pitched more towards entertainment and less towards propaganda. Ironically, he observed, Russia producers aren't yet quite sure what to make of this new freedom.

About one out of every four Soviet films is in color. Salisbury said prior to his departure he had seen a color feature, "Anna on His Neck," based on a Chekhov story.

Odd angle on the old "Tarzan" releases which the U.S.S.R. would dearly like to do away with but which remain such favorites with the populace that there the Kremlin hesitates to withdraw these fantasies.

In Samarkand in Central Asia during 1944 Salisbury found the local theatre playing 'North Star,' which, according to Salisbury, was a comedy to the Russians. On returning to Samarkand this year, he found the same house playing "Tarzan in the West." 'It was ten times more popular,' he said. Russian theatres in no way compare to their American counterparts. They're not as comfortable.

son Crusoe" in two parts.

Salisbury, who was one of 10 western newsmen covering from the Soviet capital, considers the Voice of America broadcasts to Russia virtually useless, partly due to effective Russian jamming and partly because in areas outside Moscow, where the American broadcasts do get through, the populace isn't much interested in any radio pitch from abroad. Salisbury said the radio short wave stery was vastly different when it came to the Red satellites.

One of the American phicticus to corwing on

One of the American objections to carrying on a film trade with the Russians is fear, that the pictures might be distorted and edited to suit Communist propaganda purposes. Salisbury has himself reported cuts in certain American films shown in Moscow, but is now inclined to think cuts were

'War Booty' Films

Salisbury said it was his understanding that the Russians were primarily interested in obtaining from the U.S. westerns, comedies, musicals and films with historical themes, i.e., "non-controversial" productions. "You can't expect them to buy our best, but in the end it all works in our favor," he thought action in this country.

Also, the Americans remember their experience in 1948, when MPEA prexy Eric Johnston went to Moscow and left, thinking he had a deal for some 100 pix. Salisbury said last week he thought that this 1948 arrangement was upset by Stalin personally. After that, the U. S. companies went through a frustrating experience, submitting titles to the Russians who couldn't make up their minds what to take.

3-D in Moscow

Opposite the Hotel Metropole in Moscow there is a little house playing 3-D films without the need for glasses. The N. Y. Times men found the effects quite good, as long as one sat on the side and not smack in the center. A flat screen is being used with a "curtai" of a transparent material curving in front of it. Russian studios turn out one 3-D film a year and some cartoons. They now have six stereoscopic pix altogether, including a "Robison Crusoe" in two parts.

The Russians have shown a number of pre-war American pix without permission of their U. S. producers. Among them were "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," which the Soviets have claimed as "war booty" from the Germans.

he thought.

MPEA, acknowledging that it wouldn't act unless flashed the green light by the State Dept., says that even if Washington should decide the time is ripe to send films to the Russians, this wouldn't necessarily be done. One of the aspects of dealing

CROP OF NEW DISTRIBUTORS

H'wood Sluffing Protestant Themes, PRODUCT DECLINE Realities Increasingly Plan; Sez 'Martin Luther' Exec; Time Is Ripe

Hollywood not only has failed to turn out a significant number of truly "religious" films, but also is overlooking the vast range of Protestant themes that could win the support of Protestant churches and their flocks.

Criticism was voiced in N. Y. recently by Henry Endress, chairman of the administrative committee of Lutheran Church Productions and a Lutheran church official.

He commented further on the filmmakers' constant tendency to show all men of the cloth on the screen as Catholic priests and the desirability for Hollywood to become aware of the need for a more equitable and realistic representation.

While not absolving Hollywood of blame, Endress said he understood its reasoning. "The Roman Catholic Church, in my opinion, has done a better job in encouraging writers and producers to handle religious themes and to use stories in which Catholic priests and nuns appear," he said. "Apart from that, it's easier to obtain competent technical advice from the from that, it's easier to obtain com-petent technical advice from the Catholic Church; and the color and drama of Catholic ceremony is at-tractive to film men working with visual medium. Then, too, there are the 30,000,000 Roman Catholics to be considered.

"On the other hand, the Protestant picture in the past has been somewhat confusing to producers. Not as much story material was at hand, and what there was available seemed to be 'tainted' with denominational emphasis. The producers

Monaco Visits New York; Reminded That Italians Never Kept Audit Pledge

MPEA itself would much rather forget about the whole thing, particularly since the new Italian agreement doesn't include any subsidy provisions. However, various pressures are being brought on the assn. to get a breakdown of expenses from the Italians.

penses from the Italians.

Latter, under the original accord of three years ago, were supposed to supply MPEA with an accounting. Repeated MPEA requests have fallen on deaf ears, with the IFE toppers declaring they weren't in a position to provide all the figures. Impressien is given, too, that the Italians now feel the subsidy issue has been dropped and their disposition of the American funds is no longer anyone's business.

MPEA prexy Eric Johnston has estimated that, over the three-year period, the U. S. industry handed to IFE in excess of $4,000,000. He suggested that most of the money has been used up. Film men in N. Y. although cognizant of IFE's considerable expenditures, of the impression that some of the coin still remains. Exact financial status of the American IFE has never been disclosed, although it's understood that IFE Releasing Org. has been running in the red.

It's considered likely that Monaco and Renato Gualino, the IFE general manager who arrived in N. Y. Monday (20), will discuss the future of the outfit with IFE toppers here, Latter, under the original accord They'll also confer with MPEA on questions concerning ANICA and the availability of pix for indie Italian distribs, as provided in the last film agreement. ANICA toppers would like Metro to come into the fold. At the same time, MPEA companies have their own beefs about their status in ANICA where, among other things, they feel they're inadequately consulted.

Three of the four pix in the curstars.

Three of the four pix in the current deal have already been delivered in N. Y. Understanding is that Trans-Lux will arrange for major distribution for the quartet. Negotiations for one—"Our Girl Friday" in Eastman Color—are already going on with 20th-Fox which is likely to take it.

Titles of the other three ar "Grand National Night," "Dance Little Lady" (Eastman Color), and "Trilby and Svengali," also in color. Latter is still in production and was acquired by Trans-Lux on a pre-completion basis. "There's no stipulation that all of the four must go through the same distributor. According to Gordon, the Trans-Lux deal, due for signing in N. Y. this week, will serve to provide Minter with part of the necessary financing for his next four, color pix. Minter's entire 1955 program will be oriented towards commercial appeal in the U. S.

BRAZIL REMITTANCE RATE IS ALTERED

Brazilian government has acted to artificially raise the value of the cruseiro connection with U. S. film coin remitted at the official rate of exchange. The penalty brings the exchange ratio to 34c to the dollar, almost twice the actual controlled rate.

Motion Picture Export Assn. in N. Y. was informed this week that the "Agio," the special payment on U. S. dollar remittances, has been raised from the former 7c to 15c. The official rate of exchange at the moment is 15c to the dollar.

About one half of the U. S. distrib's N. Y. share is remitted at the official rate. Brazil rates as one of Hollywood's most important foreign markets.

SERVES AS HYPO

Film industry's new technical era, with its resultant switch to fewer and bigger pictures, has had the result of bringing into the field the result of bringing into the field new motion picture companies, complete with distribution organizations. While the plans of the new outfits are still mainly in the organizational stage, it nevertheless marks a new attempt to challenge the existing major film producer-distributors.

It's conceded that the new companies are starting off with modest programs, but it's not beyond the thinking of these new producer-distribs that they will some day achieve the status of a major company. The industry's switch to "bigness" has also served to hypo such outfits as Republic and Alfied Artists, established producer-distribs of second feature and programmer product, to enter the "big" picture field and their product, backed by top star names and producers and directors, could conceivably serve as hefty competition for playing time.

While Allied and Republic are old hands at picture-making and distribution, the coming year will see new faces at the helm of newly-organized film companies. These include the Distributors Corp. of America, headed by Century Circuit topper Fred Schwartz and with former RKO sales chief Charles Boasberg as production topper, and the Hal R. Makelim company, thormer exhib John Wolfberg as a veepee. In addition to these companies, which will have both production and distribution setups. Filmakers, the Collier Young-Ida Lupino company, has expanded its operation and is now fully equipped with a distribution organization headed by Irving H. Levi Other indie producers, for a number of reasons, are also bypassing the major distribs and are making other arrangements for the releasing of their product. Prime example is the Buena Vista Distributing Corp. organized by Walt Disney to handle so-called specials from his studio. Several Allied States Assn. units are urging their members to keep tabs on film company salesmen by sending reports on them to branch managers, district managers, and to the homeoffice.

It's suggested that the exhib file a report on the salesman "telling just what happened, what was said, prices quoted and names of pictures offered, his attitude, and any other information necessary to the case." It's further suggested that reports be filed on salesmen who fall to make personal calls on exhibs or who consistently conduct business only by telephone. "Many of your exhibitors," says the bulletin of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, "would be surprised to see how many times your name is on a salesman's report when he hasn't been anywhere near you."

Independent film producers, with such notable exceptions as Samuel Goldwyn and Walt Disney, appear less and less "independent." With the continually growing accent on participation deals, the filmmakers who are identified as indies finding that full autonomy thing of the past. including those made by "outside" producers.

The lost control particulary obtains at United Artists, traditionally "the home of the independts."

UA, in addition to taking distribution rights, has a percentage of ownership of nearly every picture on its sked. Because of these varying interests and its position in obtaining bank money for the filmmakers, UA in many cases has a major voice in production budget approval. The producer often has become "independent" only in that he is working on a percentage. Further, while Col always has refused to give outside producers any say the sale of their pix, the same condition at UA represents a switch. In past, UA's filmmakers had eastern reps with authority to accept or reject, exhibitor contracts. Distributor is now discouraging this right of approval.

The combined writing talents of novelist H. E. Bates and scripter Eric Ambler have produced a fine dramatic vehicle for Gregory Peck's second British-made film which is set in the Burmese jungle in the last days of the war. The star's name will be a powerful selling factor on either side of the Atlantic but the pic is strong enough to stand on its own.

The well-knit yarn is given added dramatic qualities by the incisive direction of Robert Parrish and by Clive Donner's shrewd editing. They have lifted it out of the rut of ordinary war stories and have concentrated on developing a single character who, as the script puts it, is "round the bend." This role is superbly filled by Gregory Peck and his performance as the pilot with a tortured mind ranks with his best.

After vividly establishing the atmosphere and developing the principal characters, the action switches from the airstrip to mountainous terrain held by the Japs into which Peck has crashed his plane while on a routine flight with his navigator. Lyndon Brook, and a fellow officer. Maurice Denham From that point the entire incident concentrates on their attempts to get out with Peck in an obstinate mood and insisting they should not wait by the wreckage for help but should try and reach water. After two or three days Denham shoots himself but Peck carries his injured navigator to eventual safety.

The western action "Four Guns to the Border" is brought off satisfactorily enough to assure the picture an okay reception in the regular market for Technicolored outdoor features. As an extra fillip, the standard ingredients are spiced with some sagebrush sex which even the pure action fan will not find amiss.

Title of the William Alland production comes from Louis L'Amoun's story about four cowpokes, down on their luck, who climb to bank robbery and try for the border after their first successful job. Had they stayed on schedule everything would have worked out as planned, but they are diverted long enough to save an old gunsel and his daughter from an Indian attack. Three are killed and the fourth goes to jail, there to pay his debt to society so he can win the girl.

The scheenplay by George Van

so he can win the girl.

The screenplay by George Van Marter and Franklin Coen makes good use of the plot framework and the succession of action events have been well-staged by Richard Carlson's direction. The dramatic mood is good since it doesn't always hew the western story line in treating the usual oater cliches; and the players acquit themselves quite well in moving the plot along its 82-minute course.

Rory Calhoun and College Melland.

Rory Calhoun and Colleen Miller are the principal stars, he as the leader of the foursome, and she as the girl. Between the planning and the execution of the robbery they have met and paired off in a rainstorm; a sequence of rather high-voltage passion not usually found in regulation western filmediate. In their respective characters they contribute a forthright tone to the footage. The presence of Miss Miller, in particular, quite often pushes the scenery, horses and males way into the background.

Walter Brennan, as Miss Miller's crusty father; John McIntire, elder member of the gang; George Nader and Jay Silverheels, friendly brawlers who complete the robber quartet, all figure importantly. Nina Foch, an old friend of Calhoun's and now married to Charles Drake, the sheriff, is okay. Drake unwittingly aids the holdout when Calhoun baits him into a fight to decoy attention from the bank while the robbery is being carried out. This is one of several real rugged physical clashes in the footage. Other casters do capable work.

Carl Erskine and Russ Meyer

If there's anything worse than a humorless fantasy, it's a lifeless one. "Roogie's Bump," a baseball fantasy involving a small boy and the Brooklyn Dodgers, has both characteristics, and the result is a plodding 71 minutes of awkward and maudlin muddling. Republic's b.o. prospects are exceedingly poor on this one; even if the Brooklyn Dodgers prove an attraction, word-of-mouth will kill that off. Bottom rung of the twin-bills.

A small boy, Robert Marriot, comes to live in Brooklyn with his mother, Ruth Warrick; his granding mother, Clive Blakeney and his not ready for it, and result is a older sister, Louise Troy. The kids sagging, unreal affair with a neg-exploitation man of the other, to keep him from being exploited.

Proceedings and the acting are both wooden. Marriot, although appealing, brings little life to his part. Miss Warrick's and Miss Blakeney's roles are cut-and-dry, but Simon does nicely by his conscience-stricken manager role. Robbins' stint as the ballyhooer is out of a stereotyped mold, but William Harrigan as O'Malley delivers his bit in okay manner. The Jack Hanley-Dan Totheroh script holds neither charm nor humor, and Harold Young's direction does nothing to speed up the plodding action. As for the Dodgers, only Roy Campanella delivers a little bit of warmth to his screen attempt.

Production isn't much better, with some of those action shots of the Dodgers an insult to the intelligence of even the average with some of those action shows the Dodgers an insult to the intelligence of even the average baseball fan. Narration in one spot tells how the Brooks are in throuble while the footage shows them up at bat belting out hits, and in the climax scene, Duke Snider is shown grounding out and then coming to bat again. Editing here was exceedingly bad. Title derives from the fact that "Roogie" is the nickname for Remington, which is Marriot's name in the pic, but the title won't help the b.o. chances either.

"L'Air De Paris" is not very fresh, and also, unfortunately, marks the waning of one of the top authentic pre-war talents in director Marcel Carne. Famillar boxing story lacks pacing and roundness, with uneven thesping and characterization, to make this an ordinary film. It has veteran names of Arletty and Jean Gabin for local bookings, but for the U.S. it has only thesp monickers and a it has only thesp monickers and a possibly exploitable boxing milieu for dualer chances.

It concerns an aging boxer who dreams of training a champion. He runs a little gym with his wife, and is prone to pick kids off the streat and trai them for nothing. This happens with a young, hungry railroad worker. He thinks that this is it and training starts in earnest. However, flaw is fact that wife wants to retire to the South and doesn't like the boy. He, sin turn, gets tangled with a flashy beauty, who finally leaves him for security while he goes back to his loyal manager to try to batter his way to the top.

Naturally, he lands with the Dodgers, and from then on it's a battle between Miss Warrick and Robert Simon as the Brook's manager on the one side, and Archie Robbins as the Dodgers' ambitious exploitation man on the other, to keep him from being exploited.

Dullish handling can only partly be overcome by a careful trimming. Pic should do business on Italian runs without critical aid or word-of-mouth. Dubbing and recutting suggested for U.S. release.

suggested for U.S. release.

Adapted from the well-known Alberto Moravia best-seller, story is of a simple gal whose mother prods her into a lucrative nude modelling job, and later fails to keep her from seguing as a high-class prostie. Many men fall for her while she falls for the only one who doesn't want her—or won't admit his love for her. Pic ends with most men killed or forgotten, and her only love a suicide. Gal is left with a child, with which, the finale hints, she is to start life anew. Censorial shears have been skirted throughout, and some malerial passed is surprisingly frank.

Pic, especially at start, successfully attains a certain period atmosphere, but soon becomes overworked and hard to believe. Cliche dialog doesn't help nor does a listless performance by Gelin as the suicide. Pelegrin is good as a lover and Renato Tontini is properly sinister as a brute. Pina Piovani, as the mother, and the others are able.

Uneven cutting and a commentary unsuited to American temperament somewhat mar and lessen the impact of this underwater color (Technicolor) documentary. But it contains enough valuable, beautiful material for a trimmed U. S. release. With Walt Disney's "20,000 Leagues" and another Austro-British seadepther coming up soon, release on this item should be speeded for best results, As is, it will do well on an Italian swing. swing.

As is, it will do well on an Italian swing.

Material gathered on this Italosponsored trip to the islands of Dahlach, off the coast of Ethiopia, contains probably the consistently top nether-depth sequences ever filmed. Color quality throughout is excellent. Pic avoids false excitement raised by some previous pix of similar scope. Many sequences, such as the underwater harpooning of sharks and barracudas are unquestionably unstaged, authentic and exciting. On the luckier side, but just as striking, is a sequence showing how a shark's tiny pilot fish, disoriented by his ex-boss' death, finally in desperation takes up position in front of one of the frogmen's masks and "pilots" him on his way through the deep. And there is beauty too in the many unusual fish and underwater creatures, colorfully lensed in their natural habitat, Sensitively directed by Rudolf Jugert, "Prisoner" is handsomely mounted and avoids tearjerking elements German pix of this type often tend to. Though loaded with dialog, film unreels without dull moments and above expert contributions by all concerned. For the sake of a more satisfying happy end, it slides into a conventional turn in the second half. Yet this hardly reduces the impressive this hardly reduces the impressive overall effect.

Champ Bout as Snappy 21-Min. Short

Judicious editing has made the fight footage of Friday's (17) Rocky Marciano-Ezzard Charles championship go more exciting than the actual fight. Although all eight rounds are presented, each stanza has been neatly trimmed to present mainly the action moments. The incessant clinches and holding has been kept down to a minimum. The 21-minute picture, produced by Leslie Winik for the International Boxing Club, is being distributed by United Artists, which also handled the fight pix of the first Marciano-Charles clash.

Charles clash.

The three knockdowns—one in the second round and the two in the eighth—are dramatically reprised via slow motion which effectively points up Marciano's powerful blows.

Jimmy Powers, N. Y. News sports columnist, does a good job with the commentary, tipped the viewers what to watch for rather than attempting a blow-by-blow description. The warning of the six blows in succession which brought Charles to the canvas for the last time makes for exciting watching. Powers also calls attention to the fact that Charles' glove was still on the canvas when referee Al Berle reached the count of 10. This point ends the argument advanced by some Charles followers that the challenger got up before the 10 count.

Picture opens with a ringside view of the celebrities and focuses on Bernard Baruch, fight commissioner Bob Christenberry, IBC prexy James Norris, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., Red Skelton, and a trio of unidentified pipe-smoking femmes. The footage also includes the usual introduction of the champ and the challenger.

COURTROOM RULE ENDING?

Production Code Funds Shrink

Sharp drop in Hollywood' production this year has put the squeeze on Production Code finances with the result that the Code budget is in for some streamlining.

Code fees are based on negative costs, with pix split into seven categories. Survey shows that the major lots so far this year have put into work 103 features compared with 131 for the equivalent period last year. Indie production, too, is down from 1953. The two studios showing the most prominent drop are Republic and Metro, with each putting eight features less before the cameras; than last year. Columbia also cut down sharply, starting 20 pi this year compared with 27 in 1953. 20th-Fox is short five from last year.

While there has been a definite rise in the negative cost of films generally due to CinemaScope and other factors, the difference isn't enough to offset the financial loss to the Code from the general cutback in production.

'Code services are charged for as follows: Class A, where negative cost exceeds $500,000, the fee is $1,150; B, negative between $200,000 and $500,000, fee $1,000; C, negative $150,000 to $200,000, fee $600; D, negative $150,000 to $150,000 to $150,000, fee $300; E, negative $50,000 to $100,000, fee $500; F, negative anything less than $50,000, fee $100. All shorts command $50 for the Code seal.

Nobody Sure How Many Film Theatres Actually Operate in United States

Lively disagreement developed last week in the wake of 20th-Fox's corrected Survey showing there are currently 20,365 theatres of both the indoor and outdoor type operating in the U.S.

Some said the total was too low. Others held it was too high. Company had first put the number of theatres at 23,330. Then, following a re-check, came up with the 20,365 total.

A top distribution exec last week for any one film would run around 14,000.

Yet he offered proof that quite a few of his films had accumulated 15,000 and even 17,000 bookings in the U. S. alone. "You couldn't get that many dates if there were only 20,000 theatres to play pictures," he argued. "I think the 23,000 figure was quite correct."

Other execs said they thought the 20th-Fox survey was on the optimistic side; that whereas the 4,285 drive-ins undoubtedly were right, the 16,079 four-wallers reported operating by 20th were wide of accuracy. That would be in line with the COMPO argument during the tax fight which said that several thousand houses had (Continued on page 22)

'Danger' In O'Seas Filming: Rathvon

Hollywood, Sept. 21.

Unless a producer has learned the business of foreign production, making pictures in Europe is dangerous even when story calls for such backgrounding, according to N. Peter Rathvon, former RKO prexy who's been producing in Europe for the last three years. First two years his company concentrated on documentaries, Rathvon explained on recent arrival for a short week stay, during which he'll cast two male stars for "Embassy Baby," Eva Bartok starrer, which his company launches in Wiesbaden next month. Rathvon emphasized that his firm, during documentary production activity, "learned to avoid pitfalls that trap American production. During this time we were able to build a strong production organization." He emphasized that even with this experience production was hazardous. Rathvon intends making at least one picture annually here, starting next year, out of a program of three or four pix, saying "lace to make motion pictures is here."

End of the court-imposed limitation of two weeks on firstrun downtown playing time in Chicago, as okayed by Federal Judge Michael Igoe last week, cued many a crack in the trade about "getting the picture business back in the hands of picture people." Igoe's reversal of his own decision raised hopes among the distributors that the trade someday may stop being a lawyer's paradise. The jurist's new decision means an immediate end to the necessity of a special courtroom session each time a distrib wants an exemption from the two-week curb. Over the past seven years all companies sought, and often won, longer runs for important films but these meant the obvious legalistic expense and uncertainty concerning bookings in the Loop.

Economic Reason-Why

Economic Reason—Why
According to spokesmen on the Walt Disney side, reasons for the producer's switch to a privately owned distribution outfit, away from RKO, are (1), it will give the filmmaking unit "full control" of its own product and (2), economy of operation is figured as a likely result.

In line with the latter, the Disney org reasons that the major part of distribution money comes from key-run dates and these can be serviced by a small-scale selling force.
Disney reps point to Paramount's "Greatest Show on Earth," for example, which, they say, drew one-third of its total domestic income from only 400 firstrun engagements, the next one-third from 4,000 dates and the balance from all other subsequent runs.

$4,500,000 Tab On 'Commandments'

Further indicative of the big money which Hollywood producers are shelling out for certain "epic" films is Cecil B. De Mille's upcoming "Ten Commandments." De Mille, who is partnered with Paramount in the project, reportedly is planning on a negative investment of close to $4,500,000. It could go over that figure.

In line with this, there's still no indication of Samuel Goldwyn's releasing plans for his upcoming "Guy and Dolls." Like Disney, Goldwyn has been selling his product through its own pint-sized sales organization. Particularly significant, tradewise, is Disney's intention of selling "Leagues" through its own pint-sized sales organization. Buena Vista, headed by Leo F. Philadelphia, Jacksonville, Minneapolis and L. A. The plan now is to open additional offices in the southwest and, possibly, Cleveland. This still will give Disney only eight offices and unusually limited personnel—as in contrast with the major companies—for selling major, budgeted product. Key angle, of course, is little long-haul selling is involved, instead of the quick-release operation demanded of the large companies. Nonetheless, the effectiveness of the Disney plan will be closely watched because of all-meaningful economy which it is based upon

Minneapolis, Sept. 21.

Solid week of continuous rains and unseasonable cold has been doing boxoffice damage, but a trio of fresh arrivals, led by "King Richard and Crusaders," is coming hrough respectably. "Francis Joins Wacs" and "Malta Story" also are benefiting because of the comparative scarcity of new fare. Holdovers, still are much in evidence, include "Cinerama" in its 23d week and still as stout as ever and "The Egyptian", rounding out a huge third stanza, "Duel i Sun" and "Apache" are winners in second. sessions.

Estimates for This Week Century (S-W) (1,140; $1.75-$2.65) — "Cinerama" (Indie) (23d wk). Smash $25,000. Last week, $22,000.

Cincinnati, Sept. 21.

Downtown biz is on the climb with lots of help from two robust new bills. They are "Broken Lance" at the Albee and "Magnificent Obsession," keeping the Palace busy. Holdovers also continue to show strength with the fading of the school bell blues. "Rear Window" remains rosy at Keith's and will hold a fifth week. "Dragnet" is a velvety moveover at the Grand, "Cinerama" in 14th week at Capital is again heading uphill with addition of special matinees for students.

Estimates for This Week

Estimates for This Week
Albee (RKO) (3,100; 75-$1)—
"Broken Lance" (20th). Tall $20,000. Last week, "Dragnet" (WB) (2d wk), $14,000 at 75-$1.10 scale, Capitol (Ohio Cinema Corp.) (1,376; $1.20-$2.65)— "Cinerama" (Indie) (14th wk). Looks hefty $28,000, and a buildup after $25,200 in post-vacation lull last session.

Grand (RKO) (1,400; 75-$1.10)—
"Dragnet" (WB) (m.o.). Good $3,000. Last week, "Duel in Jungle" (WB) and "Blackout" (Indie), $7,500 at 50c-84c scale.

Toronto, Sept. 21.

Biz is hefty here for holdovers at all the deluxers, with "Seven Brides" stil. leading the town in third frame and showing little dropoff. "Magnificent Obsession" is in second place here on fourth frame, with "On Waterfront" in second stanza also big. "Sabrina" looks fine in third frame. Only newcomer is "Naked Alibi" which is rated neat at Uptown.

Estimates for This Week

When They Win At Venice, Cannes Foreign Distribs Go Term-Nuts; Kingsley Debunks Lido Fever

European film festivals, particularly at Venice and Cannes, have deteriorated into a harmless sport, with both the potential buyer and seller fencing on terms which both know neither will accept. That's the view of foreign film importer Edward Kingsley who returned last week from the Venice Fest.

"It makes up the entertainment program for the afternoon," said Kingsley: "Producers and distributors gather on the terrace of the Excelsior Hotel on the Lido beach and engage in a sparring ses-Not a single deal is final-ized."

Kingsley echoed the view of other American importers of foreign product that the producers have an inflated idea of the value of their product. According to Kingsley, who heads Kingsley International Films, the foreign producers are still setting their prices on the basis of the success of the early post-war films and haven't relaized to what extent the American market has changed.
"It takes them about a year to can market has changed.

"It takes them about a year to me dow in their terms," said Kingsley, "and at the time much of the value of the festival awards has diminished. Films shown at the 1953 festivals are only now in negotiati If the foreign producers would accept sensible terms at the beginning, they would have the advantage of the timeliness and the publicity value of the festivals. The value of the picture decreases by constant screenings for various importers."

Charged Atmosphere

Charged Atmosphere:
Kingsley repeated another complaint frequently voiced by Ameripixites who attend the European fests. "The atmosphere is charged with native politics and nationalism. The country in which the festival is held is almost certain to receive an award although frequently, everyone agrees its enforcements. tain to receive an award attitudge frequently everyone agrees its entry does not merit accolade. The Italians dominate Venice, the French control Cannes, and the Russians rule the Iron Country festivals." (See adjoining column for Rome dateline story on same themse) for Rome dateline story on same theme.)

With assurance of an award for the host country, there is also a tendency to spread the awards around, to throw a bone here and there to eliminate any hard feelings, according to Kingsley. Best example of this, he said, was the best acting award to Jean Gabin which constituted France's laurel "nromised for 1954." The audience, Kingsley reports, was almost unanimous in its opinion that Marlon Brando should have won for "On the Waterfront" and vocally demonstrated its displeasure. Kingsley feels that the holding of a festival in a neutral country, one that is not a prime producer of films, light help to eliminate the frequent charges of "fix" and the bitterness that prevails at the conclusion.

Practical Aspects

Practical Aspects
While pointing out the negative aspects of the fests, Kingsley says they serve a purpose. "It's a good place meet the production people and the press of various countries. And it ves as a clearing house where some of the illusions about the American market may be cleared up."

He noted that the festivals are of more value to the European distribs than to the Americans. "In Europe a festival award means something in buying the film at the boxoffice. In the U. S. its value is limited."

Festivals, too, Kingsley pointed out, are social affairs and tourist attractions and must be considered in that light evaluating the overall effect.

Booked Weekends

Easton, Pa., Sept. 21.
Catholics in this area have opened a drive against "indecent" motion pictures. Impetus was given by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John A. McKenna, of Philadelphia, at a meeting of over 500 members of Holy Name Society members.
Joseph Reilly, of Philadelphia, on the Philadelphia Archdiocese committee for clean films, said that "the main object is to work with the motion picture manager rather than against him." He stated that the Legion of Decency, which he represents, wants to have good public relations with theatres. He urged films involving violent crime and sex be shown during the week, rather than Saturdays and Sundays, when children chiefly attend.

There have been reports of an MPAA offer to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to join the organization in a top spot, possibly on the Coast. MPAA has since denied any talks with Dewey who's stepping down as N. Y. governor.

Johnston, on at least one occasion, has stated he thought he was getting too much money from the MPAA. There is every indication that the contract extension and the added salary coin were a spontaneous gesture of confidence in Johnston on the part of the board and that the MPAA-MPEA topper hadn't asked for it.

Reporting on the MPAA board's action, Loew's Nicholas M. Schenck said Johnston's services had been exceptional and that the board's vote on the new contract had been unanimous. "His (Johnston's) talent and leadership have

'Duel' to Exploit, Not Fight, Censor In Memphis Area

Selznick plan now is to use the Binford tab as a peg for sales in drive ins surrounding Memphis and across the Mississippi River in West Memphis, Ark. It's reasoned that a court contest with Binford likely would be involved and costly. Distributors usually figure Memphis as yielding about $12,000 in gross revenue on an average "A" in gross revenue on an average "A" pic. Thus, taking on Binford in a legalistic duel over any one film would not have sufficient monetary inspiration.

"Blood-Tinted Screen' Memphis, Sept. 21.
When Mayor Frank Tobey of Memphis requested the Memphis censor, Lloyd T. Binford, to take another peek at "Duel in The Sun," he was acting for an attorney friend of his, Blanchard Tual, who is representative for Lippert Pictures, Inc. This request drew a roar from Binford, the town's unique 88-year-old guardian of morality.

"We do not plan to preview the picture again. It was the vilest thing I ever saw the screen, which is why we banned it in the first place. It is dirty and filthy, so that they couldn't clean up." Binford told Variety "we're not going to look at it and what's more we don't deal with lawyers on matters like this. Anyhow, I'm satisfied we'd reject this dirty picture again if we did preview it."
Binford revealed that when "Duel in the Sun" was originally banned he penned the following note to producer David O. Selznick in Hollywood:

"This production contains all the impurities of the foulest human dross. It is sadism at its deepest level. It is the fleshpots of Pharaoh, modernized and filled to overflowing. It is a barbaric symphony of passion and hatred spilling from a blood tinted screen. It is mental and physical putrefaction."

Queried on Binford, Mayor Tobey told Variery "I have never seen the picture and I know nothing whatsoever about it. Certainly if in the judgment of Mr. Binford the picture does not warrant ing whatsoever about it. Certainly if in the judgment of Mr. Binford the picture does not warrant a re-review that is final as far as I'm concerned."

Pulitzer Prize Principles Seen As Urgent Need for Venice: Tourists Echo Film Biz Yelps

Rome, Sept. 14.

Lots of questions were being asked here following the 1954 Venice Film Festival, generally regarded as pretty "shameless" in its cynical bestowal of awards according to national bias rather than artistic impartiality.

While complaints against the Venice cinema rodeo have been heard in previous years, grleyance was never so shrill or obvious. And one factor seems entirely new, in 1954: the cry of "we wur robbed!"
Heretofore pretty much an inthe-family film industry bleat was taken up by the stream of American tourists whose dollars and goodwill mean so much to Italy. (For instance, hotelmen in Florence are seriously urging Government action to mute noisy motorcycles because these annoy tourists trying to sleep in swank hotels.)

tels.)
Whether tourist yelps on top of Hollywood yelps will sway Italian authorities is, of course, moot. Americans conditioned to the realities of "public opinion" and "the engineering of good will" are of the opinion that the Italian film industry, ditto the officials of the Venice Festival, cannot remain indifferent and cannot refrain from "reform" gestures in the light of the near-universal ill-repute the 1954 actions engendered.

Principle* Vague
Admittedly, Americans have dif-

Admittedly, Americans have difficulty understanding the Latin brand of politicking and the Latin tendency to play everything by ear rather than in respect to abstract "principle." Those who know Italian psychology feel it is naive to expect that Venice would ever adopt any democratic voting system such as operates in Hollywood on the annual Oscar awards.

Theoretically the Venice jury on the annual Oscar awards.

Theoretically, the Venice jury system (with the Italians having the majority) is not unlike the committee systems employed by such American awards as the Pulitzer Prizes, the Peabody Radio-TV Medals. The Sylvania Clocks and others. The difference is entirely in terms of carefully-nurtured reputation for scrupulous impartiality. The Venice Film Festival, by American reckoning, ought to be, like Caesar's wife; above suspicion, but is anything but.

No realistic American film per-but is anything but.

No realistic American film personage would advocate Yankee withdrawal from, or boycott of, Venice. That would be, to quote comment heard at Doney's Cafe here, "biting off our noses to spite our faces. After all, we do get our share of European and world publicity and there are some bonuses in that Venice film entries play the Italian market outside the quota." (Nearly 500 European journalists get free room and board at the get free room and board at the Lido.)

while the Hollywood indus-

But while the Hollywood industry will undoubtedly string along with the Venice event, despite all criticisms, it has now become a fixed idea that no American feature will ever be allowed to walk away with the Golden Lion of St. Mark. Silver lions (second prizes) may go to the Yanks, but it's doubtful, after 1954, if any illusions remain about the Grand Prix.

Maybe the Italians basically don't care that such an impression is widespread. On the other hand, an American observer, with a trained sensitivity to public opinion, would expect a serious attempt by the Italian auspices to create a reputation for concern with unbiased picking. The Italian festival, at this writing, almost totally lacks prestige as regards impartial, choice. The conviction is pretty general that prizes go where the Italians, either for sentiment or self-interest, want them to go.

The Venice Film Festival, purposely staged at the end of, and tending to extend the season of the Lido is very clear by the 18-day sellout state of the hotels (at highway-robbery tariffs) and by the existence of an elaborate building, used only one month every year, to house the Festival and provide handout and lounge facilities for

That is just one more way of suggesting that there is much too much investment in the Venice Film Festival to allow it to stay, as at the moment it surely is, be smirched by its own performance. When the time arrives that hard-bitten veteran journalists covering the Festival cannot invedict the rethe Festival cannot predict the results days and weeks in advance, then and then only the Festival may be immune to wisecracks.

N.Y. Says: If (A Question) Rank Buys Theatres In U.S.A., That Should 'Educate' London Trade

J. Arthur Rank plan to acquire a string of U. S. theatres to show-case his product was received by the trade in N. Y. with a mixture of surprise and satisfaction. General reaction was that such a venture would be a good thing since it would serve to point up to Rank and his associates the realities of American market.

The Rank Organization at one point ran both the Winter Garden Theatre and the Park Avenue Theatre in N. Y. and lost money on atre in N. Y. and lost money on both.

At a press conference in London last week, Rank expressed dissatisfaction with the returns of his pix in the U. S. where, he held, they hadn't reached the mass public. This, he sald, was in sharp contrast to the rest of the world where British films are doing well and can even compete with American exports on an equal basis. A U. S. circuit of about 50 houses, to be built up when the British government grants convertibility of earnings, would solve the Rank problem via the wider infroduction of his pix in this country, it was suggested.

Check in N. Y. reveals that the U. S. earnings of the Rank pix this year are approximately 15% behind last year, which would in part explain the Rank unhappiness.

American observers, however, see it another way. 'It's time that Mr. Rank started making a distinction between 'good' pictures and 'commercial' pictures,' commented one exhibitor. "It's all very well to talk about artistic quality, but to us it's the boxoffice appeal that counts."

counts."

In the same vein, another exhibitor observed that it was time for Rank to stop demanding and to start delivering. "Let him give us films that look like moneymakers, and we'll be happy to play them," he said. "It's just nonsense to charge that there is any kind of exhibitor resistance to the showing of British pictures."

At Universal Alfred E. Daff

the showing of British pictures."

At Universal, Alfred E. Daff, exec v.p., saw the development as "a very good thing." He said U, which handles many of the Rank pix in the U. S., was making every effort to gain optimum results, and that he welcomed anything that would point the way to even greater returns.

The Rank argument, that his pix should do well in the U. S. because they're successful elsewhere abroad, is seen by American industryites as a dangerous fallacy. "You can't compare the two," was one comment. "Abroad, they need pictures. And particularly where films are dubbed, audiences don't distinguish too much between films are dubbed, audiences don't distinguish too much between whether it's a British or an American film. But in the U. S. that situation doesn't hold true. American exhibitors can do without foreign imports, and if they play them it's very often in the face of definite audience resistance."

Opinion is frequently expressed that the British film at the moment is reaching virtually the entire audience that wants to see it, and that no additional theatres will push it much past this saturation point

'I don't see how Rank can say his definition of the see how Rank can say his pictures aren't being shown widely enough," said one circuit exect. "He ought to recognize his limitations. Right now, any of his pictures that are of merit get a showning in the art houses. And there are enough of those so that practically anyone interested in seeing a Rank picture has access to it. So where would it help him to take on his own theatres? You can't push people into seeing something they don't particularly want to see."

He added that, in his opinion, Rank would be far better off trying for long runs in the smaller situations. Example cited is "Genevieve" which had excellent reviewes. Film didn't play the major circuits, but in the N. Y. area alone played 61 houses. It's argued that, considering the expense of color prints in any major circuit engagement, U took in more money from these 61 dates than had it been able to get a circuit break for the film.

American market would free the British industry of the necessity of the Eady tax, the National Film for the Eady tax, the National Film Finance Corp. and other economic Truthes for production. Furthermore, he thought, such a guarantee and of an anglo-American film agreement all together. He said discussions should between the Motion Picture Assn. of America and U. London, U got 4,400 dates and took in gross rentals of over $600,000, according to reliable sources in N. Y. If this was disappointing to Rank, it was explained at the time that the Coronation subject had been well covered by the time the Rank color film version arrived, 20th-Fox's CinemaScoped screen report of the Queen's and the Duke's world tour this year also fell flat.

American trade comment last week was that, in repeatedly at tacking U. S. exhibs for their implied unwillingness to give British, i.e., Rank's pix a break, Davis wasn't exactly creating friends for himself his organization and that his attitude was hardly good public relations. Furthermore, said one important exhib in N. Y. who frequently shows British imports, "If Rank decides to go into competition with us, let him. But surely he can't expect us to keep playing his pictures."

There was speculation that the Rank suggestion to buy theatres was not to be taken too serious and that he may have had political motives in voicing it.

It's generally expected that, since free convertibility is unlikely until and unless it is decreed by the British Government as an overall policy, the Americans may make some effort to raise the basic amoual dollar remittance from Britain to around $20,000,000 from the current $17,000,000. With the various bonuses, this would raise dollar transfers to around $23,000,000.

fact, for many months now there has been barely enough money left in Britain to cover the regular dollar remittance. 1954 dollar remittances run to around $20,000,000, approximately half of the Americans' N. Y. share. Half of the unremittables is available for production in Britain.

The British, among other things, are concerned over the possibility that, as the trend continues towards full convertibility the Americans may lose their incentive for producing in Britain. O'Brien, on his recent visit to the U. S., opined that the American companies should enter into a voluntary agreement to make minimum of 10 feature pix in Britai come what may.

In N. Y. yesterday (Tues.), Fayette W. Allport, the MPEA's London rep, opined that full convertibility would not necessarily benefit the U. S. companies since it might bring with it a drop in the value of the sterling.

O'Brien commented last week that a guarantee of 5% of the American market would free the British industry of the necessity for the Eady tax, the National Film Finance Corp. and other economic crutches for production. Furthermore, he thought, such a guarantee would eliminate the need for an Anglo-American film agreement all together. He said discussions should be started between the Motion Picture. Assn. of America and U. S. exhibs.

London, Sept. 21. Having failed to make the neces

Having tailed to make the necessary impact on the American market by their films alone, the J. Arthur Rank Organization is contemplating buying into the U.S. exhibition industry. They are awaiting a government greenlight on convertibility to make this possible and hope that in that way they will eventually succeed in making the U.S. picture-going public conscious of the entertainment value of British films.

The failure of British pix to conquer the American market is covered in a single short sentence in the J. Arthur Rank balance sheet published last Wed. (15: "I am sorry to report that the overall results which we obtain continue to be unsatisfactory."

Insisting that British pix were not grossing one percent of the total revenue in the American territories, British exec declared that they were able to compete in every other country against American-made product, but in the United States they had failed to reach the mass cinema-goer. Citing as an example their Technicolor coronation production of "The Queen is Crowned," John Davis, Rank's deputy chairman, revealed that they had sent 150 prints to the United States. Only 87 were put into circulation and the total gross was below $600,000. Another example quoted was the reception to "Genevieve," one of the top grossers in the home territory last year. This had earned less than $500,000 in the United States market.

British topper himself explained that on his first visit to America with Davis he was told that what was acceptable in Canada would be acceptable in the U.S. They were lavishly wined and dined in America but irrespective of the fact, that their product earned high prajse and big grosses in the Canadian market: they, had failed to in make the requisite in roads into the U.S. market. In the Canadian dominion they controlled more than 200 theatres and had just had their most successful veer ever Hollywood AFL Film Council in-Hollywood AFL Film Council in-tra-mural fight over methods of combatting so-called "runaway" production broke out in the open when the council last week repudi-ated an attack on Gregory Peck by Herb Aller, chairman of its foreign production committee. Of the council's disavowal of his attack on Peck, Aller commented: "I will be waiting at the council meeting in two weeks to see what the Screen Actors Guild has to propose in connection with this matter. This is not-a dispute between SAG and my local, 659, over Peck. It's a matter of principle affecting thousands of workers in the industry and merchants in our community. I expect the committees and council to deliver results for the people of Hollywood and I will insist on an aggressive and determined campaign. As chairman of the foreign production committees I intend to get action and not become ensnarled in rep tape."

Council, obviously resenting Aller's releasing statements without its official sanction, declared: "All the unions in the film council are active in fighting unnecessary, runaway foreign production by American producers, which takes jobs away from Hollywood. There are many complicated factors involved in the issue of American production abroad, including the large amount of money which American films earn in foreign countries, and we know by experience that this problem cannot be solved by irresponsible statements." At the same meeting the council contradicted British labor leader Tom O'Brien's recent assertion that the council is backing down on its opposition to U. S. producers who make pix abroad to take advantage of foreign subsidies, lower costs or other "unfair" inducements. Council said it will continue to watch and police the situation, and will continue its discussions on such problems with union reps in other countries.

Washington, Sept. 21.
Hollywood film exporters want two major changes in GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade), international treaty of which this nation is a signatory.
In a letter to Samuel C. Waugh, assistant secretary of state, Eric Johnston pledged the suport of MPEA to GATT, but strongly urged these changes to benefit our exporters of motion pictures:

(1) Elimination of Article 4

(1.) Elimination of Article 4 which authorizes a country to reserve quotas on its screens for domestic motion pictures. This restriction, in England, France and resuretion, in England, France and many other foreign nations, pro-tects playing time for home pro-duced product and limits the avail-able playing time for imported films.

(2.) Elimination of motion pictures from coverage under Article 12 of the treaty. Under this section (2.) Elimination of motion

(2.) Elimination of motion pictures from coverage under Article 12 of the treaty. Under this section many foreign countries place quotas on the number of American pictures which may be imported into those countries.

Johnston letter is the official presentation of MPEA to a committee headed by Secretary Waugh. The committee is now hearing complaints from American business, and is considering amendments to GATT. GATT, signed, 1947, hasn't been changed since. An international meeting will be held in Geneva this November to consider modifications. The Waugh committee will represent the United States there.

Writing about Article 4, Johnston said: "While this provision was reluctantly agreed to in 1947 as representing the least objectionable type of quantitative restriction, we believe that its present application in some cases has gone beyond the bounds of necessity or of original intent. Screen quotas under Article 4 should be permissible only in accordance with the infant industry principle, and should no longer be permissible when a local film producing industry has in one way or another attained a viable status."

Johnston said foreign countries claim they need Article 12 as a protection against American pictures in order to prevent excessive drain of dollars. But, points out the MPAA prexy, dollar earnings, can be frozen in foreign countries irrespective of how many American pictures are permitted to be screened there.

irrespective of how many American pictures are permitted to be screened there.

He further points out: "The relationship between quantity of films imported and the balance of payments position of any country is at best extremely tenuous and indirect. 'There is no close correlation between the number of films imported and their earnings, since boxoffice receipts are primarily responsive to the quality rather than to the quantity of films; and than to the quantity of films, and the importation of a motion picture does not involve an immediate dollar payment since film rentals are paid in the local currency."

Equity had been trying for some time to meet Galt to discuss financial and other conditions for artists appearing in his theatres, but Galt would not agree to one meeting, McCrindle alleged. Now there was a "growing conspiracy of silence," and between Equity and Galt there existed a feeling of "deep and bitter hostility."

Wages paid to chorines were also attacked by McCrindle, who said $15 weekly was too low. On this they were supposed to eat, pay for lodgings, dress smartly and keep their hair neat.

Ton Film Men Asked To Reorganize Mex Prod. To Regain Latin-Am. Biz

The likely prospect of Hollywood and Europe corraling the Central South American pic market because playdates of Mexican films down there have slumped to a shocking new low has prompted the four organizations, which finance production of most Mexican pix (also do most distributing of them abroad) to name a committee of top producers in an effort to regain this market. These produc-ers, who also are experts in dis-tribution, will reorganize produc-tion via stressing quality.

These four are Cinex, which the government recently formed to control pic distribution outside Mexico, the trade's bank, Banco Nacional Cinematografico, Peliculas Mexicanas and Peliculas Nacionales, oldline and biggle indie home-export distributors. These all admit that the trouble Mexican pix are having south of the Guatemalan border is that they are under par in quality, a fact that is becoming more and more apparent.

The committee named consists of Gregorio Wallerstein, Mario Zacarias, Juan Banders, Pedro Gallindo, Blas Lopez Fandos and Eduardo Garduno.

Underscoring that unless Mexico acts quickly to remedy the situation down south, the U.S. and Europe will take over perhaps 100% the committee is mustering top producers for quality film making. As class will dominate new productions, the committee thinks that only 70 pix must be made annually. When markets get stronger, production will be upped, the big four promises.

Picture Production Workers

Picture Production Workers Union (STPC) is being approached by the committee for adjustment by the committee for adjustment because much fewer workers will be needed for the reduced pic which compares with a yearly production total of 100 or more. Committee hopes that STPC will see eye-to-eye on proposition that fewer but better pix are needed to hypo Mexican pic trade, which is for the good of both employer and worker.

May Reach New Low In 1954, Sagging to 86 Mexico City, Sept. 14.

Film production this year will reach a new low for recent years, with 95 and possibly 86 the total by next Dec. 31. Hector Fernandez; Assn., revealed this estimate which is based upon the fact that until Aug. 31, production totalled 66 pix.

Fernandez doesn't see 20, films being made between now and the end of the year. However, some producers think production may reach 30 in the final four months. Fernandez, and the end of the year However, some producers think production may reach 30 in the final four months. Fernandez frankly pointed out that the way things are in Mexico and in countries which are the best markets for Mexican films, it would be imprudent to turn out more than this small number this year. He figures that 95 will amply take care of homs and export requirements.

Mexican film production has averaged 100 pix or more annually during the past several years. Too often, however, the big production for lay yielded too many boxoffice duds, at home and abroad. Trend is to stress quality over quantity. Trade has higher hopes for the 1954 lineup both here and in decrease and read the form opened day-date at the Florida, Gaumont and Capitol.

The Entertainment Board insists that release permits for Yank pix are not suspended but merely delayed because of the current booking scramble. Apparently part of the delay stems from the native producers' insistence on priority for their releases. But because a majority of recent pix failed to draw at the boxoffice or meet the advantageous holdover terms guaranteed Argentine-made product, U.S. films may get their release certificates sooner than expected. Even the zany comedies made here, top moneymakers in former years, have lost their appeal.

Among the several vital matters taken up by Robert Corkery, MPEA rep in Latin America, on his visit here, was the matter of expediting release permits. Thawing of frozen coin via complicated exchange deals was another portant subject.

Incidentally, for the first time since vaudeville acts became obligatory, the Gran Rex has tied up advance bally on "Samson" with blurbs about the accompanying show. The Ekatherina Galantha Ballet has been set to play with this pic, and being given a break in all advertising.

"The Robe" (20th) is now in its 24th week at the Broadway, with an estimated take of $876,000 in the first 20 weeks. Special upped scale of $2 makes this money possible here. Thus the overall take from admissions was $850,000, short of 'the anticipated $1,000,000 gate. It's apparent that the two delays because of rain Wednesday (15) and Thursday (16) hurt the attendance more at the Stadium than it did at many of the closed-circuit theatres and drive-ins. The June meeting of Marciano and Charles brought in $500,000 at the Stadium and an estimated $450,000 from theatres.

Despite the two postponements and the scheduling of the fight for Friday (17) night, a lush time for picture business, Nate Halpern's Theatre Network Television succeeded in keeping the hookup tact. Not a single theatre dropped out.

The necessity to clear the required long lines.

The International Boxing Club arrangement with the Gillette Razor Co, which stages the Friday night bouts on home tv at 10 p.m. The deal stipulates that the IBC cannot stage a rival event at the same time.

The deal with the N. Y. ballparks which does not permit a fight in competition with a baseball game. The Giants were playing at the Polo Grounds that night. As if turned out, the diamond contest ended at about 10:30 p.m. and some fans hurried to the Stadium in time to catch the main event.

We might feel a shortage in November in smaller situations where we're on multiple changes. But I've never had as comfortable feeling about the quality. The tv cable opened in our area a year ago last July and this had a severe effect while it was new. But with the kind of pictures we have now I know we're not going to get bumped."

"Fair," in the view of company sales toppers, means a rental that's larger than that a theatre operator may have paid before on the standard pix.

William C. Gehring, exec assistant sales chief at 20th, is currently engaged in holding regional meets with his sales staff to explain to his own men the 20th policy of "live and let live," as he put it. He said in N. Y. last week that frequently the field is guided by a rather rigid precedent and that it's his intention to advise his sales men on overall policy and individual problems as they arise in connection with CinemaScope selling.

nection with CinemaScope selling.
Asked how 20th might arrive at the determination of a "fair" flat rental, Gehring suggested this might be done simply by letting a theatre book four or five of 20th's C'Scope pix and then sitting down with the exhib and o.o. the take as means of arriving at an equitable figure.

20th also is taking a flexible policy on the question of preferred playing time. Where the situation warrants, and the product has backed up on a theatre, the distrib may agree to a midweek booking, Gehring said, stressing all the while that it was a matter of deciding each case individually. He said the problem of preferred playing time and exhib opposition to it was a matter of constant discussion and would be solved only by a distrib determination to understand, and appreciate the exhibitor's predicament.

Gehring said that, while the flat

Gehring said that, while the flat rentals from many theatres may be very small, "cumulatively they add up, and that's where our profit is." He also commented on the exhibs' assumption that the distributor should make concessions due the theatre's outlay for C'Scope equipment. "We do it," he said, "but actually I don't see why we should. The exhibitor didn't install the equipment and the new screen to do 20th-Fox a favor. He did fi because he needed something new to survive. And that something new was CinemaScope. Back in the days when sound first came in I don't remember anyone being concerned about what the theatre spent for it. After all, he either had sound or he closed shop. In the long run, it worked out to hi advantage."

Indiana Seeks High Court Okay to Tax Films From Out-of-State Exchanges

Washington, Sept. 21.
Question of whether motion pictures transmitted from out-of-state points for exhibition in Indiana should be immune from state taxes on film rental income has been posted in a petition filed with the Supreme Court. Petition, filed by the State of Indiana, seeks review of a decision by the Indiana Supreme Court which held that a Warner Bros. picture received from its Chicago exchange for exhibition in northern Indiana constituted interstate commerce and was therefore not subject to state tax.

The case does not involve films

Rubi is the beneficiary of a capital gains deal as a result of his decision to exit the company at this time. Under terms of the Metro retirement plan, he elected to receive his retirement fund in one lump sum. He reportedly exited with a sum which also included his cut of a residual rights deal similar to that of former production chief Louis B. Mayer, Mayer, in a negotiated settlement of the residual rights arrangement, later received $2,750,000. There is a possibility that Loew's may attempt to negotiate a similar settlement with Rubin. In addition to Rubin, the estate of the late living Thalberg also receives certain residual rights.

Although there have been many changes in the industry since he entered it 40 years ago, Rubin notes little changes in distrib-exhib relationships. "There has always been arguing about the price of pictures," he commented. Rubin recalled the days when the film companies were turning out one picture a week at the cost of $15,000 each.

Although he has spent nearly a Atthough the picture business, he likes to reminisce of the days he served as an assistant district attorney (1910-1914) and Deputy Police Commissioner of New York (1914).

Socko Product Excites Chicago Showmen But Longruns Create Prospective All-Time Bottleneck

Chicago, Sept. 21.
Chicago exhibs aren't doing their Christmas shopping quite this early, but there's already a general air of confidence that the Yule promises exceptional tidings. With studios hatching one big pic after another, there'll be goodies for everyone, and lots and lots to choose from.
But from another.

But from another viewpoint, the distributors', there's going to be too much good product, too many pix to find placement for at once and too few theatres to put them in. Result may be that more houses would join the firstru sweep-stakes, for the end-of-year holiday period at least, and many of them would have to be situations outside the Loop. side the Loop.

side the Loop.

The scramble to sell pix that need 1954 release dates has already begun. Each company has a sheaf to unload and, coincidentally, nearly every theatre has a fine supply already on the hook. Majority of these films are holdover calibre and many are such as need healthy long runs to earn their keep for the studios.

Oriental is stocked for the rest of the year with 20th-Fox product, "Woman's World' set for October, "Desiree" to open for Thanksgiving, and "No Business Like Show Business" due to follow for the Yule. Need for a strong newie at holiday time may cut short the normal playing time of some of these pix by a couple weeks.

GLOWMETER SCREENS SEEK ADDED CAPITAL

Buffalo, Sept. 21.
Glowmeter Corp. of N. Tonawanda, N. Y., manufacturer of motion picture screens, this week filed a petition for reorganization in U. S. District Court here alleging that it lacked working capital to continue operations. Debts are listed as $973,000 with assets of $408,000 and cash on hand of $19.09. Management of the company has been taken over by Harold Tracy, a Norwich businessman, who replaces Agis Mihalakis, founder of the five-year-old company, as president. ident.

Glowmeter has been manufac-turing various types of large screens for theatres throughout the screens for theatres throughout the country and at one time was reported to have received $250,000 advance from 20th Century-Fox for screen installations. New capital will be put into the business and tils announced that the plant will resume operations shortly but on a "very much reduced scale."

CINEMASCOPE

The second of th

WE of Twentieth Century-Fox this month celebrate the first anniversary of CinemaScope.

We do so in a spirit of gratitude for CinemaScope has proven to be an instrument for the restoration of the supremacy of motion pictures as popular entertainment.

We are grateful that the courage and vision of an entire industry helped to make CinemaScope one of the greatest and most invigorating events in motion picture history since the advent of sound.

Just a year ago, anxiety pervaded this industry because of declining theatre attendance due largely to the initial impact of free television in the home. More than 6,000 theatres had closed. People wondered what had happened to a habit established through the decades as one of the ingrained American ways of life—going to the movies.

But here at Twentieth Century-Fox we resolved that the same showmanship that had created a three billion dollar industry out of a back-street nickelodeon could save the day. We were certain that with a fresh form of motion picture entertainment the world would find its way back to the theatre doors.

So, out of a compelling necessity, which is the mother of all invention, CinemaScope came on the scene September 16, 1953 with the realism, impact and story-telling range afforded by CinemaScope's combination of revolutionary lenses, screens and 4-track magnetic Stereophonic Sound.

Something had come to the screen that enabled audiences to feel, breathe and live the spirit of whatever romance, adventure, history or great endeavor was portrayed in glowing CinemaScope.

Today, CinemaScope has earned world-wide acceptance and acclaim. Today attendance at motion picture theatres has shot upward.

EAR YOUNG TODAY . CINEMASCOPE IS ONE YEAR YOUNG TODAY

Reprinted from THE WALL STREET JOURNAL, September 16, 1954

A year ago only one Cinema Scope motion picture had been produced, and today 97 Cinema-Scope pictures are in release, in production or preparation in the United States and in foreign countries.

After one year, the total number of theatres equipped for CinemaScope in the United States and Canada is 8,100 and the world-wide total is 11,100 which represents 75% of our income possibilities, this being an achievement far beyond our fondest expectations.

After one year the estimated domestic theatre investment in CinemaScope equipment is $66,875,000; and that in foreign countries, $16,500,000

This is why we extend our gratitude to the thousands of exhibitors who backed the judgment of Twentieth Century-Fox with their own foresight, matching their courage with their diminishing dollars. They re-equipped their theatres to fit our dreams and the public's desires, making Cinema-Scope a reality and a by-word.

In the record of CinemaScope's success, which is still being written, we must include our acknowledgment of the cooperation of other producing companies in adopting the new medium and joining in the production of CinemaScope pictures.

We include in this acknowledgment: Loew's, Inc., Walt Disney Productions, Columbia Pictures, Warner Bros., Universal-International, R.K.O. and United Artists, and many independent producers in the United States and abroad.

In the same manner we express our thanks to equipment manufacturers throughout the world who re-tooled and accelerated their production in the tremendous transition period.

We are grateful, above all, to the public for recognizing instantaneously our effort to satisfy its advancing tastes in entertainment.

CinemaScope has revived the movie-going habit of the American public.

This is a fact of enormous importance because the American Motion Picture Industry since its inception has striven not only to inspire and entertain, but to be a world-wide evangel of the American way of life, spreading knowledge everywhere of this country's achievements.

CinemaScope has thus helped to make our industry an important factor in our national life.

And we rejoice in the many congratulatory letters and telegrams we have received from exhibitors throughout the world on this, the first birthday of CinemaScope, which has made history and triggered a veritable explosion of vigorous new ideas in motion picture making.

We of Twentieth Century-Fox pledge to you, the public and the exhibitors and producers of all the world, all our energies and resources in developing each year new technical advancements and even finer CinemaScope productions and techniques in order to create greater satisfaction on the part of greater audiences.

In gratitude for your cooperation, encouragement and support, we dedicate ourselves to the one unceasing endeavor of serving the theatres of the world with such matchless motion picture entertainment for the public that no present or future competition will challenge its popular supremacy.

Film industry reaction to the Skiatron filing was mixed. From the very start, producing companies have shown a considerable interest in the potential of toll-ty. Prior to Skiatron Electronics & TV Corp. licensing the Subscriber-Vision rights to Skiatron TV, the Fox company, both Warner Bros. and 20th-Fox had approached Skiatron Electronics on the possibility of buying into the system. Zenith and Par?

Still a questionmark, too, is the attitude of the Skiatron competition, Zenith (Phonevision) and Paramount. Fox said this week that he hadn't been contacted by either of the two outfits, and so a common front before the FCC appears unlikely at the moment. Voluntary restriction to ulft by Skiatron isn't considered more than an opening wedge since, if pay-as-you-see is successful, it's thought unlikely that the rest of the vhf broadcasters wouldn't jump on the bandwagon.

Considered more than an opening wedge since, if pay-as-you-see is successful, it's thought unlikely that the rest of the vhf broadcasters wouldn't jump on the bandwagon.

Fox's application didn't restrict itself to Skiatron's Subscriber-Viston system, but asked the Commission to modify existing rules and regulations to permit telecasting on "a commercial subscription basis." Thus, Skiatron asked for a rolling on the broad principle rather than a specific system or any specific area.

Limited Cities?

Number of questions remain. One concerns the basic patents involved in subscription-tv, with Zenith already, hinting that thas the patent field sewn up. Another question, and that's a poser for the FCC. whether there'll be any limiting the number of cities which any one system may be allowed to operate and the degree of compatibility that must among all systems employed.

Legalites in N. Y. have raised the fine point whether, under the powers granted the FCC, a hearing of toll-tv, is really necessary, and whether the Commission couldn't just order its introduction along with setting the necessary standards. In the light of certain opposition, it's felt that a hearing is inevitable.

Subscription-tv proponents feel that opposition from exhibs, however violent, wouldn't deter the FCC from an affirmative ruling if it's so inclined. Theatres' pressure could have an effect when it comes to the supply of film for toll-tv.

New 1954 Peaks For Amusements

By MIKE WEAR

Just when many in Wall Street felt that the "play" had gone out of amusement shares, seven new 1954 highs were racked up in last week's stock market. Of the seven, film theatre issues accounted for four of the new peaks. The stock market as a whole was marked by an upsurge of blue chip issues while others lagged somewhat, making the showing in the film and cinema stock group all the more amazing.

while others lagged somewhat, making the showing in the film and cinema stock group all the more amazing.

Two important investment houses resumed buying into film stocks after several years, it became known in the Street. One group has been accumulating ABC-Paramount shares for a number of weeks while still another big house only last week began picking up Loow's stock. Persistent purchases in ABC-Par sent that stock to 2034, new ground for '54, and an advance of '75c on the week. Loow's held firm at 18½ unchanged for the week. This price represented only a slight differential from the year's peak of 19½ which was made in the preceding week. Showing was rated excellent in view of fact that the stock only went ex-dividend the weck before.

The shares of 20th-Fox made a new high at 28½, and then backed away a little. However, the shares wound up at 28, for a gain of moving up with 20th-Fox, pushed to a new peak of 10½, for a gain of 62½c at the close, which was 10½. Stanley-Warner also edged to a new high ground at 18½.

RKO Theatres was another cinema stock to register a new peak—9½: Even at the close it was up a full point on the week's trading. No doubt but that the continued strength in part stems from reports. That this company will show $2,000.000 this year and possibly more if successful in disposing of certain theatre properties.

Warner Bros, climbed to 203', highest point for the year, for a 75c advance on the week. Columbia Pictures was the seventh amusement issue to hit a new peak —33½. It boasted a gain of one point at the closing quotation of 3234.

General Precision Equipment, now on a $2 annual divvy basis, held around recent levels to finish at 44%, virtually unchanged. Stock continues to be closely held, with the present high price reflecting unusually strong future earnings prospects. One of its subsidiaries alone is reported showing earnings, sufficient to virtually cover the present dividend.

Universal and Decca both held near their old highs. U closed at 2834, for a minor gain on the week. This price compared with a 1954 peak of 295%. The 39-week report near their old highs. U closed at 2834, for a minor gain on the week. This price compared with a 1954 peak of 2958. The 39-week report on earnings indicated that the company may show close to $3 per share on the common in the present fiscal year. Decca followed a like pattern, finishing at 1334 as against the best quotation of the year of 1442.

Paramount Pix firmed up near the end of the week to close at 3544 as compared with the year's high of 355%.

Both CBS issues were higher. The CBS "A" stock closed at 673%, for a gain of nearly three points on the week. The Class B shares hit 671½ at the bell for an advance of three. RCA also pushed higher to 33% at the close where it was up nearly a point for the week.

Studio Sluff Protestant Themes

feared members of other deno, nations wouldn't be interested.
Endress, who heads the Lutheran group responsible for the production of the very successful "Martin Luther" pic, observed that this was the right time for religious films. "More people than ever are searching out the basic questions of life, philosophy and their relationship to God. Pastors and lay church workers know this well. So do book publishers who are bringing out more and more religious books." The film industry, too, had discovered that religion is b.o. he said. "Unfortunately," Endress commented, "too many film producers don't understand what makes a 'religious' film actually religious. A ligious' film actually religious. A clergyman appearing in one or two scenes does not make a film a religious film. Nor do the brotherly deeds or the moralizing of certain characters make a film a religious characters make a film a religious one.

"It's especially important to realize that the use of a Bible story, through which God is saying something to man, is taken by a film producer and turned into a fivering circus that becomes irreligious with its gaudy spectacle, its preoccupation with sex, and insistence upon turning deep religious experience into adolescent sentimentality. Churches simply can't endorse such films, even though there may be much good in them, because on the whole such films misinterpret religion, cheapen it, and tend to destroy in the minds of many persons the deep spiritual lessons of Scripture."

Need Point of View

Endress urged producers not to be afraid of real religious themes and said they needn't be dull and heavy. "They can have depth and yet be very entertaining," he opined. "But most important, they must have a point of view. It needn't be one with which everyone agrees. It can be something against which the audience will test its own faith and point of view. We, in America, certainly should not be afraid of ideas, even those different from our own. We must not be afraid of taking them into the market place of public opinion. We must maintain our spirit of the free exchange and the free competition of ideas."

Exciting Material

There was much in the evangelical church that could make exciting and dramatic film material, Endress suggested. "We, for example, believe that all, men are priests. Many of our churches are liturgical and have beautiful ceremonies. At the same time, their pastors work among their people as they are, in civilian dress, with a special responsibility in being guide and teacher, just as the people have the special responsibility of being priest of the faith wherever they are and in whatever they or.

Concerning the portrayal of Protestant clergymen on the screen.

Concerning the portrayal of Protestant clergymen on the screen, which he found surprisingly rare considering there are more than 50,000,000 Protestants in the U.S., Endress urged they be played straight for whatever denomination is involved rather than in an attempt to amalgamate various denomination points of view and practices. tempt to amaigamate various denomination points of view and practices.

"If the film is about an Episcopalian, the clergyman should be portrayed as an Episcopalian. This same is true if the portrayal involves Lutherans, Baptists, Methodists or Presbyterians. Other denominations will not be offended.
The audience will respect the pastor and will believe the story if it is accurate and real."

Endress stressed that, while he strongly favored religious pi themes, the emphasis would primarily have to be on quality. "We had wonderful success with 'Martin Luther," he said, 'but only because it also happened to be a good picture." Endress commented that more pix of this type also would serve to bring out the audience that normally didn't attend theatres.

METRO LACKS D. C. REP

Orville Crouch Aligned With Loew Theatres Under Divorce

Theatres Under Divorce.

As a result of the Loew's-Metro divorcement, the M-G studio, after years of representation, no longer has a liaison with Government officials Washington. Metro's contact in D. C. had been Orville Crouch, district manager on the theatre end who stepped up to this post as well as that of studio rep a few years ago upon the death of Carter Barron.

With the split of theatres from production-distribution, Crouch is remaining on the theatre side, the district post having been his key position. But the studio representation, officially, now is lacking. However, it's presumed that Crouch would still make himself available to the Hollywood lot if a problem should crop up as a matter of courtesy.

Vandalism Erupts From New York Union Hassle

New York Union Hassle
A 24-hour police guard is being maintained at the Fair Theatre, a 600-seat neighborhood house in the Jackson Heights section of Queens, N. Y. as a result of recent vandalism allegedly stemming from a jurisdictional dispute between two rival projectionists unions. Damage, estimated at $7,000, was suffered by the theatre early this month, three days after it reopened under new management after a long shutdown. According to Herman Stern, operator of the house, the damage was done by individuals who had knowledge of theatre equipment, since CinemaScopelenses were stolen, sound wires were cut beyond repair, and the screen was completely destroyed. Stern has reopened the theatre on a makeshift basis while new equipment is being installed. He is running with a small-size screen and has hooked up a temporary sound system. The vandals struck again a second time, letting loose a stench homb in the theatre. Stern was forced to make refunds to some 400 patrons.

The labor dispute, allegedly the cause of the vandalism, involves Local 306, 1ATSE, and the Independent Motion Picture Machine Operators, an unaffiliated outfit. Stern, when he roopened the Recent nation-wide trade demonstrations have so convincingly established the superiority of stereophonic sound based on four-track magnetic film that exhibitors in ever-increasing numbers are resolving to equip their theatres with the new specially designed sound reproducing systems. Such whole-hearted support of the industry's new techniques reaffirms RCA's own unbounded confidence in the continual growth and progress of motion picture exhibiti

To give concrete expression to its confidence in the future of the industry, RCA announces a wholly new plan conceived on the principle that all theatres—small as well as large—should have an opportunity for easy acquisition of the new stereophonic sound systems. The heart of the plan is a revolutionary payment schedule—so liberal in its scope that the already moderately priced RCA stereoscope sound systems may now be acquired from daily box-office takes. Thus, the RCA plan enables theatre owners—even average-size operators—to reap immediately the bigger grosses now being rung up all over the nation by wider screen stereophonic sound features. You, as an exhibitor, can make your contribution to industry progress and to your own best interests . . . s by investigating RCA's novel plan. The coupon brings you full details. Mail it today.

Originally opened Oct. 22, 1935, the Bexley gained much attention in the trade and lay press as a unique cinema parlor. It was designed and built by the late Theodore Jir. The house is arranged in twin, parallel auditoriums, with seating from the sides only. Each auditorium has its own screen and is serviced by a single projector equipped with a lens device for throwing two perfect images of a single film on the screens at the same time. It is the only theatre anywhere with this device and its sound system, which anticipated hi-fi by a good many years, is not obsolete.

The Lindenbergs operated the house until 1943, when it, was taken over by the J. Real Neth chain, which closed it in 1952.

A new lease was signed with W. J. Fitz-Henry by Maurice and Louis K. Sher, Columbus restaurateurs, and Ed Shulman, of the Studio Theatre in Detroit. Plans are to open the house Oct. 1, retaining its unique projection system and its unusual sound system. Policy will be art film, revivals and unusual Hollywood or European features. The new managers even will make new use of the two auditoriums, closing off one after the show begins and filtering latecomers into the second. Commercial distribution of business-sponsored films in Canada "is frequently considered unnecessary" because of "the wealth of free plans," according to the newsletter sent to advertisers by Crawley Films, Ltd., here, largest producer of industrial films in Canada.

of industrial films in Canada.

Biggest distribution outlet is the government-owned National Film Board of Canada, and it's free. But films "must have national significance, be interesting and informative and usually not longer than 20 minutes." Film Board may give a film 4,000 showings in. 15 months, mostly in rural communities and small towns. After that the prints go to 350 community film libraries in larger cities. Imperial Oil's prize-winning "The Loon's Necklace." made by Crawley, has reached an audience of 900,000—one out of every 17 Canadians—and three other sponsored films have passed the half million viewers mark.

Additionally some 19 provincial

Additionally some 19 provincial film libraries, 387 community libraries and depots, 410 film councils with 10,528 member organizations, and the Canadian Film Institute, which charges for bookings to support its nonprofit activities, are other outlets for business films, And, of course, there are company film libraries and film showings through branch offices, salesmen and dealers, "completely personalized and, in some cases, by far the most effective." Using this system, Moslem's Breweries, Montreal, recently showed its new film "Panorames du Quebec" to more than 10,000 persons the first day of release.

Samuel Goldwyn bypassed RKO for his reissues and made separate deals with states rights distribs. Italian Films Export, set up to release the product of Italo producers, is anxious to take on the films of other outside producers.

Shift in distribution arrangements was prompted mainly by dissatisfaction with the cut received from the major distribs. The product shortage, however, served as the spark for the organization of the new production-distrib firms. Toppers of these new companies felt the time was ripe for new outfits which could help theatres fill up their playing time. As an example of the production cutdown by the majors, Metro's complete 1954 slate shows a total of 29 pi plus two specials, as compared to a total of 46 for 1953. Hearing the clamor of exhibs for product and after surveying the market, Makelim and Schwartz, for example, felt that new companies could get rolling at this time. This is the first time in many years that pixtes have undertaken to crash the highly competitive production-distribution market.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

While foreign film distributors obviously aim at maximum returns on every import some art house operators complain that the distribe often fail to develop the full potential of their product because of indifference in marketing it. Exhibs specializing in overseas films beef that few importers service them with useful sales hints and showmanship ideas in keeping with material found in most pressbooks supplied by the majors. Indie distribs for the most part confine their "campaign books" to a small folded sheet containing a few ad reproductions and blowups of New York newspaper reviews. Possible exception to the rule, however, are pressbooks prepared by importer Arthur. Davis in behalf of his product. For example on the Frenchmade "Pit of Loneliness" he whipped up an eight-page "showmanship manual" replete with sales suggestions plus background stuff on the cast for planting with local papers.

Seldom has Hollywood been pulled sentimentally behind a property like the Robert Hardy Andrews-USAF Col. Barney Oldfield story, "Tiger By The Tail; the Story of Sam Magill." Tale is of the exploit of an Ashtabula, O., lieutenant who talked a German general into surrendering himself and 20,000 men to him in World War II. Event was filmed by the Army Signal Corps at the time by an element of producer-director George Stevens' SHAEF camera crew, the unit headed by Hollywood cameraman Joseph Biroc. In Hearst's American Weekly recently, its annual film issue, with a 21,000,000 reader reach, Oldfield's byliner was featured on the 10th anniversary of the kamerad with text reference to its film possibilities. Meantime, Magill, now back in Germany, is watching progress on the project from a small Bavarian village of Boblingen, in whose cemetery the German general who surrendered to him—Erich Elster—is buried.

Colbert's 'Not Even for a Million'

Claudette Colbert's performance in last week's CBS-TV color production of "Royal Family" for Westinghouse, which generally won her critical plaudits, is expected to cue a fresh outburst of activity for her tv-film series which was originally intended for Toni in the 8:30 to 9 p.m. Saturday slot on NBC-TV. Guaranteed in excess of $1,000,000 ($10,000 a week for 54 weeks) in a non-cancellable contract, plus an ownership stake in the residuals, Miss Colbert flatly rejected the NBC overtures because of her refusal to do the commercials. As result, the series now lies dormant, with Toni bypassing the show. But Miss Colbert is standing pat: anybody who buys her does so sans commercials.

Situation parallels the recent dropout of Kate Smith from the NBC-TV afternoon schedule, despite the fact that the web still had a year to go on its contract, because of Miss Smith's refusal to pitch the client's wares.

With but these two and possibly a few other exceptions, however, virtually all the major talent in the tv programming sweep-stakes today have been "indoctrinated" into the commercials, for better or for worse. NBC, for one, is averse to pacting any star who refuses to identify himself (or herself) with the advertiser. Few in tv today enjoy the privilege of "playing the show" exclusively without doubling into a client pitch.

In fact, next season will witness some personalities skipping the programs and throwing in their lot with commercials only, as witness the pacting of Leopold Stokowski, who has been signed by RCA for the color tv commercials on the upcoming "Tonight At 8:30" color spec.

As far as the NBC coloraculars are concerned, it's "there's nothing like a dame" for Max Liebman, who opened on Sept. 12 with Betty Hutton and will follow on Sept. 25 with Ann Sothern in "Lady in the Dark." The Monday night specials, ablaze with the Leand Hayward pennant before his illness, will be launched with Ginger Rogers in "Tonight at 8:30." (Continued on page 42)

Liebman Shoots At Shirley Booth

If NBC can come up with the It NBC can come up with the right vehicle for her, Shirley Booth wouldn't be averse to joining the star brigade in tv for one of the Max Liebman 90-minute specs. Liebman it's reported, is hot for the Booth entry, with possibility of a deal heightened by the star's decision not to tour in her current legiter, "By the Beautiful Seâ." Factor, too, is the price, but apparently this would be no major stumbling block in view of the fancy coin being tossed around to pact major personalities.

OF 'OLD GUARD'

Two vicepresidents and a num Two vicepresidents and a number of topranking execs were cut loose by ABC yesterday (Tues.) in a far-reaching personnel realignment. Reshuffling affects virtually every phase of network operations in radio and television, and while officially it was called "executive promotions" and "departmental consolidations," it meant the first drastic move by the United Paramount Theatres hierarchy in moving out the web's "old guard" contingent.

Top exec forced out was Alexander (Sandy) Stronach, veepee of the tv network. No indication was given of a replacement, Also out are program v.p. Pacey was on the Coast on a publicity tour when the news broke in a memo circulated yesterday under prexy Robert E. Kintner's signature.

There's been no replacement for Stronach named yet, but since Slocum (Buzz) Chapin is a v.p. and director of the tv web, it's assumed he'll take command. Robert F. Lewine, until now eastern ty program chief under Underhill, takes over as director of the program department. Gene Accas, until now director of radio advertising and promotion, becomes director of the newly created department of advertising, promotion and publicity for radio and tv, replacing both Pacey and De Groot.

News and special events will also take over religious and educational programming, formerly in Pacey's domai.
Other consolidation takes place in sales development and research, with tv sales development director. Don Durgin taking over as director of sales development and research for radio and tv. Don Coyle, formerly in charge of tv research, and Jay Eliasberg, of radio research, remain with the network.

Trying to Unload Minority Interest Not Easy for CBS

CBS' desire to elear the decks in its quest for five wholly-owned ty stations by disposing of its 45% minority interest in WTOP, Washington, and WCCO. Minneapolis, apparently isn't coming off too easy. At least not in terms of shedding its D. C. holdings (where the Washington Post holds the majority stock of 55%). As-result, there's every indication now that Columbia will first divest itself of its 45% in WCCO, although it had hoped to get Washington out of the way first.

CBS' interest in WTOP is estimated to be worth about $4,000,000.

CBS' interest in WTOP is estimated to be worth about $4,000,000. There are least two hot bidders for it, one of them being Leon Levy, who has had a longtime identity with Columbia as a stock-holder-board member (which ne would obviously have to relinquish). But stalemating negotiations is the fact that Paul Graham, publisher of the 55%-owning Washington Post, reserves the right to meet any outside figure within 60 days, which automatically holds a bidder dangling midair despite the fact that he's got hard cash on the line. CBS is shooting for St. Louis and Boston to round out its o&o tv possessions. It figures it has a strong chance of getting the St. Louis channel. But Boston is something else again, with the chances at best slim. If it misses out there, Columbia will settle for a flourishing V in any of the major 15 markets. Nor has it ruled out the possibility of eventually taking over WTOP. In Washington as a wholly-owned operation to complete its five-station complement.

Viewed as one of the alarming aspects of the competitive NBC vs. CBS battle for top pix-legit names, notably for the rash of high-budg-eted tv spectaculars, is the acquiescence on the part of the networks in permitting the stars to call all the turns. Strictly aside from the unprecedented coin being lavished on these personalities, the top talent has been throwing the book at the webs in terms of dictating who shall produce, costar, etc. The networks, in their anxiety to snare the major names, have been offering little or no resistance to the demands.

NBC-TV's "Medic" managed a popoint turnover—after one exposure—on Monday (20), with a Trendex score of 25.3 against 19.9 for CBS-TV's "Public Defender." Previous week, with "Medic" preeming, it rated 19.6, highest that NBC had until then achieved in the Monday at 9 slot, but "Defender." was still way ahead last week with 33.2. Rarely in tv rating sweepstakes has a 19-point change-over, accompanied by upbeat fro second to first position, been achieved.

What "Medic" will do versus the returning "I Love Lucy" is moot, but last Monday's scorecard in the former's favor is credited to a dual reason: the 8 to 9 "Operation Entertainment" precede with soild lineup of names (that is the Sid Caesar upcoming slot), and the impact created by the "Medic" premiere with its birth-of-a-baby-death-of-a-mother theme.

See It Now' to Ride With Maine's Sen. Smith On Her Global Air Tour

On Her Global Air lour

Details of Edward R. Murrow's upcoming global show to end global shows was to be made public last night (Tues.) on his CBS-TV "See It Now" through an appearance by Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine. When Murrow and co-producer Fred W. Friendly learned that Sen. Smith was planning a world tour, they asked if she would agree to have a small crew of "See It" cameramen accompany her to make a film-and-sound recording to be displayed on the show. The senator accepted the invitation to have her round-taneous national audience.

The Maine legislator's itinerary is so extensive that it may result in "See It" expanding to an hour or even 90 minutes, or possibly a larger spread elsewhere on the CBS schedule, if not a short-run series based on the travelog.

With Congress not in session and her Maine campaign successfully concluded, Sen. Smith will take off from New York Oct. 12 for London and will talk to government toppers in such spots as Paris, Madrid, Rome, Frankfurt and Bonn, Istanbul, Beirut, Pakistan, Delhi, Bangkok, Hongkong, Manila, Formosa, Tokyo and Honolulu, bringing her flight string to Oct. 31.

In a brief talk last night (and a a tipoff on the type of material to be made available to the show) to be made available to the show), Senator Smith, according to a rough draft of a text made available, was to say in part: "This world trip is an important event in my life and I want to say exactly what I mean to say. Eggs Were Never This Scrambled

Columbus, Sept. 21.

Following WTVN-TV's severance of basic affiliation with ABC, network-station identification has become so scrambled that it is doubtful if the average viewer is certain about any studio's affiliation, here. Besides that, newspaper tv. log caretakers are grinding their teeth, over the impossibility of lining up any network's schedule with any particular station in Columbus.

WTVN-TV, the Taft station here, cut bait with ABC on Aug. 24 after a five-year-plus basic affiliation, and reoriented its schedules to DuMont, which it has always carried in tandem with ABC, and a flock of film packages. A few days later, WLW-C, the Crosley tv outlet in Columbus and a five-and-a-half year basic affiliate of NBC, signed a primary affiliation contract with ABC, retaining, of course, its basic NBC.

It was at this point that network shows started popping up i strange locations. This is the way things are: WLW-C has first refusal on ABC shows, but since the station only can take certain shows that won't interfere with its NBC listings, the rest of the ABC shows are up for grabs. That means some ABC shows are turning up on the schedule of the CBS affiliate, WBNS-TV, thus making two stations carrying ABC shows, neither one of which is a basic, although one is a primary.

So, WLW-C (NBC) is airing "Super Circus," "Voice of Firestone" and will air NCAA Football, all ABC shows but hasn't been carrying ABC's "Game of the Week." That's being telecast by WBNS-TV (CBS), which has several other ABC shows pencilled in for the winter.

TV (CBS), which has several other ABC shows pencified in for the winter.

For the final fillip, WTVN-TV (DuMont), which has been carrying CBS afternoon serials since last spring, even while the station was carrying a basic ABC-TV contract, is now showing Edward R. Murrow's "Person to Person" (CBS), which WBNS-TV (CBS) has never carried; last year due to regional contracts on the show, this year due to local commitments.

Cincinnati, Sept. 21.

Bernard C. Barth, WLW and WLW.T general program director, and Neal Van Ellis, program director of the tv station, have submitted their resignations to Robert E. Dunville, president of the Crosley Broadcasting Corp.

Barth leaves Oct. 15 to become v.p. and general manager of the U. of Notre Dame commercial UHF station. His appointment was announced by the Rev. Theodore M. Hasburg, university official.

BULOVA'S $5,000,000 TIME BOMB

What's a Few Quid Among Pros?

The quid pro quo, tit-for-tat season is on for sure, with virtually all major "live" performers dating each other on the cross-plug route as the tv season gets under full steam. Hot and heavy also are the "trallers," with last week's skeins dominated by Robert Montgomery and Sid Caesar exchanging courtesies on their respective inaugurals as a segue from NBC's "Three-Two-One Zero!" atomic energy oneshotter (and past Monday's (20) star-stacked "soldlers in greasepaint" gala at 8 to 9 p.m. aimed, in minute part, at least, as the "week before" targeting of the time slot as being the "rendered Unto Caesar" spot.)

Martha Raye will be the initial guest on next week's (27) preemer of Steve Allen's "Tonight" show on the network, with Allen pencilled in to repay the courtesy on the comedienne's upcoming Tuesday nighter (in the Berle-Hope time). Berle, Hope, Jimmy Durante, Donald O'Connor, George Gobel, Imogene Coca, et al., will be "dropping in" on sundry shows in return for future favors along the same assembly lines.

Saga of Mike Miller Gives Heart To Aspiring TV Scripters

Budding tv writers who've never been represented in the medium can take heart. It doesn't happen often, but it happened to Mike Miller—in his 30s, married, couple of kids. Miller never did a telescript in his life, but has been a diligent parlor critic while serving as copy chief for a Boston ad agency. Herbert W. Frank.

A couple of months ago Miller wrote hopefully to Talent Associates and the letter wound up on the desk of David Susskind, partner in the packaging outfit who happens to be a native of the Hub. Susskind replied in the usual vein—"always looking for writers, of course, but although nothing doing now, why not send in some sample scripts?" Miller did forthwith applying his energies to "Jamie," one of TA's five shows, all of them dramatic. Susskind read the model and before you could say "boom mike" Mike himself was flown.

Radio 'Auraculars' As Answer To TV

AFTER 33 YEARS

Bulova and the Blow agency are calling it quits after the first of the year. In terms of agency-client relations, the revelation comes as something of a bombshell to the Madison Ave. ad fraternity, since Bulova and Biow have practically been synonymous in the 33-year association between agency boss Milton Biow and Arde Bulova, owner of the watch company.

Just what precipitated the sudden blowup, which came on Mon-day (20), is being kept pretty much under wraps, but it's understood under wraps, but it's understood that Terry Clyne, veepee in charge of radio-tv and a key man on the account, is also leaving the agency. See It Now' to Ride With Maine's Sen. Smith On Her Global Air Tour

On Her Global Air Tour

Details of Edward R. Murrow's upcoming global show to end global show was to be made public last night (Tues.) on his CBS-TV "See It Now" through an appearance by Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine. When Murrow and co-producer Fred W. Friendly learned that Sen. Smith was planning a world tour, they asked if she would agree to have a small crew of "See It" cameramen accompany her to make a film and-sound recording to be displayed on the show. The senator accepted the invitation to have her round the-worlder picturized for a simultaneous national audience.

taneous national audience.

The Maine legislator's itinerary is so extensive that it may result in "See It" expanding to an hour or even 90 minutes, or possibly a larger spread elsewhere on the CBS schedule, if not a short-run series, based on the travelog.

With Comparison the session and series, based on the travelog. With Congress not in session and her Maine campaign successfully concluded, Sen. Smith will take off from New York Oct. 12 for London and will talk to government toppers in such spots as Paris, Madrid, Rome, Frankfurt and Bonn, Istanbul, Beirut, Pakistan, Delhi, Bangkok, Hongkong, Manila, Formosa, Tokyo and Honolulu, bringing her flight string to Oct. 31.

In a brief talk last night (and as a tipoff on the type of material to be made available to the show), Frank P. Schreiber, WGN, Chicago, was elected exec committee chairman. Other members are: John DeWitt, WSM, Nashville; Donald Thornburg, WCAU, Phila; Charles T. Lucy, WRVA, Richnond, and Ralph Evans, WHO, Des Moines.

Eggs Were Never This Scrambled

Columbus, Sept. 21.

Following WTVN-TV's severance of basic affiliation with ABC, network-station identification has become so scrambled that it is doubtful if the average viewer is certain about any studio's affiliation here. Besides that, newspaper ty log carétakers are grinding their teeth over the impossibility of lining up any network's schedule with any particular station in Columbus.

WTVN-TV, the Taft station here, cut bait with ABC on Aug. 24 after a five-year-plus basic affiliation, and reoriented its schedules to DuMont, which it has always carried in tandem with ABC, and a flock of film packages. A few days later, WLW-C, the Crosley tv outlet in Columbus and a five-and-a-half year basic affiliate of NBC, signed a primary affiliation contract with ABC, retaining, of course, its basic NBC.

It was at this point that network shows started popping up in strange locations. This is the way things are: WLW-C has first refusal on ABC shows, but since the station only can take certain shows that won't interfere with its NBC listings, the rest of the ABC shows are up for grabs. That means some ABC shows are turning up on the schedule of the CBS affiliate, WBNS-TV, thus making two stations carrying ABC shows, neither one of which is a basic, although one is a primary.

So, WLW-C (NBC) is airing "Super Circus," "Voice of Firestone" and will air NCAA Football, all ABC shows but hasn't been carrying ABC. "Game of the Week." That's being telecast by WBNS-TV (CBS), which has several other ABC shows pencilled in for the winter.

For the final fillip. WTVN-TV (DuMont), which has been carrywinter.

For the final fillip, WTVN-TV (DuMont), which has been carrying CBS afternoon serials since last spring, even while the station was carrying a basic ABC-TV contract, is now showing Edward R. Murrow's "Person to Person" (CBS), which WBNS-TV (CBS) has never carried; last year due to regional contracts on the show, this year due to local commitments.

"Justice" has used a couple of name ringmasters-thesps in the last fortnight—Robert Cummings and Dennis O'Keefe, who appeared in the plays as lawyers for Legal Aid. Merrill is permanent, however. In his previous tv series the Hollywood player was a private eye on ABC's "The Mask." With the Sept. 30 stanza the music direction will be taken over by Ralph Norman, relieving Bernard Green who's headed for California.

What's a Few Quid Among Pros?

The quid pro quo, tit-for-tat season is on for sure, with virtually all major: "live" performers dating each other on the cross-plug route as the 'tv season gets under full steam. Hot and heavy also are the "trailers," with last week's skeins dominated by Robert Montgomery and Sid Caesar exchanging courtesies on their respestive inaugurals as a segue from NBC's. "Three-Two-One-Zero!" atomic energy oneshotter (and past Monday's (20) star-stacked "soldiers in greasepaint" gala at 8 to 9 p.m. aimed, in minute part, at least, as the "week before" targeting of the time slot as being the "rendered Unto Caesar" spot.)

Martha Raye will be the initial guest on next week's (27) preemer of Steve Allen's "Tonight" show on the network, with Allen pencilled in to repay the courtesy on the comedienne's up-coming Tuesday nighter (in the Berle-Hope time). Berle, Hope, Jimmy Durante, Donald O'Connor, George Gobel, Imogene Coca, et al., will be "dropping in" on sundry shows in return for future favors along the same assembly lines.

Saga of Mike Miller Gives Heart To Aspiring TV Scripters

Budding tv writers who've neverbeen represented in the medium can take heart. It doesn't happen often, but it happened to Mike Miller—in his 30s, married, couple of kids. Miller never did a telescript in his life, but has been a diligent parlor critic while serving as copy chief for a Boston ad agency, Herbert W. Frank.

A couple of months ago Miller wrote hopefully to Talent Associates and the letter wound up on the desk of David Susskind, partner in the packaging outfit who happens to be a native of the Hub. Susskind replied in the usual vein—"always looking for writers, of course, but although nothing doing now, why not send in some sample scripts?" Miller did forthwith applying his energies to "Jamie," one of TA's five shows, all of them dramatic. Susskind read the model and before you could say "boom mike" Mike himself was flow in Result, he's now pacted as part of TA's writing stable and already

DECISION AWAITED ON Dum 'GOLDBERGS

Decision whether Vitamin Corp.

Decision whether Vitamin Corp. of America continues with "The Goldbergs" on DuMont after expiration of contract next month will be made Friday (24). VCA exec veep Larry Paskow said that his company is satisfied with the situation comedy, but is waiting to see if the network can clear the top 40 video markets in a new time period.

Stanza has 167 stations—39 of them what Paskow considered major markets—but Bishop Fulton J. Sheen's "Life Is Worth Livng" raturns to DuMont next month after a summer hiatus, thus preempting "The Goldbergs" Tuesday at 8 p.m. time. The network, therefore, has to clear the needed 40, plus whatever other stations they can, in another hour for VCA (Rybutol) within the next couple of days.

QUITTING BIOW AFTER 33 YEARS

Bulova and the Blow agency calling it quits after the first of the year. In terms of agency-client re lations, the revelation comes as something of a bombshell to the Madison Ave. ad fraternity, since Bulova and Biow have practically been synonymous in the 33-year association between agency boss Milton Biow and Arde Bulova, owner of the watch company.

Just what precipitated the sud-den blowup, which came on Mon-day (20), is being kept pretty much under wraps, but it's understood under wraps, but it's understood that Terry Clyne, veepee in charge of radio-tv and a key man on the account, is also leaving the agency. Whether he takes the Bulova biz with him, as reported, could not be confirmed, with all parties concerned preferring to bypass any comment.

In fact, the Bulova station-break franchises (for many years in radio and now in ty) with the networks and stations has been the envy of the entire agency-client commercial roster, with Blow's ability to wrap up all the cream availabilities giving him a "wonder boy" status as far as Bulova was concerned. cerned.

Negotiations were reported underway last week to lease or sell the Orpheum Theatre, Brooklyn, to a television network or station. With practically all available space in Manhattan—mostly legit—long since converted to two uses (preceded, of course, by acquisition of such properties by the radio webs), Brooklyn is still virgin territory. NBC acquired the huge property at 1268 E. 14th St. in Brooklyn, but that was formerly a Warner Bros. soundstage, not a "house," with the web having converted it to a colorcast studio that preemed with the Max Liebman-Betty Hutton spectacular. The network also has the Century Theatre in Manhattan for color and monochrome shows (having lost both the Center and International to the wreckers). The Orph was for some years national to the wreckers).

The Orph was for some years a vaudfilm house, and latterly straight cinema in the RKO Keith-Orpheum Theatres chain, which has sold out to a syndicate headed by Max Hofmann, of Hofmann & Katz, attorneys. Property is assessed at $380,000 and the deal was a cash transaction over a mortgage of $130,000. House is a 1,715-seater with a three-story building on Flatbush Ave., and parcel consists of 16,500 square feet fronting on three streets.

ABC Radio Pacts Olds. Other Clients

ABC Radio continued its late sales drive last week, signing on five new bankrollers and renewing five others, four of which sponsor half-hour religious shows. New business came largely in the field of news, with Oldsmobile latching on to a new 12-a-week nighttime news package for a three-week stay and A. C. '5 Plus 2' Equals 'U' Mebbe?

large operators now limited by the five-station to ceiling can give "substantial impetus" to ultra high, the FCC last week amended its multiple ownership rules to allow lipicensees two UHF interests in addition to five VHF.

The Commission said that in view of the serious plight of ultrahigh, particularly in areas "where the prestige, capital and know-how of the networks and other multiple owners would be most effective in aiding UHF," it was persuaded that the entry of the big operators into such key markets would give UHF a strong boost.

The agency emphasized, however, that it is not departing from its policy of limiting concentration of control of the media. "The multiple ownership of broadcast stations," it said, "does play an important role in our nationwide broadcast system. The ownership of broadcast stations in major markets by the networks, for example, is an important element of network broadcastings. "Our nationwide system of broadcast permitted. We have always recognized, these needs and have by rule permitted multiple ownership of broadcast stations in the light of such (other and competing) considerations. Here too it is our view that the greater good, which

Hennick's Dissent
The relaxation was voted over a vigorous dissent by Comr. Frieda Hennock, who doubted it would substantially confrighte to the solution of ultra high problems. The Commission's action, she said, will give "small comfort" to the independent UHF stations "who will see local channels granted to networks or other groups whose interests are much less less closely related to a particular community. ests are much less less closely re-lated to a particular community.

It will be no benefit at all to independent UHF broadcasters, who are in a critical condition be-cause of lack of network program-ming, to see the networks acquire UHF stations in the largest, most profitable markets."

Miss Hennock also objected to putting an arbitrary limit on stations without reference to their size or the markets in which they operate. "There is scant justification," she said, "for giving equal treatment to seven widely scattered small stations and on the other hand to seven large powerful stations serving major markets in metropolitan centers like New York."

tainly true." she added, "that the independent UHF broadcasters urgently need help and that the development of a truly nationwide, competitive television system depends on their survival. I have strongly urged the adoption of a series of measures aimed at the real problem of equalizing their competitive opportunity as relative newcomers in a field all but premeted by a number of powerful VHF interests. The solution surely does not lie in enlarging the scope of multiple ownership."

Comr. John C. Doerfer, while voting for the relaxation, issued a concurring statement in which he agreed with Miss Hennock as to using a numerical limitation on stations as the basis for controlling monopoly. "The number of stations a licensee may own and operate," he said, "is perhaps one of the most important policy matters this Commission is called upon to decide.

"I have grave doubts as to the wisdom of picking a number without more reliable and persuasive evidence that the number chosen will in all cases mark the upper limits of what will safeguard the public interest. A number related to population, or areas, or capacity to program in the public interest, is a more realistic guide or standard than a bare numerical evaluation. There is not much more than intuition as the basis for the present rule."

The relaxation was generally supported by the UHF industry.

The two other developments are (1) a magnetic field equalizer, yclept "Color Equalizer," which enhances colorset performance at reduction in manufacturing costs and (2) a new and simplifiled color receiver the reduces circuitry by one-third and also makes possible a decrease in production costs. On the price factor, E. C. WOR-TV Beneficiary as Steve Allen Dishes Out Free Publicity

Not only does Steve Allen get lots of publicity, but he gives his share too. Allen appears at 11:15 p.m. on the NBC-TV key in N. A television pioneer and a professor of humanities were concerned last week with the negative and positive aspects of entervainment. Dr. V. K. Zworkin, world honored Russian-born electronic geni , who at 65 was dinnered by RCA in Princeton upon his retirement as vicepresident and technical director of RCA Labs (and named first honorary v.p. in RCA history) said that "television as entertainment I don't like. I looked upon it as an extension of human sight and still think this is its most important function." But, looking into the future, he had a few other observations, such as:

There will be several small tv cameras attached to the receiver and the viewer will be able to watch a cake baking in the oven and the kids upstairs—merely by changing the channel band. Cost of such a camera is too high now, about $90, but under mass production the price would be brought to the level of the average income family. Dr. Zworkin also saw tremendous possibilities in educational video, including classroom activities.

Dr. Harold Burris-Meyer, who is on leave from Stevens Institute of Technology, was granted a patent in Washington for a device that registers the emotions of a person seated, say, in a theatre. This is arrived at partly by changes in posture, fidgeting and other actions brought about by exposing the squatter to "a variety of chosen stimuli." Indicative of the response are changes in what the N. Y. Times Patent Office expert calls 'fore-and-aft distribution of the subject's weight." A pen on a moving chart records the reactions, Even blushes are registered sans the subject's knowledge. It's assumed that the apparatus can be extended to television sitters, but i this case they would be aware of its presence.

Ray Bolger marked his second year in video last Friday (17) not too auspiciously. Show's format has been altered to emphasize a continuing story line, with singing, and dancy integrated into the plot, and the programs were filmed in Hollywood before studio guests to get a warmer reaction (and some needed laughs and applause). Trouble is, nobody felt it necessary to get away from stock situation comedy and trite routines, to lift the opener out of the rut.

Plot was lifted right out of Hollywood musicals of a generation ago, with Bolger a Broadway star who swaps identities with a lackadaisical Greenwich Village friend, to prove that some girl will low him for himself, not his fame. So we have the familiar setup of naive girl next door (just in from the sticks), her wise and wise-cracking roommate, and the inevitable, corny situations and windup. Bolger did a few seconds of dancing at the start of the half-hour, and a terp number for a few moments at the close, but that was all. And that dance, done with a femme's dress taken off; a clothes-line, came off less socko than the producers imagined.

Bolger, however, has an amiable personality, to make a likeable hero. Marjie Millar, playing opposite, was very attractive and sang nicely. Christine Nelson, as the sharp femme roommate, had a few good lines, and shower a nice voice in her brief song bit. Richard Erdnan played Bolger's stock ne'erdo-well friend as well as the script permitted. Production values otherwise (especially for a filmed series) were just routine. Bron.

Sherwood dealt with a smalltown dreamer, a young highschool girl, who goes to New York to find a job as a writer. She meets a smoothie who talks her into marriage. He turns out to be a weaking and a killer and in two weeks they're both dead. The story is revealed via a succession of flashbacks through her diary. Montgomery mounted it handsomely with numerous sets and a smooth running production.

It's unfortunate that Sherwood's dialog could not have maintained the play's dramatic impact, for as a story of suspense it packed a wallop and as a love story it had charm and understanding. The combined talents of all concerned, over and above the dream cast, helped spark the hour-long presentation. That goes for producer Martin Manulis, director Paul Nickell (who long since earned his chevrons for his length and qualitative list of "Studio One" entries); and particularly production designer George Jenkins. Here, indeed, was one facet of the tv-converted "Royal Family" that rates equal recognition with the Hayes-March-Colbert billing.

However, it took the additional prismatic dimension to fully appreciate and comprehend the full extent of Jenkins' contribution as designer, so rich and full-bodied in texture were the plush and colorful surroundings of the Fanny Cavendish manse. The CBS compatible hues and shades were in their best Sunday clothes and for the most part behaved properly.

If anything, "Royal Family" as CBS-TV's initial "baby spec" generated the feeling that here were real pros taking over the medium; as reflected in practically all departments in the transformation of what basically is a museum piece into a live, living thing. Despite the necessary pruning to

To say that Groucho Marx's "You" Bet Your Life" is, in one reviewer's book, the best bet in telequizzers, doesn't say too much considering that a good many of the q& a sessions scale the heights about as far up as Mt. Nadir. Since the Marxmanship—fifth semester in tv and seventh in radio (NBC Wed.)—makes the quiz element secondary and mucho subordinate, it's more proper to judge the show on its general entertainment values irrespective of program's official classification. On this basis, "Bet Your Life" is from video's top shelf and one of the more engaging comedies in the sound and sight depts.

It takes just about five seconds for a looker-inner on the Marx romp to become oblivious to fact that this is on film and edited to accommodate both time and interest; the latter is undiminishing; and the blue pencil handling is the envy of the business. So also is the headman's maneuvering of the contestants into double-pronged positions—first, to let 'em say their say in the pre-question portions where the back-and-forth stuff is laden with guffaw power, and second for the quiz tries which are in the middlebrow groove and without compromise or pandering when it comes to making the cushy awards. Too, there's always an expectancy in the air re a contestant inadvertently spilling the "secret" common word to grab $100 as a bonus. It's an all-around winner, with great credit to produceroriginator John Guedel, stagers Bob Dwan and Bernie Smith, announcer George Fennemam and batonist Jack Meakin.

Opener had a couple of offbeat guests, principal of these being retired Gen. Omar Bradley, who submitted wonderfully to the Marx menu and got himself a series of worthy plugs for the United Defense Fund (USO, etc.), he heads up. In a graceful switch Gen. Bradley was permitted to leave the quiz arena in favor of a sailor. On for a fillip quickie was Arthur Marx who fenced with his father or "My Old Man Groucho" running as an eight-parter in the Satevepost. Canine capers made pretty good viewing for a Sababath afternoon when "We Love Dogs" started its season (19) on WABD, the DuMonto & oin N. Y. If sponsor Kasco Mills has national merchandise coverage it'd be a natural for them to put the half-hour dogfe-in-the-video window stanza on a network basis; It didn't look to cost much, yet it moved along at a pace of interest to both ardent dog fasciers and just plain mongrel owners.

Marvis Mims, femce, started things off with an awkwardly brief interview with a lady basset houd owner. First launched in the summer of 1951, "American Inventory" returned to NBC's Sunday afternoon schedule for its fourth term after a hot weather hiatus. As per its overall title and continuing under the financing of the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, "Inventory" sizes up significant segments of American life, with Sunday's (19) subject being "The Small College." School under review in an all-film job (though some shows will be live combination) was Colby College in Waterville, Me.

It's a bit painful—since this is a public service series—to report that the premiere show took in too much, was somewhat condescending and, by turns, curiously awestruck in its approach to higher learning and the personal components thereof, and lacked a positive point of view. It seemed to be more concerned with nostalgic reflections by an alumnus than with the special factors that make the campus tick and come alive. In lact, the view via the "personal" narrative was from that of a graduate, with voicing of a cliche-laden composition by Raymond P. Sloan (which name may be a coincidence under the Sloan Foundation label). "Inventory" has had more professional programs and it's certain that the opening stanza will be looked back upon by program partisans as a premature start. Trau.

Gulf Oil returned last Friday (17) with another year of the filmed "Life of Riley" series. The 54-55 launcher was a tired story, using the near-moronic hero in stuff that reeked of age. It seems to break down to a question of just how far can a writer go in devising entertaining things within the restrictive format of a show such as the strictive format of a show sucn as this.

Story was devoid of clever aspects. The scribblers, who (judging by screen credits) alternate the weekly chore among one or two at a time, tried the vlewer's patience by giving Riley; played by William Bendix, a host of flimsy things to do.

In the story, Riley mistook his son Junior's desire for a boat named "Judy" as a desire instead to get married. To sustain the thin plot; both father and son made remarks with a double entendre flavor to keep the misunderstanding alive. Consolation in the preen was the acting by the cast in general, including Bendix. Marjorie Reynolds as Riley's wife Peg, Lugene Sanders as daughter Babs, Wesley Morgan as Junior, et. al., handled their limited roles well.

As an informal meeting between industry execs and the public, the program was a complete success, being deftly staged to achieve a maximum of casualness. Lasky, completely at ease before the camera, except for an occasional reference to listeners instead of viewers, handled the majority of the conversation introducing the other guests and drawing from them the information needed to explain the new setup. He might make a good to performer any time he wishes to retire from operating the station. Rafe.

For this hour session, invading the precints of the longhair which today gets an almost total brushoff from the other webs. For this lane it's to be commended. "Concert Tonight," in its own mild, unpretentions way, makes for pleasurable chamber music listening. True, it's not the most inspired music, but thoroughly enjoyable it it as conductor Margaret Hillis does a competent job in helming the orchestra which she founded. Watching it is something else again. The cameras, not content to let the music speak for itself, go on a chair-hopping spree (they aren't still for more than 30 seconds at a time) to a point of distraction. And since it's a small orchestra, everybody gets camera billing a hundred times over.

Mitch Miller of Columbia Records does the background and increductory commentary, What little he has to contribute at least is devoid of the usual stuffness of the cliched annotators. His information is interesting and a departure from the trite and scholastic. It also brings up the question: "What's a Columbia man doing on DuMont?"

The seasonal return of Eric

The seasonal return of Eric Sevareid to his Sunday-dinner-at-6 slot is an event that enriches CBS public affairs department. There's nothing of the spectacular about this web's goodlooking, poised Washington chief. Though he is an on-the-air essayist of considerable dimension, he cannot hope to snag the headlines of the competitive "Meet the Press" on NBC with its hot topical guests. But in his quiet way—with that sometimes sury, sometimes sly, sometimes sardonic, always intelligent pitch of his, sans flamboyance, forensics or oration—he is one of the wisest of commentators, with the kind of objectivity that does not shut out an awareness of his responsibilities to the public.

In "The American Week," with its feature page blueprint, Sevareid the news conferencier is encased in an ideal setting. He will put in a few choice words as a prelude to the newsfilm subjects and follow with a well turned phrase as the afterpiece. He will not try to impinge his own personality on the main show—the story. Thus, last Sunday (19), Sevareid toyed lightly with the election destiny of the Republican Party nationally as reflected in the returns from Maine, where the voters installed a Democratic governor for the first time in 20 years, Producer-editor Ernest Leiser, along with director Vern Diamond, slot is an event that enriches CBS' public affairs department. of the lensing here was remarkable in quickly reflecting the attitudes of just plain people.

The cameras then swung to another side of the world, the Soviet Russia of Moscow and Leningrad, and of the peasant interior regions of Tashkent in Uzbek, Tiflis in Georgia, and the storied Samarkand—the last three merely names on a map to most Americans. The films were shot by nonpros four students of Columbia U's Russian Institute who recently returned from their 30-day, 6,000-mile tour of the USSR. The narrative was picked up by one of the four, articulate Miss Gae Humphrey, of Pelham, N. Y., who delivered a stimulating account of the places and people covered by the action. The students were never followed as far as they knew, nor were they spied upon. They were restricted, of course, as to the photographing of given buildings and such, and were taken into "custody" 18 times during the month, but apparently the Russian cops were having a bit of fun with the scholars in this connection.

What the films showed within a few minutes was the equal of many a lofty book on the subject, with Sevareld closing this chapter by having Miss Humphrey in for a quickie interview in the studio. Here she enlarged upon the events depicted without making the conventional mistake of blasting the Russian system as per custom, except to say that she prefers our way of life, giving it meaning and sincerity.

For the end fillip, there was the human interest story. It began with a kinnie of that part of the Garry Moore show last week in which he made a nith few vickels.

For the end fillip, there was the human interest story. It began with a kinnle of that part of the Garry Moore show last week in which he made a pitch for nickels—"just for nothing"—in behalf of one of his guests from Point Pleasant, Mich. This immediately segued into a picturization of the dizzy doings-on in that town, complete with the "little picture" of the leading characters involved, that wound up with an avalanche of nearly $7,000 in nickels. Obviously, the horn of plenty more than hinted at the pull exerted by Moore of the CBS camp. Trau.

Color TV Review

—"don't rewrite a hit"—but video is such a fast familiarizing medium that a variation of any theme is to be encouraged. Conforming to the tinted idea, a fashion parade was part of the "pouf" deodorant's sales pitch. Oh yes, the two femmes on the regular panel.—Dorothy Kilgallen and Arlene Frances—looked purty too in their gayly hued coutour for the spectrum occasion. Being innately good showwoman, they knew how to dress properly for the occasion. On the men, for some reason, the camera seemed to bring out their shaved mustaches in a curious bas-relief, under the color tv.treatment, but not noticeable when switched to the compatible black-and-white.

Three for the Money

Sunday-Monday (19-20) came forth with a triumvirate to get teledrama season off and running at an unusual clip. Rarely if ever has the medium encased such a clicko threesome in such a brief span, with Philco-NBC "TV Playhouse" on Sunday (Paddy Chayefsky's "Middle of the Night") parlayed with NBC Monday's Robert Montgomery-American Tobacco Theatre (Robert E. Sherwood's "Dlary") and the CBS-Westinghouse "Studio One" (Reginald Rose's "12 Angry Men") creating an excitement in dramaturgy and performance comparable to a a "big preem" week in Broadway legit.

Broadway legit.

What struck many observers as particularly significant—outside of the bright factors 1 the made-strictly-for-try plays—was that all three seemed to contain the ingredients for Hollywood films. But on the other side of the fence were the boys with the crying towels who, repeating a plaint often voiced, considered it unfortunate that, per usual, the Montgomery (9:30 to 10:30) and Westinghouse (10 to 11) shows overlapped. It's an old gag that an overwhelming number of viewers see the first half-hour of "Robert Montgomery Presents" and, if it isn't up to par, tune in on "Studio One." In the case of Monday's dual deal of top shows, mebbe more of 'em saw the final 30 minutes of "Studio One" stead, but the latter was considered the better overall.

This shapes up as the critical season for the controversial Arthur vulnerable than in the Wednesday

a glorified copy of the morning segments, it's a daytime-type variety segment, with no other nighttime raison d'etre than Godfrey's phenomenal attraction for the American viewing public.
Two factors this season combine to minimize that attraction. One is Godfrey, himself, who last spring piled up a slew of unfavorable publicity via the Julius La Rosa incident, his airplane buzzing and his general attitude toward the press. End of the season saw his Wednesday night ratings start to nosedive, to the point where NBC's filmed combination of 'I Married Joan' and "My Little Margie' overtook "Friends" for the first time. The second factor relates directly to the competition this year in the form of ABC-TV's: "Disneyland." For the latter, formidable in tiselif, has the added advantage of starting a half-hour earlier, at 7:30.
With these factors in mind, Godfrey is going to have to come up with a better show than the kickoffer provided in order to stay on top. The Godfrey shows have never been especially distinguished for the falent they carry — Frank formidable opposition of Groucho on Marx, who has the same time slot on NBC.

It's not only on the format itself-that Tugend's applied his ingenuity. The laughtrack so obnoxious because it was obstrusive last season has been modified so that the laughs roll at the right time, and never with a raucous hilarity on a straightline. Technically, the program shows improvement, with better overall production.

Locale of the series has been switched from a girls' school to a coed institution, where Milland's the dramatics prof. In the initialer, a wealthy widow plans to make a hefty donation to the school, oncondition the dramatic section present a legiter she once saw with her late hubby. Milland spots it as a turkey, and brings the author pronto when he notifies him he's going to produce his worst play.

Idea of getting the author to rewrite stumbles when the writer goes for the widow, especially her moola. Eventually Milland convinces the author he should rewrite the play, but then the irate widow withdraws her endowment, saying this ain't what she and Wilbur saw. In a rather touching scene, Milland and his wife tell the widow she's got to stop living in the past, and look for a new life with the writer. Happy ending sees the turkey rewritten, and the widow and author love.

Hans Conreid, as the eccentric writer, glyes an excellent perform written, and the widow and author in love.

Hans Conreid, as the eccentric writer, gives an excellent performance, thefting many a scene. Milland, much more natural in his new suit of clothes, is always believable. Miss Avery is competent as his ever-loving wife, while Mary Field, as the widow, Lloyd Corrigan, Mark. Andrews and Nancy Hale round out the cast with good thesping.

Jules Bricken's direction keeps to an even tempo, and he displays a fine perceptivity. Slick teleplay is by Rik Vollaerts, based on a Lee Loeb yarn. John MacBurnie's lensing is topgrade.

GE blurbs, filmed, are presented with efficiency and brevity.

They came out not for a television show but for a tribute to such of their col-leagues as the late Al Jolson and Joe E. present but were represented on film.

With such a lineup, it was too much to expect some entertainment too, but they managed to squeeze some in. But largely it was a switching affair, from familiar film of overseas wartime shows to live presentations of some of the same performers in the studios. The four cmees, Power, Ronald Reagan, Fisher and Holden, presented "Operation Entertainment" awards to those present and those en absentia, to which all concerned voiced modest and sincere acceptances. Out of the entertainment mill was a quickle dance by Bolger, a one-sentence duet with Kaye & Fisher on "Oh, My Papa," an equally short trio comprising Pat CBrien, Edward G. Robinson and Keenan Wynn, a short Tokyo Rose sketch with Thomas and Audrey Totter, Dinah's versions of "Sentimental Journey" and "I'll Walk Alone," Hope together with Jerry Colonna and Tony Romano on "If I Had My Way," the Bell Sisters on "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" and Jimmy Wakely and Carolina Cotton on "You Are My Sunshine."

Producers Robert Welch and William Kayden ran the ceremonies and entertainment off without a hitch, and director William Bennington kept them going at a clockwork pace, also handling the difficult film-and-live integration flaw-lessly. Glenn Wheaton's continuity was concise and to the point. Gen, Matthew B. Ridgway appeared to thank the thesps via a filmed inject from Washington, while AFI, prexy George Meany dittoed in person. Miss Bruce neatly handled a couple of freezeups with a minimum of embarrassment for the obviously frightened kidlets and had the entire gang on her side when the half-hour ended. It's actually a rather tough assignment for the tiny ones with their career routines set in advance. After they describe what they want to be they're popped into a "magic chair" and a grownup counterpart comes on for some chin chin. Best of the lot in terms of interest for the contemporaries at home was a lad who said he wanted to be a motorboat racer. Presto, on came a real life racer, complete with an actual boat. BEN SWEETLAND SHOW With Edel Sweetland
Director: Michael Stephens
Producers: Ben. Edel Sweetland
15 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri. (noon) 15 Mins.; Mon.-thru-Fri. Participating KGO-TV, San Francisco

A veteran mail order expert and a familiar voice to Bay Area audiences (he's been on the air here for over 15 years pitching various booklets and hints to happiness) Ben Sweetland has shifted his activities to television and come up with a daily quarter-hour show that is going to be the same kind of audience grabber that a Miss Lonely Hearts or a Psychology for the Layman column is in a newspaper

Format of the show remains static throughout the week. The Sweetlands are seated in a combination living room-office with Edel (Mrs.) Sweetland sitting on a sofa reading the mail from the listeners and Ben behind a desk answering the questions. Each letter—there are usually three—is the lead-in for a short talk by Sweetland on how to be happy, replete with lush kudos to the audience for "being such wonderful people" and aimed to solidly at the housewife that "you ladies out there" is used throughout.

Mrs. Sweetland occasionally reads poetry, and always ends the show with the "Thought for Today," a folksy little line or two that ends the show on a sickening note of sweetness.

Topics for the week's shows were: "How to Be Successful" (Mon.), "The Happy Marriage Clinic" (Tues.), "How to Grow Younger" (Wed.), "You Can Be Magnetic" (Thurs.), "Tips On Travel" (Fri.). With the exception of the travel show, there was no attempt to do other than hit at the basic fears of humanity—is your marriage successful?, you too can be happy, etc.,—and for each major fear Sweetland has a book—let. It's as commercial as Dorothy Dix and on about the same level.

Canada's CKLW-TV In Preem, Gives Detroit Area Its 4th Station

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 21. CKLW-TV was dedicated amid pomp and circumstance on an international scale Thursday (16) as it became the fourth television outlet in the Detroit-Windsor area.

Canadian station had begun its regular broadcasting schedule six hours before the ceremonies were telecast at 8 p.m. First shots were of a fireworks display on the front lawn-which faces the Detroit lawn—which faces the Detroit River across from the Motor City's downtown section—of the $1,500,000 station, most powerful tv outlet in North America with 325,000 watts. Large helium-filled balloons carrying illuminated figure 9s—station operates on Channel 9—were released amid the flare of skyrockets and bursting of aerial bombs.

Then came dedicatory speeches Then came dedicatory speeches by Mayors Arthur J. Reaume and Albert E. Cobo, of Windsor and Detroit, respectively. Louis C. Miriano, president of Detroit's Common Council, presented CKLW's prexy and manager, J. E. (Ted) Campeau, with a resolution praising the station for its "good neighbor" policy in 20 years of radio and wishing it success in its new venture. Many other political and civic leaders from both sides of the river also participated.

The entertainment part of the program was highlighted by interviews with Marguerite Piazza, now appearing at the Statler's Terrace Room in Detroit, and Gary Crosby.

Station lost its audio a few min-utes before program got under way but recaptured it in time. It was recalled WXYZ-TV, Detroit, had a similar failure during its opening day festivities several years ago.

Viewers will notice that CKLW-TV is lacking something common on the three Detroit stations—beer commercials which are prohibited by Canadian law.

public that turns its back on a sincere, courageous effort to inject a freshness, newness and bigness into a medium oversurfeited with mediocrity?" Even granting that the Hutton-Liebman competition from CBS, with Ed Sullivan's starspangled "Zanuck Story" emerging as one of the most potent of the "Toast of the Town" installments; or granting that there's a continuing inherent drama in the Lillian Roth saga-even on its third go-round, the disappointing audience pull on both the NBC and CBS top-budgeted entries registers as the "stunner" of the ty year, with the bafflement of the networks matched only by their subsequent determination to "stay with it and prove that we're right."

(Since the spees are designed primarily to achieve a spectacular rating and practically decimate all competition in order to justify the kind of coin lavished on them, the plight of the webs becomes all the more understandable.)

Alarming Precedents

Alarming Precedents

The trade generally will applaud the decision of the networks to play it the spec way, come what may, despite some trepidations over "evil precedents" established in bringing them to fruition; namely the sky's-the-limit fees commanded by talent ($50,000 for Betty Hutters's eneshed) or permitting the by talent ($50,000 for Betty Hut-ton's one-shot), or permitting the stars to call the turns on desig-nating producers, costars, etc. But overall, it's the determination of the webs to break with established, overall, it's the determinition of the webs to break with established, cliche patterns and to whet the appetite of the public for something new and more ambitious that rates plaudits in striving for a more spectacular era in tv and show biz. As one network exec put it: "We're gonna get flops along with the hits; but basically it's something we gotta stay with to educate the public in wanting something new. It's our job to create the thirst, which doesn't come overnight, but if we don't create that thirst the public won't drink." Major task facing NBC, for one, is to convince the clients already in for the plunge that it's long-range rather than an overnight triumph. Hazel Bishop, for one, has been howling. With approximately $150,000 time and talent riding on the Hutton initial show alone as sponsor of the closing half of "Satins" (Sunbeam picked up the other 150G tab for the first 45 minutes), agency boss and Hazel Bish on factorium Raymond Spector left. other 1905 tab for the first 45 min-utes), agency boss and Hazel Bish-op factotum Raymond Spector left no doubts about his anxieties, as those dwindling ratings while the show progressed left him holding those dwindling ratings while the show progressed left him holding the bag on probably one of the highest cost-per-thousand items in tv annals. (Fact, too, that Spector scored a missout in trying to persuade Miss Hutton to plug the client's product, while not germane to the spec "crisis" itself, didn't particularly contribute toward salving his wounds.)

Meanwhile, NBC's masterminders have plunged into the task of devising the supplementary facets to implement the spec idea—notably in the realm of a more thorough promotion-exploitation-publicity campaign both on the air and via use of the dailies and mags. It's felt that the "Satins" buildup and trailers lacked the necessary impact. Henceforth, for example, NBC will do a triphammered on the specs; not only in terms of the stars but in dramatizing the vehicles and familiarizing the vehicles and familiarizing the vehicles and familiarizing the well consumer the show hits the air."

Radio execs have been concerned about reporting billings for some

Mutual, for example, grants an immediate 50% cut in evening rates for all markets which have television, plus a multiplicity of other discounts. These aren't reflected in the gross figure reported to the industry, and therefore a flat comparison of Mutual's billings with CBS', for example, is impos-

Gould's 100G Suit Vs. G&T On '2 For Money'

G&T On '2 For Money'

Limited examination of officers of the Goodson-Todman packaging outfit was granted attorneys for writer A. Edward Gould, who claims piracy on the title "Two for the Money" to the tune of $100,000.

N. Y. Supreme Court Justice Joseph A. Gavagan ruled that pretrial examination would be confined to Goodson-Todman to the exclusion of other defendants in the case, CBS, P. Lorillard and Lennen & Newell, and ruled that Goodson-Todman need not produce books and records.

Gould claims he wrote a book called "Two for the Money" in 1941, and that the title has since acquired a secondary meaning. He claims the defendants wrongfully appropriated the title for the tv show, which stars Herb Shriner. Defendants have entered a general denial of all allegations.

FCC Commissioner Robert E. Lee today (Tues.) declared his belief that legislation to govern the networks "is not required" but at the same time defended the motives and the personnel of the Bricker Committee investigating regulation of the networks. He aired his views in a speech to delegates of the District IV meeting of the National Assn. of Radio & Television Broadcasters here. Lee said that there is "unwarranted uneasiness" in some parts

Lee said that there is "unwarranted uneasiness" in some parts of the industry regarding the inquiry. Effective legislation or a demonstration of the lack of need for it can only be determined by "searching investigation," Lee, formerly in charge of surveys for a House committee, said.

"In this case," he declared, however, "I believe that this inquiry will clearly demonstrate that legislation is not required and at the same time may bring to light and correct some practices inconsistent with the public interest. I want to state my complete confidence in not only the Senate (Interstate Commerce) Committee but in the excellent staff recruited for this investigation."

Reviewing network regulation of the FCC, Lee stated that in his opinion "there is no form of network dominance in the industry today." He said that FCC rules are not static and may be changed whenever circumstances require. "The foundation of our system of regulation," Lee said, "has been to fix responsibility directly on the station licensee. In my opinion, any change in regulations which would tend to reduce the responsibility of individual stations would not be in the public interest, nor would it improve the economic welfare of any segment of the industry."

Pointing out that radio and tv together accounted for less than 20% of national advertising last year, Lee said he does not see how legislation controlling the networks could be feasible without including advertising agencies, talent agencies, motion picture producers, program packagers and others. "Any other course," he said, "would be inequitable and unfair."

Final Year As Monopoly

London, Sept. 21.

To launch its final years as a monopoly, BBC-TV has prepped a major schedule of legit, longhair and pop telecasts to start with the opening of the fall season. In the drama field the British state television network is planning a number of new and classic productions in addition to a series of plays specially commissioned by them.

One of the major legit entries will be Royston Morley's production of "Peer Gynt" which will be staged in two parts within the same week. Another major production will be an adaptation by Nigel Kneale of George Orwell's "1984." Specially commissioned plays include a thriller by Francis Durbridge and a Christmas feature by Iain MacCormick.

In the longhair field there will be a series of resettle by tain intrus.

TELEPROMPIER - FIRST AGAIN!

After 4 years of research, TelePrompTer is proud to add the "TELLENS" adapter to our complete prompting service. "TELLENS" is the most functional and successful in-the-lens prompting device on the market—a useful addition to our complete line of prompting equipment. "TELLENS" lets your announcer read . . .

DIRECTLY INTO THE LENS!

-Now let us tell you why "TELLENS" is best

- 1. "TELLENS" Adapter doesn't need reverse-image typing. (Try writing an E backwards for a rush, last minute change).
- 2. "TELLENS" Adapter does not require a special mount. It is attached to your regular TelePrompTer unit in a matter of seconds.
- 3. "TELLENS" Adapter features a special magnifying element that enlarges copy more than 2 times. (Our exclusive "Eisenhower type" without magnification, is already the largest in the field).
- 4. "TELLENS" Adapter is designed and engineered to reduce reflection and flare to a minimum.
- 5. "TELLENS" Adapter doesn't interfere with lens changes or lens turret rotation.
- 6. "TELLENS" Adapter exclusively lets you signal timings, cuts, stretches, etc., while on air.

Britain's Comm'l TV Blueprint Taking Shape; Set Operating Head

The blueprint for Britain's commercial television system is now taking shape. The first three stations will be in operation by the fall of 1955 in London, Birmingham and Manchester and thus covering at least 50% of the country. Thereafter the timetable drawn up by the Independent Television Authority calls for an additional three stations each year, following the BBC pattern of strategically placed transmitters which already cover almost 85% of the population.

The se details were revealed last week by Sir Kenneth Clarke, I. T. A. chairman, who also reported the appointment of Sir Robert Fraser as director-general of the new network. He is the head of the Central Office of Information and during the past 10 years his job has necessitated close contact with advertising and the press. His practical experience in tv is limited to the production of government sponsored telepix made through the COI.

ment sponsored telepix made through the COI.

The next major decision will be the appointment of program contractors. Sir Kenneth intimated that these would be named by Oct. 10, and five days later he was leaving for the United States. This is a two-fold mission to gander the U. S. commercial video systems and to receive an honorary degree at Columbia U.

To date, 20 applications from would-be program contractors had been received in response to advertisements in the national press, but Sir Kenneth anticipated that many more would flow in once more definite information was available. Of the 20 applications, five came from major concerns who would be able to take on a substantial slice of the programming. Seven were received from local applicants in the Midlands, Scotland, Northern Ireland and East Anglia who would mainly concentrate on packaging programs for local transmitters. local transmitters.

The ITA chairman confirmed that orders had already been placed for six vision transmitters. Three would be made by Marconi and the other three by Pye. The first London station would operate from Crystal Palace and arrangements were being worked out whereby the commercial web could share the BBC masts. As the new BBC mast at Crystal Palace will not be ready until the new year the ITA intends to tee off with a temporary mast. temporary mast.

DuM Labs Profit In 24-Week Dip

While sales at DuMont Labs showed a slight increase for the first 24 weeks of 1954 over a like period in '53, net profits for the company took a dip. DuMont laid the fall in profits to the price war in the cathode-ray tube and tv re-ceiver markets as well as to the initial costs of tint video manufacturing.

Despite the falloff in returns to stockholders, DuMont expected the profit-to-sales ratio for the remainder of the year to be "at a considerably higher level." Sales through June 20 of this year reached $41,590,000 as against last year's $41,395,000 for the same time, but the net profit showed $479,000 for '54 and $913,000 for the previous session. Profit per share, on 2,361,054 shares outstanding, is down to 18c. from 36c.

McGrath also has been getting in some licks. Incensed at Thursday's hearings because of Powell's reliance on the 'offer of proof' device to get restricted testimony (for appeal purposes) into the record, he warned Powell: 'If you can't substantiate these offers the Commission will be held strictly accountable."

"If you have to run a publicity show, why don't you get yourself an advertising agent?" McGrath asked.

"Why don't you loan us one?" Powell replied.

"We'll be glad to," said McGrath. Except for a photostat of a newspaper story in the Toledo Blade in 1944 that Lamb would address a meeting to dedicate a new Communist Party headquarters, no documentary evidence had been produced by the Commission last week to prove its charges. But 'Cummings gave support to the story by his testimony that he heard Lamb speak at the ceremony and heard him introduced as a "very good friend" of the Party.

Because of rulings by the Examiner against hearsay evidence, most of the Commission's case against Lamb so far has been put in through the "offer of proof" route. An example of such an "offer of proof" was a statement by Powell that "if the witness were permitted to testify he would say he was told by Joe Friedman (a party officer) that Lamb raised hell with Johnson (another party officer) because he put Lamb on the spot by asking him to speak."

After protests by Brown and McGrath that the "offers of proof" were damaging their client, Sharfman acceded to a request to institute a novel procedure by which such "offers" are made "sotto voce" (softly) beyond the hearings of the reporters at the press table. The procedure does not keep the press from ascertaining the nature of the "offers" from the transcript when it becomes available the following day. But Sharfman said he thought it worth trying out.

Eurovision Set To Resume Oct. 3

London, Sept. 21. international tv hookup The international tv hookup which linked eight European countries under the overall title of Eurovision during the earlier part of the summer is to be resumed in the fall. The new series will start on Oct. 3 and will continue until the end of the year.

In the new three-month test period all the programs will be screened on Sunday afternoon. First will be a program from Paris, followed by a telecast of a football match from Hanover a fortnight later.

Mhile the Eurovision exchange continues, BBC and Paris television technical execs are working on the establishment of a permafall, introducing models with screens ranging up to 21 inches.
Dr. W. R. G. Baker of General Electric, chairman of the NTSC panel which saw the compatible color controversy through to a successful conclusion and head of the tv panel of the manufacturers association, observed nine months ago that "it may be years before quantity production" can be reached" on color receivers, tubes, etc., and figured that early sets would be expensive (with small screens giving a 12½-inch picture costing about $1.000.

Du Pont is sold on ABC... renews Cavalcade of America for '54-'55 season Prestige-conscious Du Pont and Nielsen-wise BBDO have again chosen the opening slot on ABC's great Tuesday night line-up for Cavalcade of America's '54-'55 bow on September 28. One of TV's most honored dramatic shows, winner of the Freedoms Foundation Award for five straight years, Cavalcade features great actors in great moments from American history, recreated by some of TV's most gifted writers and producers. Du Pont's Cavalcade is the opening gun of the battery of shows that makes Tuesday night ABC night on the nation's TV screens.

Paul Tripp was on the premiere of CBS-TV's "Man Behind the Badge" and will be in on the Oct. 3 deathknell show since "Badge" will give way to Celeste Holm's "Honestly Celeste" series. Tripp, currently producer-host of WCBS-TV's (N.Y.) "On the Carousel" aimed at Saturday's children, played a law enforcement officer on the first "Badge" and will be in at the kill as escaped convict for his first "villai" role in tv.

Tripp will get right back to his "nice" groove, however, on Oct. 9 via an appearance at Town Hall, N. Y. with the N. Y. Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra as narrator of his own musical tales, "Adventures of the Zoo."

Luther Adler is on the way to becoming one of the chief inter-preters of Henrik Ibsen, the w.k. Norweigian playwright. Adler had a featured role last season in the Tallulah Bankhead-starring "Hedda Gabler" on ABC-TV's "U. S. Steel Hour."

Next Sunday (26), he and Patric Knowles join teledebutting Gene Tierney in "Nora" to open the "General Electric Theatre" season on CBS. "Nora" is based on Ibsen's "A Doll's House."

A few weeks ago Worden pere sent a newspaper clipping to Worden fils relating to some downbeat mention of MP activities in Korea. The son, in crisp military fashion, responded with a carbon copy of a citation received by one of the corps for meritorious service in cnnnection with military operations. "against an armed enemy" in Korea from Aug. 14, 1953, to May 5, 1954. Accompanying the citation was the bronze star medal. The award went to Major William G. Worden.

New radio-tv display advertising service is being planned by the New York Post; which will run boxed ads within the columns of its regular radio and tv logs. Boxes will be placed in the listings at the spot where the name of the show would regularly occur and permits any amount of copy and cuts physically capable of being fitted and read. Special rate card lists the one-time rate per line at $1.75, with a 52-time rate at $1.25 per line.

Steve Gethers inadvertently (?) put two members of the normally harmonious Daniel Hollywood Associates in competition. Gethers, acting regular on CBS-TV's "Love of Life," is scripter of "Baseball Blues," headed for "U. S. Steel Hour" on ABC-TV next Tuesday (28). So now Bret Adams, of Hwood Associates casting dept., and Marion Searchinger, of the script sector, are racing to beat each other on Gethers' next assignment—as an actor or as a writer.

Bll Berns, news and special events director of WNBT, N. "He wanted them for appearances on the station's. "Sentimental You." Responding so are were Ann Bracken and Louise Pearl, who played children in the dream sequence of "Lady." They'll be showcased on "Sentimental You" the latter part of this week, serving as a bally gimmick for Max Liebman's second NBC-TV spectacular, which "just happens" to be dated this week also (25) with Ann Sothern starring.

It's been quite a while since Merie Oberon starred in Samuel Goldwyn's "Wuthering Heights" film classic and perhaps it would have been wise to leave the memory of that accomplishment alone. Unfortunately for Miss Oberon, and or the Emily Bronte story,
"Wuthering Heights" was revived again as the leadoff presentation on the "Lux Radio Theatre" over NBC-Radio last Tuesday (14) in an hour-long version that hardly did justice to this sensitive and darkly mysterlous tale. mysterious tale.

justice to this sensitive and darkly hysterious tale.

This is the Lux Radio Theatre's 21st year on radio (and its first on NBC), in the switchover of Lever billings from CBS which also gave NBC a full hour version of "Lux Video Theatre."

The odd part of "Wuthering Heights," produced by Irving Cummings and directed by Fred Mackaye, was that a secondary character, played by Joan Banks, ran away with the show. And the unpleasant truth is that Miss Oberon in the part of the willful, unpredictable and tortured Kathy seemed unable to rouse either warmth or conviction. In fact, she sounded for the better part of the show as if she were literally reading her li not bothering to imbue them with anything more than a scant achowledgement to their dramatic requirements.

Virtually the same must be said anything into their dramatic requirements. Virtually the same must be said of Cameron Mitchell who played the difficult part of Heatheliff, His idea of portraying the twisted, moody and crulelly revengeful man, smouldering with a love he can not give or receive, was mostly to sound gruff, which is of course one way of painting a word picture of a man not given to long utterances. His Heathcliff lacked both depth and shape, and both should have been there, and could have been there.

ins Heathcliff lacked both depth and shape, and both should have been there, and could have been there. The give-and-take of the Oberon-Mitchell dialog at times bordered the amateurish in the flatness of its delivery. The sharper, therefore, the contrast with Miss Banks who, in a comparatively minor role, came across with a performance that rated very high. It also proved that, even though radio must forego the visual impact, it can still create a personality that is definite and real. In the role of Isabelle, Heathcliff's unhappy, long-suffering wife, Miss Banks offered a fine, sensitive voice portrayal that was moving in its urgency and its appeal.

Still another capable performance came from Jeanette Nolan in the part of the old maid who told the "Wuthering Heights" story. Commings 'production seemed hardly flexible and curiously unimaginative in its vocal texture and in the handling of the musical backgrounds. This was an unnecessarily straight forward telling of a well-known story that could have been made more intriguing partly through the more varied use of adio production methods. Best part of the show came towards tanthe end, but by then the combern mystery had pretty much lost its gup, and the personalities could no longer emerge as in the novel. Part of the long success of the Lux Radio Theatre has been its altractive choice of subject matter. But it is largely wasted unless it is matched by quality performances. Samuel Goldwyn wound up the show with a few rather self-conscious words about "Wuthering Geights" and his forthcoming "Guys and Dolls." It wasn't exactly an inspiring guest spot, and the questions put to the vet showman deserved the drab answers they got. Ken Carpenter's spieling for Lux had its usual zest, with the opening commercial seemingly running to unusual length. Hift.

"Luncheon at Sardi's" one of the vet programs covering the theatrical circuit, has returned with its usual format, this time with Ray Heatherton in the interviewing slot. The format is virtually the same. The important item is having-a lot of names to drop and to keep the gab flowing. This Heath erton seems able to do handily, and at the same time dispenses a fair amount of entertainment.

Heatherton, on show caught, had corralled the topliners from "Pa-jama Game," and was able to come corralled the topliners from "Pajama Game," and was able to come through with some interesting interviews. John Raitt and Janis Paige provided some good fan as well as trade material. Heatherton has an ingratiating manner which at times he carried too far. His frequent mentions of the fact that he hadn't seen this show as yet, seemed like he was fishing for a pair of ducats. Of course, it provided a good ad for the show, but on the other hand, a listener had the feeling that the producer would indeed be churlish if he didn't send over a pair immediately, especially after all the free plugging.
"Luncheon at Sardi's" continues in its usual groove on WOR. Coming from Vincent Sardi's theatrical rendezvous gives the show a headstart. However, it would be an exceedingly capable emcee to be able to capture the full flavor of the spot. Heatherton hasn't been able to do this as yet.

The N. Miss Colby, appearing in the Broadway "Pajama Game," had nothing to do with her sweet, sexy and untrained voice, aside from offering senseless tidbits scribbled for her by. Arlene Wood. Idea was to surround platter spinnings with some novel chatter. According to the WABC bally department, she was supposed to gab about show biz, dining spots, fashion hints, etc. Little of this was evident, when heard. She did talk about having to walk her dog, and that's why she was up at 5:45 in the morning. The radio stanza was a careful reproduction of the tv show, Liberace, accompanied by his brother George's orch, started with "The Girl I Love" in a smooth, however nasal, fashion. After each number Guild dubbed in applause. Among his other solid selections was a piano-harp duet with Marylin Hecht and a rendition of "Belle of the Ball." The pace fell off sharply the Ball." The pace fell off sharply when he made a pass at "Oh Promise Me." Song, having a religioso flavor, was out of his realm. Some more of the typical Liberace comball that evidently holds such appeal for the women was his talentless recitation of a Beethoven love letter with the composer's "Moonlight Sonata" as saccharine background.

WMGM has scheduled the series, which contains only 39 half-hours at present, on a 13-week strip. This way, the program designed by Guild as a one-a-weeker, would normally have run its course within the first eight weeks. Dennis Day, out of the video ranks this season, is back in radi and with one of those current rarities in network broadcasting, weekly half-hour sponsor. Bank-roller is Nutrilite, the food supplement, and this alone points up the changes that have taken place

AM from the time when a big-name variety segment in prime Sunday time would have no other bankroller than one of the top 10 food, soap or tobacco spenders.

Another change is the fact that food, soap or tobacco spenders.

Another change is the fact that Day is formatted in a show that five years ago would have bear rated a good one, but today shapes as no more than satisfactory. Its sa straight comedy-variety segment, leaning heavily on guest stars, along with Day's impressions and singing and the traditional byplay among the comedian, announcer Jimmy Wallington and bandleader. Robert Armbruster. All of which adds up to pleasant though unexciting entertainment which provides little incentive for redialing. Guests on the spener were Jimmy Durante and Rosemary Clooney, the latter soloing "All the Pretty Little Horses" and dueting with Day on "Light of the Silvery Moon" and the former running through his familiar paces with the band on "Inka Dinka Doo." Day joined him on the latter with a carbon of Durante's voice, and this combined with some evident adilibbing by Durante made the turn a funny one. Day soloed "Moon" as the Ronald Colmar's would sound.

How long the show will remai a fixture on NBC is hard to say,

How long the show will remai a fixture on NBC is hard to say, what with the shaky state of half-hour sponsorships in network radio. Program itself does little to insure its own longevity. Chan.

VARIETY ARB City-By-City Syndicated and National Spot Film Chart

VARIETY'S weekly chart of city-by-city ratings of syndicated and national spot film covers 40 to 60 cities reported by American Research Bureau on a monthly basis. Cities will be rotated each week, with the 10 top-rated film shows listed each case, and their competition shown opposite. All ratings are furnished by ARB, based on the latest reports.

This VARIETY chart represents a gathering of all pertinent information about film in each market, which can be used by distributors, agencies, stations and clients as an aid in determining the effectiveness of a filmed show in the specific market. Attention should be paid to time—day and time factors, since sets-in-use and audience composition vary according to time slot, i.e., a Saturday afternoon children's show, with a low rating, may have a large share and an audience composed largely of children, with corresponding results for the sponsor aiming at the children's market. Abbreviations and symbols are as follows: (Adv.), adventure; (Ch), children's; (Co), comedy; (Dr), drama; (Doc), documentary; (Mus), musical; (Myst), mystery; (Q), quiz; (Sp), sports; (W), western; (Wom), women's. Numbered symbols next to station call letters represent the station's channel; all channels above 13 are UHF. Those ad agencies listed as distributors rep the national spot sponsor for whom the film is aired.

MPTV'S 'WHAT GIVES?' STATUS

DuMont's Stake In Syndication Up for Decision; Woolf Helms Setup

never very large DuMont film syndication department is at stake And events of the last fortnight seem to indicate that the network's seem to indicate that the network supreme commander, Allen B. Du-Mont, is showing less and less interest in celluloid sales. Everything has fallen into the lap of Bob Woolf, manager of the teletranscription (kine) department.

Woolf, manager of the teletranscription (kine) department.

DuMont supplied virtually no staff or coin to implement a syndication program under Merriman Holtz, who in early September quit his double role as film syndication and co-op sales manager, to go to Europe. Late last week DuMont handed the co-op sales reins to Bill Muldoon, previously an assistant to Woolf, and then it gave the syndication job to Woolf, who takes it only as part of his other duties. Actually, Woolf had indirect control over syndication all along anyway, since Holtz was under his aegis. The one maneuver by the network braintrusters that might indicate, ever so slightly, that renewed and more vigorous, attention will be paid syndication is that co-op sales has clearly been removed now from Woolf's hands, and placed within the framework of kinescope sales. This could mean that Woolf will be afforded more time for development of film syndication.

Originally, the DuMont film syndication setup was Holtz's only con-originally, the DuMont film syndication setup was Holtz's only concern, but recently when it was realized that the job wasn't enough for even one man; he had the more active co-op sales heaped upon his shoulders.

Woolf's one-man department now controls three film packages. There's the chief one, called the "Illustrious Package," containing 6 British-made features, most of them out of Ealing Studios.

Gruskin-Poll Left Holding 'Pilot' Bag

Series of "pre-produced pilots" which a British-American production group was to have shot in England for distribution by Flamingo Films has been scuttled before the series ever started shooting. Group of 26 half-hour films was to have been produced by Ed Gruskin and Martin Poll's Monte Carlo Production in association with the British Tony Battley group, Plnnatel Productions.

Thereupon, Lloyd's withdrew all its motion picture and television loans, and the two groups were left without production coin. Project was finally called off.

Flamingo's plan had been to offer top agencies a chance to submit script ideas of their own, ideas which they would have liked to see in the form of pilot films for their clients. Flamingo and the two groups would then have picked out 13 such scripts and shot two films on each of them, syndicating the entire package as an anthology series but at the same time offering the agencies what was tantamount to two free pilots of their own. Agencies, if they then chose, could go into a production deal with Flamingo on a series based on the free pilots.

ming to sponsors and agencies as emphasized by the recent premiere of the network "spectaculars" two weeks ago were pitched last week by Television Programs of America exec v.p. Michael M. Sillerman in a letter to advertisers and agencies. Stating that advertisers should not be required to pay for these "adventures" and adding that any one who wants to be a theatrical angel can do so out of his private funds, Sillerman said that when it comes to investing company dollars the "customer should be able to see what he is getting for his money."

to see what he is getting for his money."

Terming the specs an "experiment," Sillerman stated there's a considerable gap between "experimental" and "commercial" television, and pointed out that filmed product, which he placed in the latter class, enables the advertiser to "know what you're going to get. You know what it's going to cost. You can plan for frequency and continuity in as many markets as your budget allows." Sillerman cited Dow Chemical's buy of "Medic." Campbell Soups' purchase of his own "Lassie" and the International Harvester-Nabisco sponsorship of TPA's "Halls of Ivy" as instances where the advertiser knows it has a "treenndous vehicle" for its commercial message because he can see the programs in advance.

Sillerman said that he's "long admired un-traditional, off-beat program thinking. I agree that there must be an area in television where the experimental can be tried out—on as an extravagant a scale as the experiments demand. And I'm sure the network will be the first to claim that they are the people to conduct these ventures in exploration of the television art. But I strongly doubt whether the advertiser should be required to underwrite these adventures."

'KEY TO ADVENTURE' VIDPIX ROLL IN N.D.

New Orleans, Sept. 21.

Production crew with many top movie and video credits is here to begin filming new telefilm series tentatively titled "Key to Adventure." Robert Keys, pix actor, is producer-star.

As title implies here.

As title implies, half-hour series will be in action-adventure field. Keys will be central character.
Coming from Hollywood to play other principal roles will be John Close, the Lt. Jamison in "Big Town" telefilm series; Dub "Cannonball" Taylor, vet pix-tv character comedian; actress Sheila Ryan and chacacter player James Seay.
The pilot scripts are by Maurice. Tombraugel and Melvin Ward. Directing series is Robert Walker, vet film and tv producer, with Les White as director of photography. Both are on leave from Columbia Pictures.

FUTURE TO BE RESOLVED SOON

Television, for months the industry's hottest speculative conversation piece, may be resolved within the week, it's been learned. What direction the Matty Fox combine will take is not known—i fact there are two contradictory reports about the firm's future—but it has been ascertained that Fox and his chief henchman, Ed Madden, have been in the middle of serious negotiations which would affect a drastic change in the outfit's modus operandi.

That a move of one kind or anoperandi.

That a move of one kind or another was coming has been a matter of common knowledge. Since moving into the syndication field less than a year ago, MPTV has hit several stumbling blocks that have made changes mandatory. One lies in the fact that the MPTV feature library has reached the near-saturation point in sales and bookings. Another is MPTV's heavy investment in new syndicated product that so far has shown little in the way of return. In the face of this plus the fact that Fox has a reputation for never letting the grass grow dry under his feet, a move of some type is imminent.

It's known that Fox has been ne-of some type is imminent.

It's known that Fox has been negotiating, or at least talking, about unloading all his product and moving out of the active distribution business. A number of distribs have confirmed the report that they've been approached by Fox with an eye toward outright sale or licensing for distribution of his properties, and a couple of these distribs indicated that negotiations are still open.

A contradictory report comes from the MPTV camp itself, where (Continued on page 59)

Hackett to Europe On Telepix Deals

Official Films prexy Hal Hackett left for Europe last Friday (17) to talk possible distribution deals with five indie telepix producers. Upon his return, he'll fly to the Coast for talks with three Coast producers, returning in time for the Official stockholders meeting at the end of October.

Out of the conferences, though will come no more than two or three deals. Hackett said that two or three new firstrun properties next year, expressing his belief that three is the top amount of new properties a salesman can handle while still selling other properties dating back a year or two in the firm's catalog. European talks will center about costume dramas, Hackett said, but he wouldn't eelaborate because the projects aren't far enough advanced to "mame names." Official won't provide financing, Hackett said, but will work only on straight distribution deals on a 35% off-the-top basis.

tion deals on a 35% off-the-top basis.

While in Europe, Hackett said, he'll visit England to explore the potential of commercial video there. Hackett said Britai will furnish a rich market for American telepix, and future production must be planned with a "dual market" in mind, he said.

give ulcers to the promotion files of the syndication outfits.

Example is the case of "All Star Playhouse" Detroit. Screen Gems sells its "Ford Theatre" reruns under the title of "All Star Theatre." Television Programs of America sells another package (with Edward Arnold hosting) as "Your Star Playhouse." ABC Syndication sells its "Schlitz Playhouse." Recent Variery-ARB chart listed the distrib of Detroit's "All Star Playhouse" as Screen Gems. Seems, however, that it's ABC. It's Now 'Andy's Gang'

Hollywood, Sept. 21.

"Smilin' Ed's Gang" becomes "Andy's Gang" next month when Andy Devine takes over as successor to the late Ed McConnell and a new block of 52 half-hour programs goes before the cameras. Frank Ferrin, who has been producing the "Gang" films for the last five years, will continue with the same format and Buster Brown shoes continues the sponsorship on the ABC-TV series.

Devine was chosen because of his kid following in the tv series, "Wild Bill Hickok," and his long service in pix as a comic.

Six half-hours in the "Musketeers" and the feature have already een in N. Y. in October.

Clue to the rapid expansion of the syndication field lies in the stockholders' report of Official Films, which reveals a net profit of $317,172 for the fiscal year ended June 30, four times the firm's earnings the year before. Official did a total business of about $2,500,000, and the high earnings percentage largely is a reflection of the fact that it owns its library, musical and cartoon packages outright.

Big earnings total comes in the packages outright.

Big earnings total comes in the face of a rapid expansion that has seen the firm's sales force jump from four working out of one office to 18 in nine branches, all joining the outfit since last January. It also marks the first year of Hal Hackett's tenure as president, with Hackett, who joined Official in April of 1953, coming in after the firm had been operating without the services of its then president Billy Goodheart who retired because of health.

Statement doesn't show Official's total business, but it's estimated by Hackett at $2,500,000. Hackett added that on the basis of current billings, the firm should gross. $3,000,000 next year. What the statement does is show sales on its own product, listing that at $656,401, and distribution commissions from its syndication of independently-owned product, with the commissions totalling. $352,098. Notes and accounts receivable total $1,007,305. Operating expenses (cost of sales, promotion, etc.) ran to $651,532.

Biggest chunk of the profits came from sale of the firm's "Music Hall Varieties" and cartoon shorts in library deals. Reason they contributed to the profit is that their cost to the company of some $750,000 has already been completely written off the books. Another heavy contributor to the black side of the ledger was the "My Hero" series, reruns of which Official has sold in over 100 markets. Firm did over $1,000,000 in gross business on the package of Robert L. Lippert features it's distribbing in most of the country. Overall expansion during the past fiscal year has been Official step deeper into syndication, picking up "Hero" and "Terry and the Pirates" for rerun sales, pacting for the overseas-produced "Colonel March" and "Secret File" series and grabbing distribution rights on "Four Star Playhouse," which Official repped in its network sale to Singer and Parker Pens.

Much in the manner of the major motion picture distribution companies, Unity Television is staging a sales drive named after one of its sales execs in commemoration of its 10th anni. Drive, which will run during the last quarter of this year, is the "Len Firestone Drive," named after the firm's national sales manager, and it's believed to be the first for the vidfilm industry. Arche Mayers, Unity prexy, said that cash prizes in excess of $1,000 will be awarded Unity field salesmen who bring in the largest dollar volume, the largest number of contracts and the largest single contract. He said that special packages with "incentive payment terms" have been prepared for stations, with an expanded film library plan also being offered. Pop Tunes In Doubletalk Cycle As 'Sh-Boom' Leads To 'Oop-Shoop,' Etc.

The current cycle of pop songs is showing up with a doubletalk flavor. Since the click of "Shopom," a flock of tunes have hit the market with nonsense titles, such as "Oop Shoop" and "I Need You Now," with the subtitle of "Bazoom." All of these tunes have originated from the rhythm & blues field and the titles are based on vocal phrases used by singing combos.

What's unique about the current songs is that the doubletalk titles have become the hit feature.

Victor Execs Hit Road To Plug 2d Volume Of Glenn Miller Edition

RCA Victor execs hit the road this week to kick off the diskery's new Glenn Miller Limited Edition, Vol. Two, as well as the fall longhair line. Exec contingent is holding a series of regional meetings from coast to coast with distribs and field personnel.

from coast to coast with distribs and field personnel.

Victor is aiming to duplicate the click promotion on its first volume of the Glenn Miller Limited Edition. Latter was priced at $24.95, as is the current set, and sold around 100,000 albums for a $2,500,000 gross at the retail level. New edition consists of 60 Miller numbers taken from radio broadcast tapes during the late 1930s and early '40s. The albums consist of five 12-inch longplay platters or 15 of the 45 rpm records.

The sales of the Miller band have been greater during the past year than when the bandleader was alive. Victor put out several other Miller albums and it's estimated that dealers racked up retail sales of more than $4,000,000 on the band.

of the Belge-born French nitery, pix and revue singer is a very engaging, appealing album. Eight tunes, most of them of strongly rhythmic, swingy style, are a welcome switch from the heartache, heartbreak, sombre school of Gallic song. Chanteuse has a strong, nasal, but pleasant and clear voice, and an uninhibited, bold, open style of song. Gay approach fits the gusty, swingy beat of most of the numbers, and in the comedy tune, "Leon." a rumba, she let's

Rival Factions Among N. Y. Tooters Kick Off Battle for Local 802

The blennial fight for control of New York's Local 802, biggest unit of the American Federation of Musicians with over 20,000 members, broke out last week as the major factional groups began taking shape. Elections for top officers have been set for the first week in December.

At the present time incumbent Local 802 prexy Al Manuti will head the Unity ticket, while Charles lucci, the local's secretary, will oppose him as head of the Bue ticket. Latter group had a longstanding supremacy in the union until Manuti upset them in 1952.

Bue ticket is expected to be leaded as a strictly instructive understite and the latter was a longstanding supremacy in the union until Manuti upset them in 1952.

Manuti's ticket is expected to be strengthened by several important defections from the Blue group. Among these will be Max Arons, member of the local's exec board and reputed to be the top votegetter in the union. Sam Suber, whom Manuti deposed as prexy two years ago, will run on the Jucci sale as member of the exec board. The situation may be complicated this year by the appearance of a third ticket. Both factions have been apprised that another ticket will come into the field although no spokesman for such a group has as yet made an appearance. Manuti's ticket is expected to be

TAX-EXEMPT OUTFITS CAN HIRE BANDS ON %

Washington, Sept. 21.

A tax-exempt organization does not lose its exemption when it pays talent on a percentage basis for intertaining at an affair, so long as the percentage is reasonable. Internal Revenue Service has just handed down this ruling in a case where a tax exempt organization hired a big name band to play a dance. The contract called for the band to receive 60% of the proceeds with a minimum guarantee of $1,000.

Reason for the clarification is that the law states the primary condition for exemption from the admissions tax is that all proceeds go to the exempt organization.

admissions tax is that all proceeds go to the exempt organization. "The term 'all the proceeds' means all the net proceeds of the regular admission charges or excess charges, as the case may be, after payment of actual and reasonable expenses incurred in presenting the event," reads the new ruling. Revenue Service did not disclose the name of the organization nor the band.

Tin Pan Alley is still hot for tieups with pic background themes.
Latest pic theme acquisition was made last week by Chappell Music on "The Barefoot Contessa," upcoming United Artists release.
Tune, which was penned by Italian composer Mario Nascimbene, currently is being shown to the diskeries under "Tire Song of the Barefoot Contessa" tag. It's being peddled as a strictly instrumental item now but it's understood that Chappell is prepping a lyric version. Pic, which stars Humphrey Bogart and Ava Gardner, preems in New York next week.

DECCA EXPANDS EPs WITH CATALOG FAVES

Deca Records is coming up with a major EP program this fall by packaging 50 of its requested albums on the 45 rpm speed. It'll be the first time that the diskery has dipped into its catalog for EP sets. Company is making available special metal display racks to dealers on quantity purchases.

Forget It

Everybody in the music business apparently just has to have a slogan. Even the Cornell University Records division of Cornell University Press, which has a flock of albums out that can best be described as "esoteric."

University lists one of these packages as "Voices of the Night: The Calls of 34 frogs, and toads of the United States and Canada." The listing adds that this is "Music to Remember."

Col, Apollo Settle Tiff Over Mahalia; Singer Set for 50G, 5-Yr. Pact

Set for 50G, 5-Yr. Pact

Hassle between Columbia Records and the indie Apollo label over who has Mahalia Jackson will be ironed out this week, with the thrush moving over to Col for a five-year term. Dispute flared up a couple of months ago when Col began dickering for the spiritualist thrush against Apollo's claim that she was still under its wing. However, after several weeks of bickering both Col and Bess Berman, Apollo prexy, came to a mutual agreement on the moveover.

Miss Jackson's pact with Col calls for a minimum $10,000 a year guarantee for the next five years. She'll be etched by diskery's pop artists & repertoire head Mitch Miller. Thursh also begins a new radio series over CBS next week.

MGM Preps Kidisks For Xmas Season

MGM Records already has its eye on the Christmas sales season. Diskery expects to hit the market shortly with a group of six special kidisks pegged for Yule buying. Kidisks, slated for Oct. 8 release include five new "Tom & Jerry" platters and a single extended play disk in the "Johnny Jet" series.

RCA PREPS EARLY BOW OF NASHVILLE STUDIOS

Now that recording sessions in Nashville for country artists have become a standardized procedure for all diskers, RCA Victor is prepping an early opening for its studios in that hillbilly capital. It'll be the first major company to operate its own studio in Nashville ville.

Steve Sholes, Victor's country & western chief, is heading to Nashville this week to ready the studio. Ann Fulchino, who handles poppublicity for Victor, will also head south and will help Sholes plan for promotion around Eddy Arnold's 10th anni with the company.

The N.Y. Philharmonic-Symphony, in a statement issued yesterday (Tues.), had an operating deficit for 1953-54 of $251.914.50 as against a deffect in '52-53 of $235,845.41, or a hike of $16,069.14. Deducting contributions of $92,-168.93 and income from investments of $35,540.20, left a final net deficit of $124,205.42. Increased costs also leads management to expect another operating deficit for '54-'55 of over 300G, and final net loss of 200G to 225G.

Total ticket receipts last season

final net loss of 200G to 225G.
Total ticket receipts last seasom increased from $579,693,65 to $600,427.94, although subscription sales for concerts in N.Y. declined slightly. Management cited a steady increase in maintenance costs since World War II. Total orch salaries, including extra payments when Sunday broadcasts were commercially sponsored, rose from $338,779.50 to $569,931.80. Minimum weekly salary went up from $60 to $145. Minimum payment for a two-hour recording session went from $28 to $38.50, and extra salaries for recording jumped from $16.633 to $89,136. Tour per diem allowances jumped from $7.50 to $12.

To meet the 1953-54 net deficit of $124,205.42, some 3,642
"Friends of the Philharmonic" contibuted $121,182.93, leaving a balance of $3,022.49, which was charged against a "Friends of the Philharmonic Special Gifts Reserve." A year ago 3,426 contributed $110,678.19.

Wanna Top Accompanist For a Song? New Platter Series Set for Singers

Disk project being launched this fall, aimed for professional singer as well as voice teachers and students, is being eyed with interest in the longhair trade. This is a series of five 12-inch LP hl-fi platter, tagged Proficiency Records, issued by the Murlyn Recording Co., N. Y. (Outfit has Chase National Bank and American Express Co. coin behind it, with Muriel Wiggin Selden. prez and sparkplug).

Disks offer a half-dozen longhair and semi-classical concert selections, sung by top talent with piano accompaniment. Original ginmick is that, following each number, the accompaniment is replayed without the singer's rendition, so that the pro or student of voice may sing the selection himself, along with the music.

Protect's appeal is that a singer mig the selection nimself, along with the music.

Project's appeal is that a singer can familiarize himself with a song, a top artist's style and, interpretation of it, then use an experienced, expensive accompanist's services to study and emulate the artist. Young singers who can't afford firstrate accompanists, or for longer than limited periods, can especially benefit. Selling points to schools are that the disks enable a teacher to simplify his teaching procedure; give a student opportunity to make progress between lessons, and save time when no qualified accompanist is available.

Series presents Met Opera bartone Herbert Janssen, Met tenors Giulio Gari and Sydney Rayner, Met soprano Laura Castellano and Chi Opera and musical comedy soprano Evelyn Herberteach singing six songs on separate disks. These include opera arias, lieder and folksongs; in several tongues. Accompanist on all disks is Sally Leff, vocal coach and composer, who has accompanied many Met stars in recitals. Disks will sell at $8.95 each.

AUDIVOX'S 1ST OUTSIDE PACT, WITH HURRICANES

In the first step of its expansion program, the indie Audivox label has picked up four masters cut by a new male quartet, The Hurricanes. This marks the first time that the label has inked outside talent. Heretofore, all Audivox neleases featured Dorothy Collins and Raymond Scott exclusively.

and Raymond Scott exclusively, Scott operates the Audivox label, independently. The Hurricanes' initial Audivox release will be a coupling of "I Keep Crying" and "Teardrops."

A Special Edition of

VARIETY

Celebrating the 40th Anniversary of The American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers will be published next month

Through the title-pages, ideas and publications of the ASCAP membership, since its founding in 1914, there has been reflected a panorama of the American scene, as interpreted through the treasury of American popular music, which is unique in its individual and collective import and impact.

Like films from Hollywood, automobiles from Detroit, tractors from the midwest, aviation production from the west coast, along with such indigenously American trademarks as chewinggum, Coca-Cola and baseball, nothing — but nothing—better reflects the American tradition than American popular music. It sets the world to whistling, humming and dancing to what is affectionately, if somewhat inaccurately, labelled "Yankee jazz." American music has and makes friends globally.

Name byliners from the ASCAP membership of writers and publishers — along with other trained show biz observers — will make this special 40th Anniversary Number of ASCAP an unusual special issue for readership—and preservation. Its circulation will be extended by the Society itself into offbeat channels, as well as within the amusement industry. It will reach an important echelon of opinion-makers and news interpreters, as well as the utilizers of the vast fountainhead of music that constitutes the performing rights organization known as the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers.

Inside Stuff—Music

After taking cracks at the pop album liners on Capitol. Vanguard and Norgran (and praising those of George Avakian for Col and Victor's on "Inside Sauter-Finnegan"), George Frazier, writing in Saturday Night, Toronto weekly concludes, "In all the literature of album lines, nothing is quite so appalling as the mess of misinformation accompanying the forthcoming second volume of the so-called Glenn Miller Limited, Edition."

He then explains that Victor asked him for a rough, indicative draft, which he dashed off in an hour and submitted. They told him he was on the right track and they'd send him the record to hear he was on the right track and they a send that the record to hear before starting the job. The records never arrived; and now he hears his rough draft "is being published as part of a $24.95 album. As for the RCA-Victor employee who allowed this to happen; he has left the company to accept an appointment on the Dartmouth faculty. Daniel Webster may have been right when he said, 'Dartmouth is a small college, but there are those who love her,' but the poor s.o.b. whose byline appears over what he wrote essentially as a memorandum is not among them. I say that without fear of contradiction. I, you see, am the poor s.o.b."

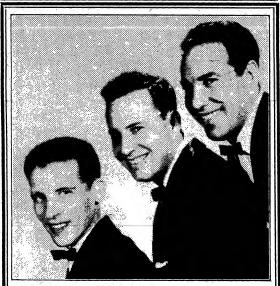

Straightening out that "Bernie's Tune" situati , it was written by a Washington, D. C. jazz musician named Bernie Miller, who's now deceased. It has been played by jazz groups for some time, but was first recorded by Gerry Mulligan for Pacific Jazz and credited to Miller. It was recorded as a mambo first by Cal Tjader for Fantasy on an album issued this summer. The recording was made in Hollywood last spring, using Eddie Canos, the pianist from the Tony Martinez band. Martinez also cut for RCA Victor. Tune is published by Skyview Music. Billing on the Ted Heath slice for London Records is incorrectly attributed to Mulligan. rectly attributed to Mulligan.

Decca wax biog of Bing Crosby, "Bing," will get an unusual two-hour showcasing on NBC Radio next Sunday, Major portions of the album will be played on the program, which will also have taped greetings from show biz personalities who figured in Crosby's career. Among these will be Paul Whiteman, in whose band Crosby started as a singer; Irving Berlin, Johnny Mercer, Connee Boeswell, Bob Burns and his son, Gary, who recently debuted as a solo wax performer for Decca.

Rival diskeries don't often work hand in hand, but this time the cooperation of Coral Records cleared the way for RCA Victor release of the original soundtrack album of Otto Preminger's film version of "Carmen Jones." Coral permitted the use of Pearl Bailey's voice although she is under exclusive to that company. Of the other stars in the film, Harry Belafonte is a Victor contractee and Dorothy Dandridge is not tied to any waxery.

Pointing up the importance of a disclick, the Crew Cuts, who are riding on the crest of a 1,000,000 disk seller, "Sh-Boom" (Mercury), recently broke three straight records in three one-night stands last week. Dates were at the Riverside, Spring Lake, Ill.; The Riviera, Lake Geneva, Wis., and the Les-Buzz Ballroom, Green Bay, Wis. Quartet is slated to make its New York nitery debut next month at the Boulevard, Queens.

Although Johnny Mercer is still on Capitol Records' roster, he's doing a one-shot vocal with Les Brown's orch on Coral Records. Mercer will sing "Doodle-Dee-Doo," a new tune which he wrote. Capitol okayed the assignment.

'Ramble' Hitting Revival Trail With an Avalanche Of Varied New Waxings

The 28-year-old Dixieland fave, "Muskrat Ramble," is hitting the revival trail via a record company avalanche. There are currently eight new waxings of the tune on the market and a steady string of diskeries is hopping on the "Ramble" bandwagon.

"Ramble" bandwagon.

Tune was pushed into the comeback picture a couple of months ago when the Matys Bros. cut it for the Indie 20th Century label. When it began to stir up deejay attention in Phila delphia, Dave Miller bought it for his Essex label to give it nationwide distribution. Rival diskeries were then tipped off to the "Ramble" excitement and began to rush through their own instrumental, vocal and mambo versions. Already on the market are Rusty Draper (Mercury); McGuire Sisters (Coral); Louis Armstrong (Decca); Joe Bonnemere (Roost); Woody Herman (Capitol); John Gorty and Al Romero (Victor).

The prosecution contended that the trio encouraged Bay Area amateur songwriters to invest thousands of dollars in the promotion of their songs through 20th Century Music or through two firms in Hollywood operated by Wald—Wald Music and Sherwynne Music. Wald maintained he had merely been hired by Erickson and co. in an advisory capacity to review songs professionally and was paid $5 per song by them.

Erickson was characterized by the D.A.'s office "as a fast talking salesman," and was the hustler for the firm, talking the amateurs into investing more and more money. Wald's firms were represented as being American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers affiliates and he as a legitimate song publisher. Displayed prominently on the wall of the 20th Century Music office in Oakland was a letter from Wald making 20th an accredited ASCAP firm.

Also displayed on the office wall were signed photographs of singers and bandleaders, all recording artists, autographed with personal messages to Wald, Leoni and Erickson. The D.A.'s office introduced Sherwood Merrill, handwriting expert of the State Criminal Identification and Investigation Board of Sacramento, who showed that in at least five cases the autographs and messages were written by Wald and messages were written by himself.

Then the writers were told that the Wald or Sherwynn companies had accepted the songs. The next step was to tell the songwriters that they couldn't say when anything was to be realized on the song and a recording session would have to be setup with Wald. This involved the payment of up to $304 a song for Wald to hire musicians and pay other expenses. Some of the amateurs had several songs. A definite release date was given for the records, five or six months in the future, but, the D. A. says, "there never was a release and no song was ever placed on the market by a publisher or record company."

In some instances, the song writers were given checks for $304 postdated to the release date of the song and, in one instance, the check was made good and, in another, it bounced and after legal Then the writers were told that

A number of tunes by the victims were recorded on Horizon, all by union musicians and all paid for legally, and a certain amount of promotional work for the records was done by Kenny Burt, leader of an instrumental trio, which accompanied singers on the disks. The songwriters paid the expenses for these recording sessions and sometimes four separate songwriters would pay the full expenses of the same session.

Publicity releases concerning the songs' acceptance by Wald's companies and their recording on Horizon would be sent to local columnists adding to the shill material used to impress new victims. The investigation has been underway for over a year, headed by District Attorney Inspectors Charles Young and Lloyd Jester who found it very difficult to get many of the victims to talk because of embarrassment.

Miriam Stern, executive director of the Songwriters Protective Assn., on the Coast to set up a branch in Hollywood, flew to San Francisco to aid in the case, providing background information on the song publishing business for the D. A.

Latest Coast group to hit Gotham is Turk Murphy's. San Francisco Jazz Band. At Child. Paramount, Murphy gets a good chance to show the jazz buffs what all the shouting has been about. His is a driving dixieland outfit with some modern interpolations that bring a new gusto to the originals. Arrangements are pegged for listening and dancing and Murphy wins strong aud approval in both departments.

Instrumentation consists of Murphy, trombone; Everett Farey, trumpet; Wally Rose, piano; Bob Helm, clarinet; Bob Short, bass, and Al Lyon, banjo, Murphy sparks the group with his solid trombone licks and gets a hefty assist from He's got a big and varied book that can keep the tablers and terpsets interested for hours. All the arrangements are inventive, and when he or his sidemen take off on a solo lick, the numbers really move. During the sets caught, Murphy belted "Birth of the Blues." "Ragtime Dance." "If You Could Shimmy Like My. Sister Kate," "I Wish I Was In Peoria," "When My Sugar Walks Down The Street," and "Silver Dollar," among others. All were delivered with a free-wheeling beat that was hard to resist. Murphy also does a fair job on a couple of vocal stints.

The old standbys, such as Ella Fitzgerald, Flip Phillips, Roy Eldridge, Oscar Peterson Trio; Ben Webster and Bill Harris, have been supplemented by Buddy DeFranco, Dizzy Gillespie, Louis Bellson and Buddy Rich, who returns to this troupe after a year's absence. ship.

One of the high spots of the Carnegie Hall date was the one-shot appearance of Lionel Hampton, who's currently playing at the Basin Street nitery! Hampton joined with DeFranco, Rich and the Peterson trio for a couple of numbers on the vibes and then broke it up with "Flying Home," with challenge stint on the drums with Rich. session on "Perdido."

Miss Fitzgerald also was in excellent form and, for a departure, she mixed up some current pops with the oldies. She clicked on a hoked-up version of "Hernando's Hideaway" and straight ballad renditions of "Hey There" and "The Man That Got Away" She also did "That Old Black Magic" and a couple of her trademarked scat numbers to keep the gallery happy.

a couple of her trademarked seat numbers to keep the gallery happy. Traditional in these concerts is the whistling and stomping from the kids, who seem to go off into their act at the signal of a repeated riff. Phillips apparently knows what buttons to push best and he sets them off most consistently. Peterson, with Roy Brown on bass and Herb Ellis on guitar, also gets them stomping with his driving keyboard style, also registering with a couple of solid vocals.

Bellson, another fave with the kids, obliged with some fancy drum solo work in addition to backing up the main group of sidemen. In this group, Gillespie, playing his newly-designed trumpet, Harris on trombone and Webster on sax, were excellent. DeFranco, playing with a small combo, also scored with some intricate, double-time clarinet figures.

Granz handled the emcee assignment in straightforward effective style, letting the music speak for itself.

Opening day (Mon.) sessions centered on general domestic ball-Opening day (Mon.) sessions centered on general domestic ball-room problems and betterment of operation — danceband relations. Warning went out that ASCAP, which is due to issue new contracts Jan. 1, may hike its rates owing to a sharp decline in the licensing company's take since 1946. This may lead to a hot tiff, but NBOA's controversial name band reporting service shapes as the top topic. Confidential reports circulated by dancery ops on how name bands service them have been a sore spot among bookers, who feel they're often unfair. On slate for remainder of the conclave are sessions on the new Fedeval tax revenue law and customary promotional programs.

Single Biz

is coming into its own. The Benny Goodman 1938 Carnegie Hall Concert, packaged by Columbia Records a few years ago at an $11 tag, grossed well over $1,000,000 and set the format for future packages in the pop and jazz field. More recently, RCA Victor's Glenn Miller Limited Edition, at $25 per set, sold over $100,000 while Decca's wax biog of Bing Crosby, at $27.50, is expected to top that mark.

Diskery execs see the full flowering of the packaged goods market to come with the elimination of 78 rpm machines and the widespread circulation of phonos equipped to play the slower speeds. The 45 and 33 speeds lend themselves naturally to the album format, both in the planning stage and in the display racks for customer perusal.

This was 6,467 above the previous record of 338,770 set at last years Fair. This year also had the highest single-day attendance in the 5-year history of the Fair, when 62,619 went through the gates Sunday (12).

Paul Olsen

Paul Olson, owner and manager of the Amusement Co. of America which had the midway, said the gross take from shows and rides his firm operated along the midway would be well over $100,000. Previous high was about $80,000 in 1951.

Previous high was about $80,000 in 1951.

A bangup promotion and publicity_campaign to sell the Fair, plus outstanding special events, are credited with the record attendance and excellent financial record. Policy of free grandstand proved popular. Barnes and Carruthers provided the sports and outdoor show, with Hank Hansen, ski jumper; Bill McClellan, Florida alligator wrestler; Belouquin Log Rollers and canoe tilters; The Gauchos, sharpshooting act; Haushalter's Golden Retrievers, dog act, making up the grandstand show. Special events drawing capacity houses to the Coliseum were the Kentucky-Indiana All-Star basketball game; wrestling, headlining Lou Thes; horse show, climaxed by the five galted stakes Saturday (18), fiddler's, gospel singers and numerous other contests sponsored by various farm organizations. You Can't Win Vs. Gambling Laws

Washington, Sept. 21. It's getting tougher to beat the Federal gambling laws.

Consider the guy who figured a gimmick to get exemption from the $250-a-year U. S. tax on slot machi Since the law specifically stated "coin-operated devices," his angle was to have the sucker pay an attendant, who then set the wheels spinning without insertion of any coin.

Internal Revenue Service has just officially ruled the gimmick is okay and does eliminate payment of the $250 license tax per ma-of the $250 license tax per machine, but...

The "but," says the Revenue. Service, is this another section of the law provides that those who receive wagers must pay an occupational tax of $50 a year, each. In this instance, the attendant who accepts the money is subject to the bite. What's more, still another section of the Revenue Code imposes an excise tax of 10% on any wager placed in a lottery conducted for profit. for profit.

Ice shows have been maintaining their boxoffice even at times when virtually every undertaking in the live talent field has been losing live talent field has been losing ground at the wickets. The basic appeal of this type of show, especially "Ice Capades." which opened its run at N. Y.'s Madison Square Garden last Wednesday (15), may lie in the fact that it's family entertainment. This is one layout that has been built for the entire household and has long been promoted as an ideal spot for a family indoor picnic.

John Harris' latest edition is indoor picnic.

John Harris' latest edition is probably one of the best in the 15-year history of that venture. The production has that "budget-bedamned" look. It's estimated that at least $500,000 went into the making of this show, with costuming taking up the major portion of the cost. The glitter, color and spectacle are more evident than usual in this edition.

One of the phenomena of "Ice Candes" lies in the fact that it doesn't rely on names to draw the customers, although there is a somewhat belated attempt to cash in on Donna Atwood's popularity, which has been building, principally through her long association with the show. She may retire at the end of this season. end of this season.

Miss Atwood, topping the show, has been dancing with Bobby Specht for any years. They've become one of the better teams around, each season seeing some more maturity in their work. Their choreography is imaginatively designed and with sufficient commercialism to rate plaudits. In her solo work Miss Atwood exhibits savry and shows markood pand shows work worthy of top mittings.

other gimmicks that mean accelerated boxoffice for "Ice Capades." The innovation of a few years ago, a tab version of a musical comedy, has apparently built itself into a big item. This year's condensation is a variation of the legiter. "Wish You Were Here," with the locale moved from the Catskills to Lake Placid where an ice carnival is in progress. It's a well-staged affair with a tape carrying the voices and tunes. There's still a little too much book in the piece, but the extra length seems worth it in view of the fact that the story makes sense. The tunes are excellently taped and the words and libretto are mimed well by the participants. Miss Atwood and Specht skate the romantic leads, while other roles are assumed by Helen Davidson, Rosemary Henderson and Herb Cowman. Rosemary Cowman.

Cowman.

Harris has also put in a few more innovations, major one being an ice version of "Dragnet," with Jack Webb doing a taped commentary. Webb has recorded a different speech for each town so that local police chiefs and other bits peculiar to the particular city in which the show is playing can be mentioned. It's a lively piece, with a few comedic overtones, and lush costumes.

The show has also gone in for costumes.

The show has also gone in for another bit of name-dropping in its production number, "Les Patineurs," suggested by the Sadler's-Wells Ballet. The costumes are sumptious in this sequence. Another concession to the arts lies in its other selling point, "An American In Paris," which has been given a big treatment. Solo parts by Miss Atwood and Specht are on par with the other pieces.

The show has anyte a big number.

par with the other pieces.

The show has put a big punch into its opening sequence, "Celestial Ballet," in which it actually achieves an out-of-world quality in its props, which have clouds emanating from a towering structure. The costumes do not suggest that the participants are earthlings. Another production number is the usual Latin-motif "Tropicana," which has okay choreography by Dench & Stewart.

Aside from the two principals.

which has okay choreography by Dench & Stewart.

Aside from the two principals, the rest of the cast has competent skaters, although not in the name brackets. All have tasteful routines, with Helen Davidson starting off on a graceful number showing good spins. Rosemary Henderson works along the same vein for some excellent results. However, the strongest single seems to be Alan Konrad, who punctuates his frappe work with some excellent acrobatics, including butterflies. Johnny Lettengarver similarly gets a hot mitt for his solo work, but the shadow skating bit with Don Bearson is considerably weaker. The Eddie Runyon conception of a straw man fails to realize its full potential.

a straw man fails to realize its full potential.

Jackson & Lynam's comedy work hits good laugh returns with a Mack Sennett spoof and a ballet number. Another good comedy bit is by Willie Kall, who ribs an ice ballerina. Acrobatics by Ken Muhen & Ed Raiche gets over well and the badminton game by Hugh Foreie & Stig Larson is by now a standard in ice circles. The Doggie number by Dougherty & Stevenson is well received. The hound designer rates a salvo.

Two teams new to local audiences are Silvia & Michel, who combine the technicalities of skating with the dance and have come up with a delightful turn, and Rosemary & Bobby Maxon, a likable pair of youngsters who seems to be skating for the sheer joy of it. They make a deep indent on the mob. Of course, The Old Smoothies Orrim Markhus & Irma Thomas) perform with their usual assurance and bring down the house.

a livelier gait through the elimination of unnecessary encores. It's a fast-moving display with a lot of glitter put in by the imaginative costuming of Billy Livingston and the choreography by Ron Fletcher. Jeri Mayhall showbacks excellently.

Los Angeles, Sept. 16.

Shipstads & Johnson presentation of ice show in two acts (19 scenes) directed and choreographed by Francis Claudet, Mary Jane Lewis, Stanley D. Kahn. Music by Larry Morey, conducted by George Hackett, costumes by Helen Rose; props and settings by Fernando Carrere. Cast: Richard Duyler, Betty Schalow, Mr. Frick Sonja & Franz, Marie Crimmins, Ginger Clayton & Jack Boyle, Frances Dorsey, Florence Rae, Sad Sacks, Scarecrows, Walter & Irene, Kernnond Bros., Pat Shanahan, Pastor Tuins, Georgianna Sutton, Marlene Jackson, Carol Caverly, Phil Skillings, Ole Ericksen & Dick Mershon, The Henrys and Ice Folliettes. At Pan Pacific Aud., Los Angeles, Sept. 16-Oct. 10, '54.

It gets tougher every year, but the Shipstads and Johnson manage to keep coming up with topnotch ice entertainment annually. The newest version is no exception and the imaginative productions, eyefilling costuming and lighting gimmicks added to the far above average blade work add up to a solid two and one-half hours of entertainment. As usual, the moppet appeal is stressed to guarantee hefty matinee business in addition to the nighttime potential, and the 1955 edition is a cinch to return a hefty profit on its investment of approximately $375,000.

Among the production standouts are the colorful "Danza Del Fuego," a glittering Spanish routine complete with gay costumes, toreros, imitation fire and some breathtaking bladework by Florence Rae; "Planet G." a science fiction fantasy in which the Icefolliettes are clad in clear plastic uniforms complete with neon tubing and provide a background for Betty Schalow's excellent fancy-skating routines; "Picnic in Podunk." which blends humor, color and the skating of the twins Jean and Joan Pastor; and the opening Christmas routine in which Marie Crimmins shines as a Snowball.

Crimmins shines as a Snowball.

Beyond that there's the usual peak work by Richard Dwyer, who gets better annually; the humor of Mr. Frick, who has worked out a fine new solo act since the retirement of partner Frack; the dance work of Walter and Irene, and some fine new imports in the acrocomedic Kermond Bros. from Australia and Sonja and Franz from Germany.

Special showing was followed by appearances of KPRC-TV, Houston, execs in the room and reading of congratulatory telegrams.

Business was heavy at the hotel and there were many turnaways, brought on by the fact that the previous commitments forced Miss Roth to work in the smaller of the hotel's public rooms. She closes tomorrow night (Wed.).

AGVA Dickers Turnover Of Philadelphia Office

Philadelphia. Sept. 21.

Negotiations are now under way Negotiations are now under way for the surrender of the Philadelphia offices of the American Guild of Variety Artists to representatives of the parent organization. Dick Jones and Charles Garvey, now in pozession of the Jayout, are reportedly making a deal with Lou Smolove, who was sent in by the AGVA office in New York.

Basis of the deal now under ne gotiation is whether Jones is entitled to two-weeks' vacation money as he claims, according to AGVA spokesmen. Surrender of the keys, furniture and records is involved in the deal.

Jones, former eastern regional rep of AGVA, has set up his own organization, the Actors International Union. It's the second time he organized a union in opposition to AGVA. In 1947 he set up a rival organization after being fired.

"It's a problem that needs special handling," he points out. "The advance man can't do the whole job in the limited time at his disposal. He gets into town, contacts the papers, talks to radio or television station execs, checks to see how the house is scaled, has a hurried conference with promoter or entertainment committee chairman, and then is off in a rush to make the next town. All he has time for is the routine job—and routine jobs no longer sell as many tickets."

To meet the situation, Jones purchased a fire-engine red Nash station wagon, equipped it with a sound system and hired Colvig to make the trip with advance man Bill Tostevin. They make the jumps together, planning their assault on the next town. On arrival, Tostevin handles his regular duties while "Nutsy the Clown" goes to town.

Longstanding enmity between two Windy City vaude organizations ended abruptly last week, as American Guild of Variety Artists chapter here and the rebel Entertainment Managers Assn. came to "fair and equitable" terms. Matter was settled in a showdown powwow. It's understood that this fee was better standardized in last week's negotiations, which brought Chicago indie agents back to the AGVA rolls. Probers Get After Dip In Ohio Fair Grosses

Cölumbus, Sept. 21.

Investigations loom after attendance at the Ohio State Fair dropped 14% below last year's.

Final tabulation of the gross and exact attendance figures has not yet been made but fair manager Sam Cashman said at the close of the eight-day exposition that paid attendance totaled 237,658, as compared with 277,681 in 1953. Gatereceipts amounted to about $199,000, as against $235,000 last yeer.

Last week seven members of the Ohio Legislature's 11 member County Fair Study Commission voted unanimously to request a study to be made of the failing Ohio State Fair. Rep. Elton Kile (R., Madison County) directed the heaviest fire at the fair claiming the agricultural-minded exposition is being made into a "gigantic midway festival," relegating Ohio industry and agriculture to a secondary role.

Hollywood, Sept. 21.

Gypsy Rose Lee will be the next top American performer to make the trek Down Under for a vaudate, teeing off a new surge of live entertainment activity in Australia. She leaves this week, to open a two-week stand at the Palladium in Sydney Oct. 1.

Harry O. Wren, theatre's exec, has been conducting trans-Pacific telephone discussions with local agencies seeking acts to follow in what apparently will be a steady stream of talent. Miss Lee may be followed by the Ink Spots.

Chicago Theatre, Chicago, sole major vaude outlet in Chicago, will drop stageshows for duration of the run of the Judy Garland starrer, "A Star Is Bonn." The dropping of stagers will leave the second city in the country without a stageshow outlet. The theatre recently obtained relief from the Jackson Park decree, which limited Chi firstruns to two weeks. Consequently, it's expected that the run may even go into the Yule season.

Chicago Theatre, booked by United Paramount Theatre's Harry Levine from New York, is probably the most consistent user of vaude acts in the country. It's the only house that still goes i for names on a year-round basis and is regarded as the most important stageshow stop in the country. At this point, vaude is expected to resume when "Star's" run is over.

For one thing, even show bizites must have been impressed by Arlen's succession of clicks. Even within th trade there are tendencies to forget identification; sometimes it's a case of one collaborator eclipsing another, so that many a song has been mentally earmarked as "a Johnny Mercer" tune, when actually he did the wordage to Arlen's melody. If it isn't that, then it's the interpretation. Ethel Waters and "Stormy Weather," Billy Daniels and "Old Black Magic," Judy Garland "Over the Rainbow," Sinatra and "World On a String," Lena Horne and "Blues In the Night," Tony Martin and "Let's Fall In Love," Harry Richman and "I Love a Parade"—these are other manifestations of a current "sponsor identification with songs and singers which, like the lack of product identification too often in radio and ty, finds the listener/looker ignorant of the true identity of who and what makes it all possible.

It's this surprise impact, in a measure, that figures largely in making Miss Barton's salute to Arlen pay off so rousingly.

Miss Barton is undeniable click of large proportions at the Copa, a stature she has never heretofore attained. Frank Schiffman, Apollo's operator, after refurbishing the house, has seen fit to invest in more production and greater name value in an effort to make Harlem more conscious of this emporium. Artistically, the Apollo's shows are probably the best they have been in a long time. Unfortunately, the boxoffice hasn't reflected to any great degree, the upped expenditures and the greater effort that goes into the shows. However, each bill seems to have building power, and name bookings seem to be building towards a cumulative effect.

The house is able to get a more representative roster of headliners. Part of the reason lies in the fact that colored performers seem to have a sense of responsibility to this large Negro community. For example, in the current headlineact, Sammy Davis Jr. tells that he asked Schiffman to have him play this house. In this case, it's a sense of responsibility, and the vanity of a hometown boy coming to his native heath after he has made good in the bigtime. In some cases, it's still a week's playing time. Davises Sr. and Jr., and Mastin, are making their first appearance here since they hit the upper strata. Indeed, this show has the aura of a homecoming, as the trio played this theatre some years ago when they were merely an act. In this atmosphere, the junior Davis, the mainstay of the turn, gives what is probably the most relaxed performance of his career.

He is at home and at ease, and seems to be enjoying his work. His lines frequently have the quality of ad libs which give the entire proceedings a fresh turn. After his rendition of "This is My Beloved," there were actually cheers at the show caught. Rapport between Davis and the audience is further continued with his musical work. He plays the drums and trumpet in a creditable manner. The audience seems loathe to let Davis go and he doesn't like the idea of breaking away either. This is one of the soundest vaude bills to play this Glasgow house for some months. Acts are individually strong and varied, and the upcoming vocal team of Teddy Johnson and Pearl Carr promises well for the future.

tends to accentuate the down-grade moments. On the plus side is her chic Balmain wardrobe.

Miss Wilson is an ex-Copa line-girl who has come a long way, and as such commanded marked attention. Perhaps the naturalness of her segue from the al fresco nitery into the posh rooms, as a s.a. thrush, was part of the aura of appeal; but somehow the naturalness in her voice has been diluted. When she essays that trademarked break in her voice, as in the finale "Wonderful Wonderful Thing," she's the Julie Wilson of old, "Don't Let Julia Fool Ya," "It Was Wonderful," "Doing The Mambo." "Pagliacci Had Nothing On Me," "Money, Honey," "Where Can I Go Without You," "Bad, Bad Bad' saudience number) and a couple of others add up a little too much, Editing should improve the sun total.

Miss Wilson had an unusually builish premiere, a tribute to her personal draw with the international set. Conrad N. Hilton and others of his echelon from the hotel chain headed big parties; maitre d'Fred was treading a tight rope in light of the demand. The Marciano-Charles fight influx, of course, further added to Gotham's general nite life bullishness.

Ted Straeter is back helming the crack dansapation, with fine assist by Mark Monte's Continentals who, per usual, produce plenty of terp tempos for a four-man combo.

Johnson (16); no cover or minimum.

Ted Lewis brings his revue and orch in for a sprightly session of music and frolic, spiced with a generous application of nostalgia as purveyed by the highhatted tragedian of song. The 85-minute topus finds Lewis emceeing the acts and wandering in and out of them as smoothly as if they'd been rehearsed that way. It's a good show, following as it does the familiar Lewis formula.

With his props the highhat, clarinet and cane, Lewis delivers dramatic song dissertations, familiar to two generations of cafe devotees. And whether he leans unashamedly to corn or resurrecto memories, the headliner is a master eraftsman. "Though the Years Go Rolling By, leads to "Is Everybody Happy," for a smooth opener. In "You'll Look Much Better When You Smile," he lyficizes intros to acts that take a brief turn on the large stage. "Old Cop On the Beat" segues to "McAnd My Shadow"—signal for "shadow" how 4, Eiroy Peace, to make his entrance and mimic the star in his motions, always a socko piece of biz.

Lewis clarinets "St. Louis Blues," with blatant start as he recorded it in 1917, to change the pace to rhythm, then to clowning bits with the audience. Other Lewis faves are "Sunny Side Of the Street." "Just Around the Corner." "The Old High Hat." and the show biz saga—"Only A Few Of Us Left." The star evokes heavy mittinging with every offering, and in the story of his life, a gambling saga the headliner cops laugh honors for the night.

For extra added filip, 10 Miss Universe beautiles parade on stage to a nice hand; Winners from Canada to Israel and Singapore, from Texas to California, all rate bows for beauty and polse. The Ted Lewis orch backing is solid support. Heldover by Arden and worthy of special note, is the "After Five" choreo, in which Art Johnson ably handles the lyrics as the line moves in fast-changing, moods that's climaxed by a color phantasy, the light booth spots hitting the dancers in kaleidescopic fashion, reds, blues, pinks, etc.

The Copa Room has literally come of age with the current Jack Entratter offering, a sparkling, colorful revue that features in its closing skit an original and certainly one of the most adeptly-executed ideas in a nitery. Involving the two stars, the Met. Opera's Robert Merrill and Louis Armstrong of Basin. Street in a highhat vs. lowdown theme with a reverse twist, this finale will long be the topic of conversation among boit devotees.

Seventy-five minute layout is loaded with talent and is astutely staged and written by Sid Kuller, with the lyrics and music by Kuller, with the lyrics and music by Kuller, with the lyrics and music by Kuller and Lyrnn Murray, and orchestrations in the deft hands of Al Sendery. Bob Gilbert and Renee Stuart are responsible for the best pair of production numbers delivered by the line of Copa Girls.

Baritone Merrill opens with "Matinata," and adds "I Got Plenty of Nothin". "You'll Never Wal Alone," a "Pagliacci" aria, and Figaro's song from "Barber of Seville," all to sock effect. His take-off on Ezio Pinza in "Some Enchanted Evening" is just as amusing and entertaining as it was the last two times he's given it here, and it rocks the house with laughter.

Bright Guest Show Helps N. Y.'s No. 1 Fifth Ave. Light Up 20th Anni

There are 20 candles on N. Y.'s No. 1 Fifth Ave.'s anni cake this week, and there are few clubs around town that can hold a candle to this Greenwich Village intimery in dishing out a steady stream of bright young talent and an all-around pleasant evening-out. Spot, like its uptown bookalikes, Le Ruban Bleu and the Blue Angel, has long been an incubator for young nitery talent and with its no cover long been an incubator for young nitery talent and with its no cover and no minimum policy has drawn a constant young college-kid crowd that usually stays away from the steep uptown minimum tabs.

The talent policy of the room now is in the hands of Bob Downey. He's been at th keyboard here for the past 14 years, and for the past nine years has been lining up bills and prowling the new talent. The intimery setup was kicked off in 1934 under the aegis of Victor Gilbert, who subsequently dreamed up the duo-piano gimmick which is one of the room's main attractions now, Julius Monk (now host at Le Ruban Bleu) and Joe Lillie handled the duo piano

Joe Lillie handled the duo-piano chores then, and Downey and Hariold Fonville have been carrying on the same assignment for the past nine years. Other vets still associated with No. 1 are Hazel Webster, who's been playing the ivories solo for the past 18 years and Leo, maitre d' since the start. In the talent field, the roster of the room's "finds" is long and imposing. Among some of its discoveries, who are coming back for guest stints during the two-week 20th anni celebration period, are Russel Nype, Martha Wright, Bibl. Osterwald, Jack Cassidy and Jimmy Komack.

youngest of No. 1 vets," is a top example of the type of talent that the room brings in and nurtures. (In Komack's closing payoff tribute, he gives credit to Harold Fonville, who coached him and developed material for the act.) Komack is bright and fresh, with an appeal that's hard to beat. Since he preemed his new act here early this year, he's moved on to a long stint at the nearby Bon Soir and then to the Blue Angel. He's also set for a legit revue; a picture deal is in the offing, and he's nabbed a disking pact with Coral Records. Similar stories can be told of many other. No. 1 first-timers.

The anni show follows the room's familiar pattern. Patricia Bright, who debuted here 10 years ago, headlines with a bagfull of ribtickling song parodies and impressions. She destroys the French chantonalism and she does more damage to the South than Gen. Sherman ever did in an acid-dipped tune,

She destroys the French Challes sies with a takeoff Gallic emotionalism and she does more damage to the South than Gen. Sherman ever did in an acid-dipped tune, "The South Isn't Southern Anymore." The special material items are neatly conceived and expertly delivered.

John Juliano's assets are good looks and a strong set of pipes. On the debit side, however, is his songalog selection. He hugs the slow tempo as though there were nothing else around. Each tune stands up separately, but after 12 minutes of the same mood it begins to get wearing. He'd do well by interlanding with couple of sprightly rhythm numbers: minutes of the do well to get wearing. He'd do well interlarding with couple corightly rhythm numbers.

Basin Street, N. Y.

Lionel Hampton Orch (17), with Stella Gil, Sonny Parker, Curly Hamner, Bertice Reading, Jack Teagarden Sextet, $3 minimum, $1.50 admission.

Lionel Hampton is one of the few bandleaders who over the years has been able to adapt. himself, to the changing moods of American musical tastes. He started off in the swing era, of course, and while the basis of all his music remains the cleancut, driving style that characterized the early 40s. he's taken on some of the 'progressivism' of the '50s and now even displays the mambo insome of the some arrangements.

It's this adaptability of his, along with his topflight showmanship, that can account for a packed house at Basi Street in midweek (a Tuesday) (14) and the probability of SRO for the two-week stand. For while, the Dixieland addicts were in evidence for the excellent jazz turned out by the Jack Teagarden Sextet, the pack was there for Hampton, and the yet gave them all he had, which is plenty. Hampton's no less a showman than he is a musician, and he's surrounded himself with the type of group that's of special appeal to the Broadway music set. He's got an outfit of 17 men (himself included) which breaks down to an instrumentation of five reeds, seven brass and five rhythm—lending itself to lots of sound and fury. He's got three yocalists (plus the Brazillan Stely along ingift, however) in Curly Hamner, who belts over the blues in solid fashion, and Bertice Reading, who's one of those femme powerhouses who can belt a song across and make the rafters tremble with it. And there's Hamp hi powerhouses who can belt a song across and make the rafters tremble with it. And there's Hamp hit self, who's all over the stage on a variety of instruments.

There's no denying the power of the Hamplon outfit as displayed in such of his standards as "Flying Home," "Standing Room Only" and "Airmail Express" (latter with Buddy Rich, pulled out of pening night' audience, on drums). And that feathery touch of Hampton's on the vibes is still in evidence with his sweet renditions too. It's quite a show the Hamp puts on, and its effect on the Teagarden aggregation is sort of overpowering.

That's rather unfortunate too, because the Teagarden group is one of the better straight jazz combos to hit the Main Stem in some time.

They dispuse cleancy jazz out of the better straight Jazz compose to hit the Main Stem in some time. They dispense cleancut, jazz out of the Dixteland book, and their renditions of such faves as "Tim Roof Blues." "Muskrat Ramble" and "High Society" are solid items from the solo and ensemble viewpoint. Teagarden's got an accomplished group in the veteran Ray Baduc (of the old Bob Crosby outfit) on drums, Kas Malone on bass, Bob McCracken on clarinet. Fred Greenleaf on trumpet, sister Norma Teagarden on plano and of course Teagarden on plano and of course Teagarden inself on trombone and the vocals. Combination of Teagarden and Hampton ought to make all the jazz sects happy.

Betty Reilly, blonde purveyor of south-of-the-border ditties; charms the house in the featured spot with a robust voice, engaging presence, and a zestful delivery. Accompanying herself on guitar, she yields a brace of lively Latin tunes with a proper chirrup and balances with pop ballads like "Hey There" and such novelties as "Beyat" and "Molasses." Latter gives leave to ludicrous impressions of Sarah Vaughn, Bette Davis, and Margaret Truman, and her brogue cssaying of a Yiddish "MacNamara's Band" is also good for laughs. Horace Heidt Revue with Johnny Standley, Allen Brennan Ralph. Sigwald, Dorech Dolney, Jimmy Sheldon, Lee Carter, Phyllis Inez, (35): $2 minimum.

Somehow Horace Heid has sind-denly converted an amateur show into a nitery revue. The format has hardly changed in the process even to the constant accent on "The American Way." Essentially the same unit, with probably more acts, has successfully toured auditoriums and football stadiums. As an outsized variety show it drew families mostly.

But a first class big name nitery is no place to display amateurs even when they are very good, at least not in a solid bunch without the relief of one sound professional. Of course, these successful amateurs are now pros, but only for the reason that there is money involved.

Their costuming is drab beside any other line in Nevada, except possibly for the bright lettering, "Horace Heidt," around the skirts. The acts, one by one, would wi any amateur show in their division. Allein Breneman, 12 years old plays drums well. He concludes his bit by stating that he's proud to be an American and this is the best nation in the world. This sort of commercialized patriotism, evident throughout, is so contrived it lacks taste. In one last speech for democracy before the curtai falls, "mother" is even worked into the script.

Johnny Standley, the most w.k. name on the bill because of his "It's the Book" disclick. is purveying a tired script. "The Book" has just about had it—just like any popular song which has been played to death. In person Standley has an odd hat on, and for visual effect, has a rostrum from which to prach, and a comic page to tear up during the revival. Motion Picture Assn. of America v show over ABC-TV. Sullivan, who about a year ago stopped using clips from forthcoming pix, explained that he had been forced to do so by his mail.

"They want either a 'live' show or one on film, but not a mixture of both," he said. "I found that, when I used a clip in conjunction with a 'live' personality, the audience would love it. If I'd just put on a capsule preview, the audience somehow felt they'd been gypped. So I stopped it."

Sullivan reported that "The Jack Warner Story" would be timed to the release of WB's "Battleery," just as "The Zanuck Story" coincided with "The Egyptian." He said that the studios fully realized the value of a "Toast" preview. "We did wonders for 'Seven Brides for Seven Brothers' and others," he commented. At the same time, he emphasized some of the union difficulties.

In seven years, "Toast" only missed one show. That was when it yielded to the Rodgers & Hammerstein all-net-work spectacular.

Refugee Directors

Meanwhile, Americans returning from Germany report increasing activity in the German studios. Agent Paul Kohner opined last week that, within a year, western-Germany would again be the production center of Europe, with talent from all corners of the earth coming in. That includes a number of the refugee directors who worked in Germany before Hitter and are now drifting back from Hollywood Fritz Lang is one, Erich Pommer and William Dieterle are others.

As their production level rises, the Germans are becoming increasingly eager to recapture the export markets which were once theirs, and particularly the U.S. market where, unlike the Italians, the British and the French, they haven't made their post-war mark

Neff Said

Part of the reason for this, ac-cording to competent observers, is the lack of commercial appeal in the German productions as well as the German productions as well as the lack of suitable subjects. Hilder garde Neff, star of many of the top German pix of recent vintage, opined in N. Y. last week (17) that the reason for the lack of artistic merit in many of the German films was due to two factors: (1). The lack of creative activity during the difficult years that followed the immediate postwar period, the time when the Italians, for instance, registered their greatest screen triumphs and made their mark in the U. S. (2). The decentralization of the German studies setup, with stages active in Munich, centralization of the German studio setup, with stages active in Munich, Berlin, Hamburg, Wiesbaden, etc. "It's like a lot of arms without a head," she said. Impression is growing in Amer-ican trade circles that the German

First move to reestablish the German film in the U. S. was made by Munio Podhorzer, vet German film importer, who established United German Film Enterprises. As a rep for a number of German production and distribution outfits, Podhorzer aims to make deals for German pix, and also proposes to German pix, and also proposes to act as a central information source the U. S. market.

U. S. Won't Be Easy

American observers feel that, for a number of reasons, the German film will have a difficult time establishing itself in this country. One is that the Teutonic approach to filmmaking lacks the pace to which American audiences are accustomed. Another, is the still simmering resentment vs. things German, varietualry among the crowd customed. Another is the still simmering resentment vs. things German, particularly among the crowd that rallies around the arties. Yet another reason cited is the fact that Germany, unlike the Italians and the British, lack "spearhead" pix such as "Open City," "Bicycle Thief," "Henry V," "Brief Encountes," etc.

There were a few such films made immediately after the war when the Germans briefly discovered their conscience. Among them were "Marriage in the Shadows," "Murders Among Us," etc.

After that, they turned to meaning-less musicals and comedies as well as the "Heimat" pix in which they rediscovered their own country.

In more recent days, German producers have again shown a willingness to face the realities of life, Americans on the scene report. Also, some U, S. Interests have gone in and made pix with an eye to the U. S. b.o., one example being the N. Peter Rathvon-Stuart Schulberg film, "No Way Back."

Already, a number of German producers are said to be interested in a plan to shoot double-versions, one in German and the other in English. Actors would only mouth the English lines, with the actual dialog to be dubbed in later.

Didn't 'Attack' Atkinson, Sez D.C. Post's Dick Coe In Under 150,000 Words

Editor, VARIETY:

Has not VARIETY heard tales of Washington's deep-freezes, Sen. McThing, summer heat, coffeedrinking civil servants, crooked politicians, commission-influence or the belief that while mink may be glamorous in Gotham, it's scandalous along the Potomac?

There are a summary delicities.

These gossip-mongers' delights and the fact that our Capital has a sleazy repute across the country and abroad (helped, to be sure, by that now-defunct theatre segregation, a correction sparked by Actors Equity) were what I meant by "our much maligned city" and which prompted what I'd hoped was but a lightly-raised eyebrow referred to in your issue of Sept. 15.

And so I took up Brooks Atkinson's pithy observation primarily because both he and the incomparable N. Y. Times, with their influential, worldwide circulation, were precisely the sources which could correct such widely-held misconceptions about an intelligent, hard-working community.

"Broadway's provincialism" is simply well-worked phrase of mine (I could give you about 150,4000 words on THAT subject) and regular readers couldn't have conceived it as referring to Brooks. Atkinson, whom they know to be one of my particular heroes. Fliched delicately within copyright law, his enlivening travels to distant theatres often are admiringly remarked on in The Washington Post pages.

Post pages.

In fact, this loose-limbed screed comes to you chiefly because of my vast admiration for the Times' asile-sitter. I'm loath to have VARIETY readers think, as you put it, that I "attacked" Atkinson. I have been "irritated"—often m—but in the sense of stimulated, alerted, not of doing battle with a particularly admired colleague. Peacefully, mayhap missionarily, Richard L. Coe, Richard L. IN ACAD. FOYER, PHILA.

Philadelphia, Sept. 21.

Hedgerow Theatre will play a winter season in the Foyer of the Academy of Music again this year, starting Oct. 30. Instead of rotating the plays in its reperiory, as last year, the Rose Valley group will present shows for several weeks' runs.

First offering will be Arthur Miller's "The Crucible," to run three weeks on a Wednesday through-Saturday schedule.

"Twelfth Night" is listed to follow. Several new plays will be preemed in the Foyer this year, whereas in 1953 the productions had all been done previously at Hedgerow's Rose Valley playhouse, at suburban Moylan, Pa. Regular Wednesday openings may be intended to draw first-string critics. Last winter, most of the Hedgerow offerings were caught by staff members.

With prospective bookings only moderately above the arid level of recent years, managements of road theatres are reluctant to refuse dates to any touring shows. But with a rash of low-budgeters going out on two-for-ones, it's feared that business may be soured for the regular-scale productions that are the backbone of legit.

It's been the same old story of cut-price gimmicks over the years. Nobody likes the bargain setup, but it hypoes the bo., at least temporarily, and few managements feel they are in position to turn down the revenue. Twofers are clearly a breach of faith with regular-price patrons, and they presumably do longrange harm by arousing audience disappointment and bitterness. Producers of regular tourers generally condemn the "unfair competition" of twofers, of course.

"Wonderful Town" has now caught on for what appears likely to be a profitable run in Chicago. 'South Pacific' Musician's 100G Injury Suit Hinges On Tricky Legal Point By STEWART BRONFELD

By STEWART BRONFELD

A tricky legal point involving employment of musicians for Broadway shows may decide whether the Shuberts will be slapped with a $100,000 personal injury suit. Question is being decided in proceedings before the N. Y. State Workmen's Compensation Bureau in New York.

Case involves a French horn player in "South Pacific" during its Broadway run. The musician, William Miller, last Nov. 23, was injured in a fall in the basement of the Shubert-operated Broadway Theatre, N. Y. Both the Shuberts and the show's producers, Rodgers & Hammerstein, claim to have been Miller's employer at the tio the mishap.

& Hammerstein, claim to have been Miller's employer at the tii of the mishap.

Under N. Y. State law, an employee is entitled to compensation in case of accidental injury. He may not sue the employer for damages. Thus, if the Shuberts establish that they were Miller's establish that they were Miller's employers, they cannot be slapped with a damage suit in the case, but will be liable merely for $32 weekly compensation.

Since Rodgers & Hammerstein were merely the producers of "South Pacific" and were not involved in the ownership of the theatre where Miller's accident occurred, they cannot be sued for damages regardless of whether the Workmen's Compensation Bureau rules they were the employers or not.

Inside Stuff—Legit

Click of several recent West End musicals does not represent a comeback for British tune shows, according to London author-play-wright-critic Wolf Mankowitz. British musicals do not, he asserts in an article in the Sept. 15 Daily Herald, compare with American tuners. "The excitement caused by the least movement on the part of that sick domestic animal, the British musical, is the saddest of all comments on its state of health," he writes. After noting a lack of vitality in such recent West End hits as "Salad Days," "The Boy Friend," "Wedding in Paris" and "Intimacy at 8:30." he adds, "The state of British revues and musicals is, in spite of the excitement, one of malnutrition to the point of death."

Mankowitz refers to the vigor of Broadway shows and concludes, in contrast, "British musicals, in order to cater to the greatest number; rely on an abundance of sicklysweet tunes, delightfully escapist atmospehics, nostalgic dreams about the Ruritanian past. No hint of coarseness, of vulgarity, of what really is, may sully the charming delirium which bemuses both Wigam and Wimpole Street. It is a case of either that old sickly-sweet formula or the show cheaply produced with a piano and a set of drums."

Brooks Atkinson, drama critic of the N. Y. Times, has a running gag, "Please bring back 'Threepenny Opera'," he's using in reviews of shows that have followed the Kurt Welll-Marc Blitzstein musical at the Theatre de Lys, Greenwich Village, N. Y. He included the plea first in his notice of "Homeward Look," the arrival of which forced the exit of "Opera" from the off-Broadway house last summer. He repeated it in his review of "Pony Cart." last week's opening there. Incidentally, the "Cart" management kicked back at the Times' aislesitter in a display ad the day after the notices appeared. After quoting favorable statements by other critics, the copy carried the statement, "Brooks Atkinson didn't like it. I. B. Joselow." Latter is the play's producer. is the play's producer.

In case its proves anything, there were an abnormal number of late-comers for the opening night last Wednesday (15) of "Dear Charles," at the Morosco, N. Y. It may or may not have had any relation to the fact that the curtain, advertised for at 8:15 and actually ringing up about 8:30, represented a compromise between the prevailing 8 o'clock start and the traditional but now generally passe 8:40 premiere time. Other possible factors were the unusual horde of rubberneckers outside the theatre, plus the television coverage and action of police in blockading traffic from 45th St., plus the chance that for the season's initial opening many firstnighters may have been rusty on the starting schedule. In any case, there was no time problem for the critics, as the play itself is quite short and the final curtain rang down shortly before 10:30.

Earl Selby, crusading columnist of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, took a slap at "South Pacific" last week. Apparently steamed because Rodgers-Hammerstein hit is just getting around to playing Philly, opening next Monday (27), he wrote in part, "The producers waited a mere five years—and showed it to just about every tank town before they deigned to let us have a look. What's more the Theatre Guild promised it for several seasons, then never delivered. And when it arrives this year it won't be a Theatre Guild presentation. For dough this is one case where being late isn't better than never (especially when you consider the cast we get)."

Investors in "Pajama Game" have been offered a chance to buy two seats apiece to the opening night, Oct. 11, of "On Your Toes," at the 46th Street, N.Y. Rodgers-Hart musical revival is being produced by George Abbott (with composer Richard Rodgers a silent partner), who staged and is co-author of the book of "Pajama Game." As another tie between the two musicals, Robert Griffith, co-producer of "Pajama," will be stage manager of "Toes," He's been Abbott's stage manager for years, serving in that capacity for his own "Pajama" production until "Toes" was well enough along for him to move over to the new assignment.

Mary Chase, whose "Lolita" was tried out recently at the Barter Theatre, Abingdon, Va., is following her usual practice of withdrawing the play for extensive revision. She took the script back to her native Denver and expects to spend months of rewriting before letting her agents, Brandt & Brandt, submit it to producers. Among the Broadway managements interested in "Lolita" are Elaine Petry, whose sister Margaret, a Denver resident, played the lead in the Barter tryout; Robert Whitehead on behalf of Producers Theatre, and the firm of Robert Breen and Blevins Davis.

Wording of the Pulitzer Drama Award has been changed to specify that the winning work shall be "preferably original in its source." Text previously stated prize was to be given to an "original American play." Schang Pulls Surprise, Sets Solid 179-Date, 550G Tour for Ballet Russe

By ARTHUR BRONSON
Ballet biz is always offering surprises. Latest is the forthcoming tour of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, directed by Sergei J. Denham, which opens Oct. 1 in Baltinore and runs for 179 dates in 105 cities until it winds up in Montreal April 16 next year.

Troupe, which laid off two years ago after an 18-year haphazard existence, was reactivated this season by Frederick C. Schang, prez of Columbia Artists Mgt. and head of its Coppleus, Schang & Brown division, which booked the tour.

Surprising fact is that the forth-coming tour which was lined up last spring and summer, was booked solid, even though the troupe of the couple last spring and summer, was booked solid, even though the troupe hadn't been around for a couple of seasons. Also there is plenty of competition this season (London Festival Ballet, Ballet Theatre, etc.), its leading ballerina (Maria Tallchief) hadn't been set or announced yet, and its repertory was not complete. Until July, management had no definite new works to offer as selling points.

Schang, who believes that the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo is a great show name and should be preserved, claims the tour was sold out simply on basis of the Ballet. N. Y. BALLET'S 'IVESIANA' NO B.O. 'IVES-CAPADES'

For the second of its two premieres this season, the N. Y. City Ballet presented George Balanchine's "Ivesiana" at City Center, N. Y., last Tuesday night (14). Set to the music of the late Charles Ives, controversial U.S. modernist, the new ballet proves to be as modern and department of the control of th the new ballet proves to be as mod-ern—and controversial. Choreog-rapher Balanchine has taken a half-dozen assorted pieces by Ives and has fashioned a set of dance-creations not too closely connected to each other. Work is generally harsh, disjointed and uneven, but at times oddly appealing despite its stark severity.

Best is the third section, "The Unanswered Question," dance pantomine suggesting a man's search for an unattainable woman. Opener, "Central Park in the Dark," with its suggestion of two innocents, seeking each other out in a maze of delinquents or degenerates, is also effective, as is the finale, "In The Night," which the entire company is on its knees groping through a wilderness.

Work, tabbed the "Ives-Capades of 1954" by one intermission wag, isn't strong enough to stay in the NYCB repertory, but will find admirers among lovers of dissonant dance and music.

Say Vamoose of Bess From 'Porgy' Last Week Reflected Cast Gripes

Montreal, Sept. 21.

Mysterious disappearance of Elizabeth Foster following the matine performance Sept. 11 of "Porgy and Bess" at the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto, and her subsequent appearance on the Coast apparently reflects dissatisfaction among members of the cast. Company planed Sunday (19) to Europe after a week's stand at Her Majesty's Theatre here.

During the session in Toronto, where "Porgy" played two weeks, co-producer Robert Breen personally supervised meetings with the cast on all problems and made final arrangements for the current European tour. At one point during the week, Elizabeth Foster, one of "Bess," said she was resigning and returning to the Coast.

Later in the week all differences with the actress-singer were believed to have been settled. However, she presumably still had grievances, for she disappeared without explanation, leaving all her clothes and personal effects in her theatre dressing room. She turned up in Kansas City, according to news reports from there, en route to California.

The obvious assumption about "Fanny" in its present state is that S. N. Behrman and Joshua Logan are sufficiently seasoned in the art of putting a show together on the road to attack this one with pruning shears and grafting gum and and pull it through. But a very pertinent question at the moment is what kind of a fruit will they com up with in the end?

At this stage the musical often

com up with in the end?

At this stage the musical often gets lost in an erratic course touching now on the straight play with music, and again on the operetta with occasional recitative. It's a strange mingling of styles, as if the authors were uncertain whether to be light or heavy, straight forward or "artistic."

The result at the opener, which, began at 8 o'clock and ended at 11:15, was prolonged, tiresome and yet filled with many moments of charm and promise. But the staggering work still to be done seems bewildering.

Edna Preston deserves special mention for her picture of Fanny's sharp-tongued mother, and there is an excellent hit by Gerald Price as an eccentric. No one else really counts, for 90% of the dialogue—and not often very amusing dialogue—is given to the above.

Dancing is not especially emphasized, though there is a marvelous nautch dance by Nejla Ates, nor is there much excuse for the show boys and girls. The production, however, is happy and colorful, with atmospheric sets and costumes of the Marseille waterfront.

All in all, it's not easy to see what might come of this. But there is no doubt that there is an unusual quality well worth making every effort to bring out. Elie.

Perhaps Kurnitz was once taken by an art dealer and this is his vengeance. In any case, although that's not the main theme of the play, he does a pretty thorough job of it.

Author has a fresh approach to laugh lines and situations in this three-acter. His humor is incisive, not merely the use of a gag for its own sake. He has observed the passing scene keenly and put down his observations entertainingly.

Though "Figure" is not exactly in the belly-laugh category, therefore, it is consistently amusing. Also, it carries an appealing romantic thread woven into the overall pattern.

After the author's expose of forgery in paintings, milking the nouveau riche, "suggestive" blackmail and similar practices, the impression is that the reason the Venus de Milo has no arms is because she once shook hands with an ridealer.

"Figure" about an eccentric millionaire who hopes to add a long-lost Renoir to his art collection. He is approached with the painting by a young, ethical art dealer who has severed connections with a crooked dealer. combination of complications and laughs ensues.

Topflight thesping gives "Figure" a good plausibility break. Percy Waram, as the eccentric, is crustier than last week's bread. Mike Wallace hits the gong as the youth, Georgiann Johnson, as the daugher, is an impressive blend of attractiveness and sincerity.

Controller Martin Gabal, doub.

Georgiann Johnson, as the daughter, is an impressive blend of attractiveness and sincerity.

Co-producer Martin Gabel, doubling as actor, is suavity itself as the manipulating art dealer, and Berry Kroeger scores as an art forger who mixes rum with his oils. David Opatoshu does a classic bit as a polished blackmailer. Ralph Bunker has good moments as a tester of original masterpieces. Nehemiah Persoff and Alfred Hesse make excellent foils for devastating caricatures of art critics and experts. Foster Davis does the traditional butler well.

With a talented cast, and interesting things for them to say and do, Abe Burrows is on the way to blending these ingredients into diverting stage fare. Split-level interior setting by Frederick Fox is handsomely grade-A.

If Hollywood is interested in doing anything less than a supersuper, this could make a chucklesome film.

sary overall atmosphere which should combine mounting tension and symphonic contrasts of sound and mood. Absence of scenery makes it more difficult to convey the feeling of a Dublin tenement, an important factor in the story.

In portraying the poor Dublin family who fall heir to a legacy, go on a spending spree and then learn the money is not forthcoming. Nora O'Mahoney is standout in the role of the strong-minded mother. Brian Vincent is excellent as the highstrung patriot son. Aileen Harte is effective if somewhat unvaried as the daughter. John Kelly is unconvincing as the father of the family. His stagey conception of the "paycock" is calculated and not only is his accent unintelligible, but for the sake of laughs he adds lines that are not in Mr. O'Casey's script, and omits others that are.

Author Warren Chetham-Strode has taken an interesting situation for his theme but fails to bring it to life, and it emerges as an overwordy play on the subject of illegitimacy and adoption. A doubtful prospect and not in the running for Broadway. The play fails for a variety of reasons. Firstly and primarily it suffers from a weakness in its main characterization, secondly, the writing is rarely inspired and reduces the subject to commonplace melodrama, and finally, Adrianne Allendrama, and finally, Adrianne Allendrama, and finally, Adrianne Allendrama, and finally, and the starting role.

Miss Allen plays the part of an advertising exec who deliberately decides to have an illegitimate child after her fiance is killed and she believes she can never fall inlove agai. After the child is born, she adopts it legally, but never discloses the real facts, although the daughter is always pressing for information. Finally the truth leaks out accidentally and there is an hysterical scene between the mother and the girl.

The author's intention of making the play a justification for a woman's natural desire for motherhood rarely succeeds, although he creates a measure of sympathy for his main character. The parallel issue which debates whether the child would prefer to know it's illegitimate as long as it is ware of its origin, rarely reaches a note of conviction.

Apart from Miss Allen, who has some fine performances to her credit, there is a nice portrait by Barbara Everest as an aged aunt, and an adequate portrayal by Constance Wake as the illegitimate off-spring. By far the best individual performance, however, is contributed by Peter Myers, a West End mewcomer whose interpretation of an adolescent who fancies himself as a man-about-town is the high-spot of the production.

Norman Marshall directed the play in stereotype fashion. The work of the production was deservefull marks.

Despite the heat and the strangeness of arena-style performance, Sherman liked the Philly engagement better than any other of the tour.

In contrast to the friendly audiences at well-run spots, conditions at a few of the barns were depressing. Sherman reports. Although he prefers not to identify the particular theatres, he notes that in one case the management's relations with the public had apparently been growing worse for "Little Hut." It's hardly a coincidence, he believes, that the management of "Little Hut." At another key strawhat, the management had apparently never taken the trouble to establish friendly relations with the local public. There was no evidence of local support, interest in or even awareness of "Little Hut" in particular or the theatre in general. Audiences all seemed to be transients who stopped off more or less haphazardly en route along the main highway passing the playhouse. The audience reaction was primarily disapproval and even shock, and practically no one came backstage after the performance.

Distractions

At one mountain resort bordering the borscht belt the play got a rather special response, particularly on weeknights, when the audience was composed almost exclusively of women, presumably marking time until their husbands arrived for the weekend. The Anna Parama Festival where another key strawhat, the

The "Hut" tour was Sherman's first full-summer barn stint in a number of years. He found conditions greatly changed from what he'd remembered. Strawhat salarenemoered. Strawhat salaries are nearly always skimpy for all except a few top names on fat guarantees or percentage, but Sherman generally enjoyed the trek. At least it was "interesting" and he was working.

In explanation of their refusal to agree to the withholding of 40 pairs of choice locations, officials of charity groups say that the real profit from benefit shows comes from the ultra-high premium charged for these seats. They regard the regular house-seat holdout as unfair, but concede that it's an accepted practice. However, they say they balked at having to give up 80 pairs of the best locations.

All The Risks

All The Risks

One charity official, a society page figure, was emphatic on the subject. "We're treated like lepers," she asserted. "We contract for a show many months in advance, taking a big gamble. Suppose we pay $10,000 for a house, for instance. We have to spend a considerable amount in preliminary expense, such as promotion letters, clerical work, postage, phone calls and the like.
"All that may be lost and we phone calls and the like.

"All that may be lost and we may incur great resentment among our donors and supporters if the show is abandoned, or closes on the road. Or there may be complications, with cancellations and a financial loss if the show's opening is postponed. There's also the risk that we may not be able to dispose of all the tickets we've taken.

"As in the case of Francian."

of all the tickets we've taken.

"As in the case of 'Fanny,' we get no concession from the management, but have to pay a premium to the party agent, because she has not been allowed a commission. But we do it, taking a long chance that the show will be good and that our patrons won't be resentful at having had to pay charity prices. charity prices.

"So what happens? Why, as soon as the producers think they have a hit they become very superior toward the business we've given them. Then they arbitrarily hold out more house seats, sometimes taking the choice seats on which we must depend for our biggrapt doublings. gest donations.

Another thing. They're all glad "Another thing. They're all glad to take the money we put up for the seats, but I've never heard of a producer offering a refund or concession if the show turns out to be a flop. We're supposed to be grateful for getting the show. But if you'd ever had to take the complaints from a charity donor who's paid $50 or $100 for seats to a flop show, you'd realize our position is anything but enviable.

Poor Taste?

Poor Taste?

Poor Taste?

"I also happen to think it's in very poor taste for theatrical people, including actors as well as producers and authors, to accept our business so quickly and then sound off in interviews and articles about how cold and insensitive and stupid benefit audiences are.

"If they don't like benefit audiences they don't have to sell benefits. But if they do sell benefits and take the money they might have the grace not to give out nasty interviews about us."

nasty interviews about us."

In the case of "Fanny," the party sales reportedly represent about $400,000 gross. In contrast to the 40 pairs of house seats withheld for this S. N. Behrman-Logan-Harold Rome musical, only 12 pairs each are being held out for "Quadrille" the Noel Coward comedy to costar the Lunts, Edna Best and Brian Aherne, and "House of Flowers," the Truman Capote-Harold Arlen musical to star Pearl Balley.

"Fanny" is due to open Nov. 4 at the Majestic, N. Y., but no parties were sold through November, so tickets could be available to fill mail orders from the Logan-Leland Hayward priority list, plus an allotment to Cue mag for a ticket-selling gimmick.

Pear Charles

Richard Aldrich & Richard Myers production in association with Julius Fleisch ann. of comedy in three acts, by Marc-Gilbert Suuvaion and Frederick Survaion S

Since the play itself is preposterous, the primary question about "Dear Charles" is Tallulah Bank-head—her performance and her personal draw. Both one about as might have been predicted.

The sur's playing is as expected—vital, flamboyant and undeniably activations. As for her hovelffor

-vitat Hamboyant and undeniably entertrining. As for her boxoff.co pull, indications are that it's at least as potent as ever. In short, "Dear Charles" seems likely to have at least a moderate run. Apparently Miss. Bankhead has been curbing her highly publicized self-indulgences, for she looks as it she'd been doing some training. If not exactly ingenue-looking (she was never an ingenue, of course, even when she was the age for it). She has slimmed down a bit and gives the old impression of animal grace, dynamic drive and the familiar slyle, raucous humor, magnetism and authority. She makes the transparent tinsel of "Dear Charles" diverting theatre.

milliar style, raucous humor, magnetism and authority. She makes the transparent tinsel of "Dear Charles" diverting theatre.

The play as a succession of sellut strawhat audiences learned over the summer, is an antiquated and foolish antic about a cheerful lady novelist-lecturer who has had three children by as many men, without ever getting around to legal sanction. She makes up her mind to take a husband for the children's sake and invites the easorted parents for a visit so she can choose one. She finally decides to remain single, however, and continue the fiction that she is the widow of dear Charles, whose portrait, casually picked up in a shop years before, hangs in the place of honor on the livingroom wall.

Edmund Baylies' staging (or whatever the star has permitted in that regard) properly arranges to have Miss Bankhead the center of interest and keeps the other players at least easily audiole if not invariably understandable. Donald Oenslager has designed a handsome livingroom setting and Gene Coffin provided Miss Bankhead's striking gowns.

There's a fairly involved history to 'Dear Charles.' The play was originally written by Frederick Jackson, from an idea by Roland Bottomley, and was a quick flop in 1949 under the title "Sightly Scandalous," with Janet Beecher as femme lead.

The script was then adapted into French by Marc-Gilbert Sauvajon and, as "Les Enfants d'Edouard," was a success i Paris It was next adapted back into English by British playwright Alan Melville and was a hit in London under its present title, with French-born Yvonne Arnaud as star.

Finally, Aldrich and Myers acquired th American rights (in partnership with John Wildberg, whose name has unexplainedly disappeared from the billing) and tried unsuccessfully to persuade her with Lili Darvas. The show flopped on a tryout tour last winter, but came to life when Miss Bankhead took it on the suntan circuit this summer. It should be good for a regular road tour following the present Broadway run.

Trebuhs as his employer.

Morris Jacobs, R & H general manager, testified, however, that the paychecks, although marked Broadway Theatre, actually represented money from the house's share of the boxoffice receipts and were thus part of the gross revenue of the show and, therefore, of producers R & H. He said that Sol Gusikoff, an R&H man, had hired the musician and David Gusikoff, appointed by R & H as producers R & H. He said that Sol Gusikoff, an R&H man, had hired the musician and David Gusikoff, appointed by R & H as house leader of the orchestra, could fire him.

The manager asserted that R & H never consult the Shuberts about who is going into a theatre orchestra pit and that the Shuberts don't know the names of orchestra members until just before opening night. He explained that the practice of the pit band being paid by the theatre management was "just for clean bookkeeping."

During the proceedings, R & H, through their attorneys, took a firm stand that Miller was their employee, offering in evidence a contract between them and Local 802 showing that they assumed the relationship of employer to 22 orchestra men. Miller's name was on the list. The Shuberts, R & H attorneys claimed, wouldn't agree to demands by the union, so the producers took over the role of employer.

A few road managements won't accept twofer shows, or will book only a limited number, which they spot carefully in an effort to avoid hireaking down the house price policy in the eyes of the local legit public. But many others welcome practically any touring show, twofer or not, and only hope to fill out the remaining weeks with concert dates, vaude units, boxing and wrestling matches and local the attricals. atricals.

Competition

Twofers are less of a problem in towns having more than one legit towns having more than one legit house. In such circumstances, it's relatively simple to book the cut-pricers into one theatre and there-by retain the standard-scale pat-tern at the other.

But few towns nowadays can comfortably support one legitery, let alone two or more. So in some instances where the public is limited, the presence of two houses merely intensifies competition to the point where both managements scramble for bookings, including twofers.

Local managements with experience handling bargain-scale shows generally try to book them away from standard tourers. This may not necessarily involve open weeks between the different-price operations, but sometimes spotting a non-legit offering between. Some managements will book only two cut-price shows a season, one in the early fall and the other in the late spring. spring,
Dirty Show Angle

Dirty Show Angle
A recent development in the twofer situation is the production of frankly dirty, or at least broadly suggestive, shows to draw the presumably less discriminating public.
This is not new, of course. On the contrary, it's ageless, but it appears to be having a resurgence.

New or old, however, it's frowned upon by thoughtful out-of-town theatremen, who have learned through long experience that the quick buck it involves is apt to be paid for over and over in a disgusted general public. Comedies are trumps on the road, but smut is a biz killer. As one vet theaterman in a key city remarks, "We want laughs, not filth."

Among the principal out-of-trum.

Among the principal out-of-town theatres that refuse or limit the number of twofer bookings are the National, Washington; Ford's, Baltimore; Shubert, New Haven; American, St. Louis; Hanna, Cleveland; Royal Alexandra, Toronto, and Hartman, Columbus.

Some of the key spots that welcome, or at least accept, them are the Nixon, Pittsburgh; Shubert, Washington; Cass and Shubert, Detroit; Cox and Taft, Cincinnati, and various houses in such multitheatre towns as Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago.

Sincerity is an estimable quality Sincerty is an estimable quality, but not necessarily adequate for the theatre. So while "The Pony Cart" can be respected for its intention, it's pretty feeble as theatre, and has little future prospects beyond this off-Broadway production.

Drama by novelist-mag writer Roger Garis is a problem play that never really gets to the heart of the matter at stake. It's about a highschool principal and his wife, new to the small town, who make an issue of the case when a socially respectable old man molests their small daughter. The author is apparently trying to dramatize the theme of social responsibility as above family and local pride.

But the play seems arbitrarile.

But the play seems arbitrarily contrived, and the characters give the impression of being manipulated instead of having individualties, ideas and wills of their own.
The yarn is loose, hackneyed and lacking in compulsion. Moreover, the dialog is meandering and without distinction.

out distinction.

The weaknesses are aggravated by David Pressman's faltering direction. So the playing has no sustained tempo or drive, and the actors are frequently left groping around in the pauses between lines, as though waiting for someone to drop a cue. The fact that some of them are less than letter perfect doesn't help.

As the somewhat hysterical mother, who apparently represents the author's idea of local conscience, Louisa Horton gives a remarkable performance, considering the play's murky reasoning the slack staging and the fact that the character never really clarifies her ideas. Her playing is varied, vibrant, honest and quite touching.

Vibrant, honest and quite touching.

Lamont Johnson is moderately effective in the inarticulate role (for a supposedly brilliant pedago and former youthful prodigy, meless) of the father. Dorothy Patten handles the stereotype part of the sardonic aunt skillfully, and Carl Bensen has admirable arrogance and style as the local panjandrum whose excessive filial devotion costs a little girl's lifte.

In the secondary parts, Carl White is properly direct as a well-meaning schoolboard member, Frances Ingalls is convincing as his sympathetic wife, Alice Lee Edwards is expressive as the big-shot's cowed wife, Benedict MacQuarrie is acceptable as the police their who knows where the local bodies are buried and when not look osomething about it, and Rhoda Lewis is agreeably free of precocousness as the moppet in the middle of it all.

Fest Booms Book Sales
Influx of world tourists and travellers into Edinburgh for the annual Festival has upped sales of books. Retailers report there was a greater demand for books on the arts generally, and particular requests increased for copies of works by Shakespeare and Moliere. Literature about Scotland, the Scots and Highland scenery was also in top demand, and Robert Louis Stevenson's book, "Picturesque Notes," was sold out.

Composition o Actually this is a revealing and amazing anthology of American ideas keyed to Yank resourcefulness and runs the gamut from juvenile and adult games to patents, prizes, inventions, literary creations—the whole pamorama of American ingénuity. It's almost as fun reading, because it catalogs how some bright idea can—and has been made to—pay off in jackpot proportions.

This is somewhat of a departure from a veteran Lati American correspondent like Josephs, but his more recent merchandising knowhow in public relations comes through in this practical guide.

Other bright showbiz-literati items of the fall season include. Charles Grayson's "Venus Rising," a Hollywood novel (Holt; $3.50); Dale Kramer's insight on "The Heart of O. Henry" (Rinehart; $3.50); John O'Hara's collection of some of his writings on the Trenton (N.J.) Brooks is an authoritative namedropper and his appraisal of stews that pass in the night is frequently fraught with a sagacity which only authority and veteranship can inspire.

The big department store switched its advertising to local radio stations, weekly newspapers, a weekly shopping guide which lasted about a year as its other backers dropped out, and a circular which was mailed to 55,000 homes in Atlantic and Cape May counties. During that time advertising men were watching to see if a big department store could get along without advertising in the only daily in the community. In the insterval also Adams merged the Evening Union with the Press, which now publishes only in the morning for seven days a week with a circulation of 34,000 daily and 25,000 Sunday.

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Desert Springs, Cal.
Some years ago I wrote a column about a real rough hero of the West of the "70s. The other day one of the more scholarly of the Scully Circus brought me a novel which was written a year after I dashed off that column. It had become a bestseller and quite a picture. "The first 200 pages of his "novel," remarked my research scholar, "look like direct steal from that old westerner's lifestory. Almost incident for incident. Golly is that creative fiction of today?"

I had to calm her by pointing out that the public domain is still pretty big.

"Why didn't he point it out himself?" I asked.
"I'll bite, why?" she said. "Why didn't he even point out that you had drawn his attention to the goldmine?"
"He's a novelist," I explained, "not a historian. He doesn't deal footnotes."

As further proof that we mean what we say around here read will find below more "plots" which can be had for the lifting acknowledgment necessary.

HOSSIER SUILL TELL

Hired to assassinate Sultan Alley Cone by Arabian Knights who believe the Sultan favors Anglo-American oil interests, Three Fingered Hoosier, a deserter from the American Army, bumps off the Sultan and then makes off. with the royal heir. He substitutes his own illegitimate offfspring, the son of Hoosier and a dancer. She had been heaved out of the harem because she insisted on dancing with a bar midriff instead of seven petiticoats.

The royal moppet is raised by this seedy pair in the Casbah. As proof of the triumph of heredity over environment, the kid turns out to be the most bungling pickpocket in the Casbah.

Meanwhile Hoosier's tyke develops into the lightest-fingered thing around the late Sultan's harem. He's pretty fresh with the girls too. The elders assigned to rule until he becomes of age find that by the time they are ready to hand over the protectorate to the kid, there is nothing left to give him. He has it all. It makes them look pretty silly.

Then one day Hoosier, trying to rescue his bungling 'son' from arrest, is clinked himself. They both are brought before the new Sultan. He is playing a crooked game of five-handed poker with himself, warming up for a game with visiting oil tycoons.

Hoosier looks at the young Sultan's hands, amazed at his dexterity as a card sharp. Then he sees the ruler has only three fingers on his right hand.

"Come here, you dog. Can you play five-handed poker and handle three hands yourself? If you can and beat me, I will set you free." Hoosier tries but is really no match for the marked cards of the young Sultan.

"What about this kid of yours, Hoosier, is he any better?"

"He couldn't palm a card at a convention of blind men, Your Exalted Highness. But you are my son. You are a chip off the old block."

"If I free you will you play in a five-handed game with three visiting oil tycons and promise to do your best to win by fair means or foul?"

He then looks at the sad sack who is known in the Casbah as the "Prince Who Flopped As A Thief."
"Do you really believe you are of royal blood?" he asks the kid. Hoosier cuts in again. "I assure you he is, Your Exalted Highness. He is a bleeder."

"I'm not asking you, Hoosier. What about it, boy?"
The kid modestly shrugs his shoulders.

Two Spoofs on Luce

Two Syoots of Luce

Among the revues listed, at least hopefully, for production this season are "That's Life." "It's About. Time," "Between Friends," "Three for Tonight," "Kaleidoscope," "Crackerjack," a new edition of George White's "Scandels" and anew Shubert edition of "Eigefeld Follies." Other sketch show, headed for off-Broadway, are "Nice to Visit," "I Feel Wonderful" and "Bright and Early." Odd angle on the new slate is that two prospective show, "That's Life" and "It's About Time," re as indicated by the titles, spoofs of Luce publications, Also coincidental is that new editions of two noted revue seri, "Follies" and "Scandals," are both on the announced list. However, a new "Follies" has been on the Shubert slate for several seasons without actually getting in front of footlight co. it refers as a guess. without actually getting in front of footlights, so it rates as a questionable bet.

Some of the few payoff revues

Some of the few payoft revues in the last decade have be "Call Me Mister," "Lend An Ear," "An Ev ing with Beatrice Lillie" and "New Faces," Failures have included, "Inside U.S.A.," "Make Mine Manhattan," 'Along Fifth Avenue," "Seven Lively Arts," "John Murray Anderson's Almanac," "Hold it," "All For Love," "Tw on the Aisle," "Tickets Please," "Small Wonder," "Two's Company," "Anna Russell's Little Show." This last was an SRO week, with nightly standees, an astonishing record for this one-manner a year after its bow.
Original sock notices hav helped Borge, of course, yet management reports a steady resistance, in early months at least, to the show on the grounds of its novelty and "non-legit" character. There was no advance sale or theatre party setup. In fact, nobody (including Borge's management) thought the venture could go beyond four weeks on Broadway, and thought the venture could go beyond four weeks on Broadway, and management didn't even bother to advertise a limited engagement. Pacific area during world war hand now destined for export to Japan.

Move was initiated by the U. S. State Dept. which wants the industry to screen out the kind of war pix that might arouse anti-American sentiment in Japan. Industry execs, declaring that they've always practiced a certain amount of self-control in this matter, feel that the decision of whether or not a film should be sent to Japan, shouldn't come from reps of rival U. S. companies.

Several Hollywood films with Japanese war themes have been shown in Japan, inevitably with considerable b.o. success. Warner Bros." "Task Force," which aroused a good deal of controversy among American company reps in Tokyo, was one; Republic's "Sands of Iwo Jima" another.

Feeling is that the decision on whether to send a war film to Japan should be based largely on the attitude taken by the picture itself. It's pointed out that some Hollywood films made during the war certainly could harm U. S. current political interests in the (Continued on page 61)

'World Citizen' Davis Yens Show Biz Again Now That He's Married

Now That He's Married
Garry Davis, now more or less world-famed as World Citizen No.
1, has renounced the platform of iversality and "one worldism" as "impractical," and plans to return to show business. "There's nothing wrong with the ideal, but I'm finished with it, if only because it's just not workable or realistic in this world of ours.
"Not only do I want to regain my native-born American citizenship," he continues, "but I want to regain my position in the theatre as an actor. I was doing pretty well for a while, both in the original combany of 'Stalag 17,' and later succeeding to Harvey Lembeck's fuller role in the London company and in my strawhat tour two seasons ago."

The son of orchestra impresario Meyer Davis makes no bones about the fact his marriage, Sept. 18, in Hacketistown, N. J., to Gloria

Davis is getting himself an agent and going back into show biz.

Hollywood, Sept. 28.

Betty Hutton is leaving show biz on completion of her month's stand at the Desert Inn, Las Vegas, starting Oct. 12. She's been thinking about it for a year. Hard work connected with the "Satins and Spurs" tv show convinced her.

Now 33, she says, "Tve' been working since I was three years old. I've learned the goal I originally sought when I began my career is not what I thought it was." Miss Hutton says that two, on which she debuted in "Spurs," is a fine medium "if you like to work that hard. It's great for some one with more energy—it's a medium for younger people."

Series Overflow Boon To N.Y. Ops

The influx of out-of-towners for the World Series between the N. Y. Giants and the Cleveland Indians starting today (Wed.) at the Polo Grounds, N. The visitors started coming in over the weekend, and on the following day the SRO sign was out.

Niteries were the immediate beneficiaries of the added population. The cafes started at near-capacity over Sunday and on Monday the added business from out-

J. Willis Sayre, drama editor of the a.m. Post-Intelligencer, was honored last Thursday (23) by ex-hibitors, film production firms and hibitors, film production firms and fellow newspapermen at a dinner at the Press Club. Sayre is said to be the oldest drama editor, in point of years of service, in the nation. He first joined the P. I. in mid-1901, and has been there ever since, with time out to be concert manager of the Seattle Symphony. He was also managing editor of the Seattle Times for a brief period. In 1904 he went around the world in 54 days, nine hours and 42 minutes, a mark still recorded in history.

Back in 1932, when the late John P. O'Brien was elected mayor of New York under the Tammany banner, a reporter asked him whom he had in mind for appointment to a certain post. "I don't know," O'Brien was quoted as having replied, "they haven't told me."

O'Brien was quoted as having replied, "they haven't told me."
Not too distant a coustn to that approach is the television program "than can be talked into a hit" (or a flop) in what amounts to a telephonic coast-to-coast and personal gab-to-gab hookup that gives every sign of becoming a national lobby. It isn't "Don't write—telegraph" any more but "Don't write—phone" or grab him by the lapels, be he critie, video VIP, general tradester or just plain joeblow viewer, and say quickly, "Waart' it a sensational show" or contrariwise, "Wotta stinker!" Don't give the guy a chance to express himself, but if you do, make sure you've impinged your own opinion on him first and allow him to confirm it by suggesting not too subtly that a contrary view would show you up as a dumkopf, fit only to cover Channel 1.

The variegated conditions under which tv shows are appraised or professionally evaluated are, of course, strictly duck soup for the fast talking gent with a view of his own — partisan or non; they're (Continued on page 40)

Colorado Springs Chief of Police Irving B. Bruce, the next president of the Association, said most pix and private eye video stories hurt average police departments and hold policemen up to ridicule.
"Dragnet" was an exception, Bruce said, and he gave high praise to Jack Webb.

Louisville, Sept. 28.

Policy of airing "Game of the Day" from Mutual by WGRC throughout the season, sponsored by the Long Run Assn. of Baptists, has prompted Charles L. Harris, vp. and general manager of the station, to drop all beer advertising. Harris said, "We have been thinking of this move for some time. We carry quite a religious broadcast schedule on our station and it was just not consistent to carry beer or wine advertising."

When the Baptists expressed a desire to sponsor the baseball air ings, station decided to drop alcoholic advertising altogether. Station notified the net sometime ago of the new policy. Last program with beer sponsorship, a five-minute news show, was aired Aug. 20. According to Hewett Slack, who (Continued on page 71)

Many nightclub operators are considering the one-show-a-night policy this year, with two or three for weekends and rush periods only. Step is likely to be taken at Copa City, Miami Beach, and will be in effect at Alan Gale's, New York, with the idea likely to spread to other spots.

Reason for the reduction in the number of showings lies in the fact that it will enable the operators to get name performers, and will permit customers at the dinner shows to escape the heavy 20% cabaret tax. All those contemplating the step are blueprinting the sole show of the evening at midnight. Reason for the midnight slotting is that it will enable the owners to get a heavier profit per skull, inasmuch as the late shows are generally for the liquor trade, as against the early programs where the comparatively unprofitable dinner trade predominates.

Fading 52d St. Joints Just Wait It Out For Last-Buck Suckers

Last-Buck Suckers

In crooked carnival circles the "privilege car" and its "blowfiv" aura are wk. larcenous offshoots of a shoddier form of show business. Something approaching it is in the general atmosphere of West 52d St., N. Y., especially now, as the realty is being razed for improvement. With its stripperies having long since displaced the Swing Street motif of the block between 5th and 6th Aves., this is literally the blowoff for the hole in the wall, comeon joints.

Garishly lit up at night, the few remaining spots with their puly-lem-in sidewalk hawkers heralding "show going on immediately" are strictly waiting it out for the last-buck opportunities.

Some of the farseeing ops, with a liquor license to protect, have already begun spreading out into the contiguous 40s and 50s, with hybrid policies of "exotic" peelers, or just a phoney front with "coming" attractions to lure the drop-in casuals.

a circus? There are contrasting answers.

Ringling Bros. Barnum & Bailey found. Cecil DeMille's "Greatest Show on Earth" a definite benefit when pic first came out a few years back. More recently, reissue of film has also helped.

But Clyde Beatty Circus, spotlighted in "Ring of Fear" this summer, hasn't hit a jackpot from the film. Circus played to skimpy audiences throughout Nebraska last week and, outside of a Denver date, hasn't had much to cheer about recently. Beatty show was in Canada when film was released, though, and is trailing "Ring of Fear" release dates by as much as three months at most spots he hits. Of course, too, there was quite a bit of difference in the "Greatest Show" and "Ring of Fear"—and the boo results of the two films.

Martha Sues for 400G When Conked on Head With Whiskey Bottle

Miami, Sept. 28.

Damage suit in the amount of $400,000 was filed here last week by Martha Raye against a Coral Gables contractor who, she alleges, inflicted permanent injuries when he smashed a whisky bottle over her head in a bloody climax to a brawl which occurred in Bimini, fishing resort off southeast Florida, on Aug. 22. The comedienne was celebrating her birthday with a party of friends the night of the incident.

The suit was filed in Country of the contract of the country of the country of the contract of the country celebrating her birthday with a party of friends the night of the incident.

The suit was filed in Circuit Court under her married name of Martha Begley. She claims that Harry Barton beat her on the head with his fists, then "broke the bottle over her head," since causing "blurring vision, fainting spells and insomnia." She further alleges that Barton used "vite and profane language" as well as maliciously assaulting her.

Incident leading to the fracas is a matter of which witness one speaks to. One group has it that it all resulted from an argument over who was to use the calypso band playing in the bar in which the fight occurred. Others insist that Miss Raye objected to Barton's use of the name "Stinky" for the bartender. Net result was the alleged assault as well as the followip, which found Miss Pat Elbert, a friend of the comedienne, coming to her aid and suffering a cuit on an ear which required the services of a doctor to keep it in one piece.

Miss Raye and her party were guests on Miss Elbert's yacht for a leisurely fishing cruise, prior to return north to prepare for her television series. Miss Elbert, prominent Beach socialite, is not a party to the suit, nor is Miss Raye's husband, Ed Begley, who, although present, did not participate in the brawl, according to witnesses.

Shoot Peter Marshall Biopic in Real Life So. Towns, Churches

So. Towns, Churches
Atlanta, Sept. 28.
Cameras started rolling her Friday (24) on preliminary on-the-spot Georgia scenes of 20th-Fox's "A Man Called Peter," starring Richard Todd and Jean Peters, both of whom were present.
Heading crew of CinemaScope production is Director James D. Clark. Bob Farfan is assistant director and W. G. Eckhardt is manager of unit doing the shooting.
First scenes were taken at nearby Norris Lake, with Todd in role of Peter Marshall, the small-town minister who made good in the big city, and Miss Peters as his wife, Catherine, whom he wooed and won while she was a student at Agnes Scott College in Atlanta.
Later the crew moved to Covington Presbyterian Church, which Marshall served. Graduation exercises, with students participating were filmed Saturday (25) and crew then moved to Columbia Seminary, where Marshall studied for the ministry, in nearby Decatur, Ga.
That's all the scenes to be made in Georgia. This unit plans to complete its shooting by Tuesday (28) and move on to Washington where Marshall was pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, for additional scenes.
The rest will be made in Hollywood studios, with Mrs. Marshall, herself, on hand lending technical advice in the filming of the story of her husband's life. She is the author, of the book of the sametitle, made up of her husband's lended in the pic.

WELCOME MAT FOR IMPORTS

Who Likes Foreign Films

If you are thinking of opening "art" house, what's the kind of patron you're looking for?

Profile was sketched in a report sent out to American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres affiliates and others this week by AB-PT v.p. Edward L. Hyman.
"The person you are aiming to attract does not fit into any one category," he wrote. "In some cases he is a college graduate, but in many cases he is not. In some instances he may be an intellectual, but in most cases he is not. In the main, he is a person who is easily bored with not only hackneyed fare of any sort, but who thoroughly relishes new theatrical experiences whether, it be a profound psychological drama or a robust murder story.
"One very important thing to remember is that the art and foreign film patron most often is a former avid movie goer who has now given up the habit because of disillusionment with run-of-the-mind product and because of certain discomforts and inconveniences sometimes attendant on movie going. Look for your art film patrons in all walks of life from highschool students to octogenarians, but remember that they must be attracted to your theatre by the same fresh, unusual approach that they demand in their film fare."

Not even the most cynical exhibitor is denying that all major companies have at least a couple outstanding, quality-wise, pix on this year's skeds. The result is that probably as many as 15 of the more important films will be in contention for top honors.

Monetary importance of the best-pic citation can't always be measured with precision, of course. But some distribution exces feel it can mean as much as $500,000 extra in film rental if the March anouncement coincides with the widespread circulation of the pic.

Double-Width For 20th 'Roadshow' CinemaScope

Idea of wide-gauge film isn't new to 20th. In fact, Sponable had been fooling with it on several occasions. However, it always ended up in the mothballs again.

It's stressed at 20th that the emphasis will continue to be on CinemaScope, but that the nature of the biz forced continuous activity in the research field. Among the projects being worked on by Sponable are improvements in CinemaScope and in 20th's lenticular color.

Only other wide-gauge film system currently in use is Todd-AO which is shooting "Oklahoma" that way. VistaVision utilizes a double frame in the lensing, but eventually reduces it to a normal, single frame in the release print.

20th Comes In On C'Scope Wave, All-Time High

Riding the crest of the Cinema-Scope wave, 20th-Fox during the third quarter of 1954 collected over $20,000,000 in film rental from the domestic U.S.A. market alone. That's the highest domestic take for any quarterly period in the company's history.

Spyros P. Skouras, 20th prexy, predicted last week in N.Y. that the fourth quarter would top the third. Projecting for the entire year, that means that 20th in 1954 may well end up with domestic rentals exceeding $70,000,000. The 1953 rental collections were $67,309,000.

Foreign rentals for 1954 are expected to reach around $45,000,000.

Foreign rentals for 1954 are expected to reach around $45,000,000, giving 20th a worldwide rental collection of over $115,000.000. That compares to $105,662,000 in 1953.

For the week ending Monday (27) alone, 20th racked up $2,000,000 in film rental. This, say company execs, is an extremely favorable showing for a non-drive week. They underline further that the company's income so far this year has been achieved with a comparatively small number of pix, and limited outlets.

Rentals from the domestic and foreign markets for the first two quarters of 1954 came to $47,829,000. 20th income so far justifies earlier predictions that the outfit may double its profits in 1954, observers say. Net in 1953 was $4,560,887, the equivalent of $1,65 a share.

UA PRODUCERS IN BIZ FOR THEMSELVES VIA PIC EQUITY, 'CREATIVE AUTONOMY'

Regardless of the extent to which United Artists provides its own financing or establishes credit with banking interests, indie producers aligned with the distributor are owners of the negatives of their pix. While the distributor has a participation, the negative is the filmmaker's asset and it's transferable; he can dispose of it as he pleases so long as there is conformity with the releasing provisions of the contract. usurioution rights for seven of 10 years or, in some cases, perpetuity. This point was made by Robert S. Benjami, UA's board chairman, in conversation with a reporter ver the past week. An example he ited was Paul Gregory's production of "Night of the Hunter," for which UA set up the production money 100%. UA has a large participation but Gregory (along with his partners, if any) is the owner in that he is free to dispose of the negative to other interests on condition, of course, that UA takes a cut of the proceeds of any such disposition. Or, Gregory can elect to hold on to the equity as long as he pleases. UA cannot call the turns on its disposition.

SIMPP's Unfair Practice Action Vs. Exhibs Settled Out of Court

Six-year-old suit in which the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers demanded damages of $8,750,000 from United Detroit Theatres, which is a branch of United Paramount, and Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, buying-booking combine of 125 independent houses, has been settled out of court. The action, which went through the various preliminary stages but never was argued before a judge, had charged the defendants with violations of the antitrust statues via an alleged conspiracy to restrict the licensing of indie pix in the Detroit area.

Basis of the settlement simply is agreement by the defendants with the principle that a "free and open competitive market" is vital to the success of production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures."

The suit, in addition to the moneary award, had sought the dissolution of Michigan Cooperative and, the sale of United's 16 houses in Detroit to indie operators. United, said the complaint, had tied up firstrun exhibition in Detroit to the extent that any distributor, seeking to talk a deal with any other showcase theatre, would have to obtain United's permission. Berlin, Sept. 21.

The second half of September sees much American top product ut on release here. "Quo Vadis" preemed day-date at two big houses, the Delphi and the Capitol, with Mefro giving it a big publicity campaign. Cinema Paris, usually a Gallic preem house, has Walt Disney's "Living Desert," proving a topnotch draw.

Filmtheatre Berlin preemed Paramount's "Little Boy Lost" while "Gone With Wind" (M-G) is still packing them in at the Kurbel although now in its 10th month. A number of topflight U. S. pix have been announced for the end of September such as Columbia's "Caine Mutiny" and "Limelight" (UA). In all, five out of 11 preem houses in the Kurtuerstendamm area currently are playing Holly-wood films.

Hollywood's top pix in this area, however, are meeting strong German competition, such as "Portrait of an Unknown Woman," "Confession Under Four Eyes," with Hildegard Knef (Neff) and Ivan Desny, "Viktoria and Her Hussar," with Eva Bartok; "Sauerbruch," blopie of Germany's famous surgeon; and "Fireworks" starring Lili Palmer Of the current pix, crix liked "Pane, amore e Fantasia" best the first Italian film to play the Film-buelne Wien in a long time.

Best grossers last month were the Teutonic film, "Konsul Strotthoff," and Austria's "Light of Love." Most successful Hollywood feature was "Hondo" (WB). France's best item was "Monsieur Ripois." German films (because of their extreme popularity in second-runs) captured 47.2% of playdates in Berlin in August as against 26.1% garnered by American pictures.

John Bertero, chief counsel for National, disclosed in N. The attorney feels the green light will be forthcoming because the Government is cognizant of tv's damaging effects on theatre business and because exhibitors now must cope with a "seller's market." He pointed out tv had little meaning to theatremen and there was a far greater amount of product available back in 1946 when the first decree in the industry antitrust suit was handed down.

Charles P. Skouras, National president, revealed plans to produce two to three films annually, as a means of alleviating the so-called shortage. There's no specific blueprint for the ptc-making but Skouras commented, "We can always hire producers and financing is no problem."

The prez feels that exhibition is in need of 32 to 37 more pix altogether. He added: "I'm talking about good pictures—not mediocreones. We have got to have extraordinary product to make the people come out of their homes."

Skouras said he is not quarreling with the studios over the product situation, "because good stories, are hard to come by." He emphasized that story material will be the main consideration in National's production future.

On the subject of product, Skouras was asked why National, although no longer affiliated with 20th-Fox, still appears to favor 20th's films for some of its theatres, notably the N. Y. Roxy, "This is because 20th-Fox has fine product but we also play the pictures from other companies," he stated.

GRIFFITH JOHNSON'S DUTIES-WITH MPEA

Motion Picture Export Assn.'s European division is to be headed up by G. Griffith Johnson, MPEA v.p., working under the overall supervision of Ralph Hetzel, MPEA v.p. and head of the Assn.'s international department.

Johnson's appointment relieves Hetzel of the day-to-day supervision of the European areas. Continuing in their present posts with MPEA in N. V. are Ted Smith and George Canty, both concerned with MPEA's European activities.

Johnson, an economist, will divide his time between N. Y. and Washington.

LIMNS ROSY PIG

Charles P. Skouras, president of National. Theatres, "took" Wall Street over the past week. The exec hosted a cocktailery at the Waldorf-Astoria, N. Y., on Thursday (23) for a group of brokers and stock analysts for the purpose of explai ing the fiscal affairs of National. He amiably and at times jocularly answered a wide range of questions and where the subject was particularly, specialized, such was particularly specialized, such as pertaining to legalistics, he re-ferred the interrogator to John Bertero, the circuit's chief coun-

That the reps of N. Y's financial district were satisfied with Skouras' efforts to supply them with information appeared for sure. "He gave a splendid performance," deadpanned one stock trader following the session.

Impressive to the money men particularly were these disclosures made by Skouras: National's earnings for the fiscal year ended, Saturday (25) will be around $1 per share, up from 91c last year (the chain has about 2,760,000 shares outstanding); the prez is "hopeful" that dividends will be paid on a regular basis in the near future (in the last two quarters the company paid one divvy of 15c and a second of 20c; indications are that the Metropolitan Insurance Cowill ease restrictions on dividend payments.

Metropolitan, with whom National has a borrowing agreement, now limits divvies to 50% of the earnings of the previous year where these earnings fall below $3.000,000. Skouras expects this will be raised to 70%.

Prior to the session with the Wall St. crowd, Skouras had as luncheon guests a group of trade press reporters and N. Y. financial writers. The queries at both sessions were similar.

Skouras made it clear that he was not out to win friends because he feared an impending proxy fight for control of management, as had been conjectured in some quarters. The upbeat nature of trading in National's shares over recent months had led to some conjecture that outside interests were buying with the view of gaining board representation.

The prez had this comment:
"People tell me the stock is rising because they think Charles Skouras is a damn good manager."

He was asked if Charles Green, who had engaged in a stock battle.

The J. Thereafter, it will continue to film i that medium.

John Woolf, the Romulus Films boss, is also planning to make his upcoming production of "Esther Costello" in VistaVision, but a final decision will depend on the camera availability situation.

Apart from the ClnemaScope productions directly inspired by the 20th-Fox or planned in association with the American majors, the only independent British anamorphic film in the planning stage is Sir Alexander Korda's proposed remake of "The Four Feathers." This is likely to start rolling early next year at Shepperton.

"A Star Is Born" was a great 1937 moneymaker when David O. Selznick and William A Wellman first made the Janet Gayng-Fredric March starrer and it's an even greater picture its filmusical transmutation, in CinemaScope, under the Judy Garland-James Mason-Sidney Luft aegis. It will not only mop up as a commercial entry; this indie production for WB release sets a number of artistic standards which may have their echoes in the intra-industry accolades that usually comes with the Ides of March.

A VARIETY review traditionally concerns itself with the boxoffice leaving the artistic values of Oscar sweepstakes for the fan mags and columnists. But in the instance of a "comeback" personality like Judy Garland it becomes a pertinent topic of discussion. The trade, like the public, rooted for her signal in-personal "comeback" at the Palace on Broadway, and the same values must obtain with this, her first film, and under her husband's production aegis, since leaving Metro, her young lifetime "home" lot in Culver City.

Unfolded in the showmanly Moss Hart adaptation of the 1937 original is a strong personal saga which somehow becomes, in a sense, integrated into the celluloid plot. The revenue for the play back and forth, in tegrated into the celluloid plot. The revenue for the play back and forth, in tegrated into the celluloid plot. who has been hatefully biding his time—these are samples of the many ingredients woven into the sum total.

The Harold Arlen-Ira Gershwin numbers are tallored for the plot and not the jukeboxes although. The Man Who Got Away' is already on the road in that direction. The yesteryear standards are plausibly interlarded. Of the new songs, "Got to Have Me With You," "Somewhere There's a Someone" and "Long Face Lost" tie into the script like it was a one-man liberto creation.

There are three or four dramatic highlights that pile on top of each other, in a manner which might create the suspicion of anticlimactic toppers cluttering the chematurgy, but such is the pitch and the pyramiding that the opposite is true.

There are minor key highlights as when she assumes responsibility for the custody of her drunken husband, resulting in his 90-day. City Jail term being suspended. Or that heartbreak scene when she gayly recreates a Paris-Chinese-Affican-cariocan "production" conceit—to the playback disk in the home phonograph—that is better than if it were given a Radio City Music Hall production.

Whatever the production delays, which allegedly piled up a near-$5,000.000 production cost, the endresults quite obviously were worth it. There is the ring of authority and a striving for as near-perfection as possible that will pay off injackpot proportions. And for all concerned.

Mason is as likeable a "heavy" as he is as a star. Bickford's studio head concept, and Carson's impression of a publicity chief, are the real thing. A lammister from a former two-man saloon act, Tommy Noonan, will emerge with many Hollywood opportunities as an earnest young man on his way to fatter roles. The rest are secondary although Lucy Marlow, as a starlet, makes her classy chassis bit stand up and out for heftier potentials.

The veteran George Cukor directed with a sure hand from a tiptop script by Moss Hart: Richard Barlow's dance-staging; the many art, costume and decor credits; Ray Heindorf's usually capital musically obey the Technicolorful lensing which evidences wisdom when to minor-key the hues as well as full-up—all these are among the many plus values. It's a whammo 182 minutes that belies the full three-hour course of entertainment, so arresting the unfolding.

the ken of strangers to plc-making. But its basic story elements are strong and make for substantial fare on anybody's menu. It's potent boxoffice.

Humphrey Bogart and Ava Gardner have the leads and register with great effect. But then Mankiewicz has drawn fine performances all around. And in shaping the scenario, each member of his cast is given a chance to come to the fore with at least one histrionic grandstand play. Thus each is shown to be an essential part of the plot, necessary to the well rounded, integrated whole.

Miss Gardner is the contessa of the title, "discovered" in a secondrate flamenco nitery in Madrid. The trio of discoverers: Bogart as a writer-director and determined member of Alcoholocis Ananymous; Edmond O'Brien, as a glib, nervous, perspiring combination of pressagent and (apparent) procurer, and Warren Stevens, the producer who, as he is aptly described by another player, "owns Texas and just bought California because he wants to make a picture." This is the start of Miss Gardner's career as a shining star and much-desired woman.

Mankiewicz' script frankly makes no bones about who is or isn't (but would like to be) romancing whom, Miss Gardner, for example, while refusing to satisfy the lusts of her well-heeled admirers, including Stevens and a zillionaire South American, is revealed as yielding to a guitar player from the Spanish honky tonk. Not namby-pamby either is a wedding night scene in which the Italian ex-count in whom the contessa finally has found her true love, discloses theroughout. Mankiewicz eschews shock values. Every item in the development seems to inherently belong. Where the material is strong by screen standards he has presented it without hedging but still also without any ribald, undue emphasis.

The director employs off-screen voices on many occasions. Bogart, at the start, speaks from off-camera while he is seen silently observing the interment ritual for Miss Gardner at a small cemetery in an obscure Italian village. His spoken recollection of the first meeting with the contessa then leads to the actual scene. It's via this technique that Mankiewicz, with telling effect, gets across many story points.

Miss Gardner is ideal in her spot, looking every inch the femme magnetism around which all the action revolves. She's a beautifully-dimensioned knockout—the wardrobe department didn't feel too restrained—and does an impressive job of acting as the Spanish castanet hoofer who elevates to a part in the international coterie. Bogart is splendid throughout, taking part is the st together. Ironically, the count never learned that the contessa wanted to bear a child for him even though by another man.

Score by Mario Nascimbene, mainly a thematic tune of Spanish flavor that is not identified, has value in its own right and with proper merchandising could be a salable factor for the film. Other credits are topnotch although, in the late reels, sharper editing might step up the pace.

As a footnote it might be added that Mankiewicz has been quoted as saying none of his characters is for real. This was in answer to suspicion that the moneyhags producer might be an only slightly distorted mirroring of, to come right out and name him, Howard Hughes. With the aforementioned crack about his "owning Texas," the pic does ti down the point of origin of the picturized producer. Hughes, of course, is a Texan. But then lots of men who rival Fort Knox in wealth come from Texas and some move into film production. It's understood there have been some cuts in the pic to reduce any further resemblance.

tion from her ambitious husband who has neglected his family for his work in an ulcer-accompanied drive for advancement.

Miss Dahl is a pushy glamor gal, not unwilling to throw her sar around to gain her aims. She believes her efforts have played a large part in the business success of her husband. She wants the N.Y. Job for the glamor it represents and wastes no time going after it.

The characters of the men are also neatly etched. Wilde is honest, outspoken, and devoted to his family. MacMurray is a proud, powerhungry self-made man. Heflin is modest and quietly competent. Webb is kindly and efficiently observant despite his approach and seemingly facetious manner. The choice, of course, is left to the very end and will come as a surprise to many. Unlike "Executive Suite," in which the audience could quickly put its finger on the chosen man, "World" keeps 'em guessing.

The visit to New York of the hinterland exees and their wives gives the C'Scope camera a wonerful opportunity to wander about Gotham, it captures the city's more lush side—the beautiful skyline, the tall buildings, the area along the East River and the United Nations, Park and Fifth-Avenues, the Stork Club, the Plaza Hotel, an outside glimpse of Macy's and 34th St. the approaches to the tunnels. It makes a great trailer for America's key metropolis.

One aspect of New York life, better, known to the femmes, is a particularly hilarious sequence in a so-called women's outlet store, waguely similar to Klein's on 14th St.

While one may quibble on the blausibility of the story, there will be no quarrel with the way it's handled. The entire cast, under Jean Negulesco fine direction, contribute a performance as polished as the entire production. They're all 'old pros' and give each character the delineation that is required. Since all contribute equally, it's difficult to single anyone out individually. It's team work at its best. In addition to the star names, solid performances are registered by Margalo Gillmore, as Webb's sister who aides in the o.o. of the wives, and Elliot Reid, as the tycoon's nephew who serves as guide and one-man entertainment committee.

Wanger, With 6 Pix Set, Sees Hollywood Council Insular in Viewpoint

Hollywood Film Council was slapped on the wrist last week by producer Walter Wanger who declared the Council was "very injurious to its own interests" in opposing the foreign filming of Hollywood pix.

Wanger, in N. Y., to help plug his 20th-Fox release, "Hajji Baba," had specific reference to the Council's censure of Gregory Peck who's been active in foreign pix making. "If everyone stays home, and pictures are dull, it won't help the Council." Wanger opined. "If, on the other hand, they do big business, it's going to help labor all yound."

round."

Wanger himself hasn't mapped out a stay-at-home program for himself for 1955. His next film, which he hopes to do before the end of the year, will be "Mother, Sir," the story of a U. S. officer's wife in Japan. It'll star Joan Bennett, Wanger's wife, and will be locationed in Japan. It'll be an Allied Artists release. Another Wanger project with a foreign locale is "Tangier. Lovesong," which he'll do in Tangier. He also plans to do "Yellow Knife" as the windup of his releasing deal with 20th which, incidentally, has a 75% interest in "Hajji Baba."

Three other pix on Wanger's

Three other pix on Wanger's sked are "Knights of the Sky," an airforce film; "Queen of the Universe," an offbeat science-fiction yarn, and "1956" (tentative title), described as "." described as "a big political story laid against the background of con-temporary America.

temporary America.

Asked whether he intended to complete all these within the year, Wanger quipped: "One of us will be finished—the program or me."

Producer reported conditions in Hollywood "better than they've ever been," with a new attitude clearly discernible. "Now we're really in show business," he said. "We've switched from a purely manufacturing to a creative process. Making picture today is more like making a play. Every detail is worked out a lot more carefully."

One of the facets of the change,

One of the facets of the change, Wanger held, was the awareness on the part of the producers of a new kind of responsibility. "The independent today is more important than ever before," Wanger held. "Everyone is looking for independent product, even Metro. That means that the producer now must know a lot more about the business, all parts of it. He has to find out about marketing, costs of advertising, etc. At one time, the producer really didn't know very much about the business end of the industry."

Pointing out the advantages of Portugal, Terry said it was almost like California in size, climate and topography. In addition, he noted that the principal cities—Lisbon, Oporto, Aveiro and Coimbra—have historical castles, churches, buildings and monuments. Other plus aspects are the Alfama, a larger edition of the Casbah; picturesque peasantry and fisher folk; a magnificent coast, cork forests, vineyards, a lush countryside and a miniature desert—all of which, according to Terry, lend themselves to excellent location sets and production backgrounds. duction backgrounds.

Washington, Sept. 28.

The 5.000th certificate issued by the U.S. Information Agency has gone to the Walt Disney picture, "Beaver Valley," to ease the way for the film into foreign countries. The certificates are part of a program which helps educational motion pictures obtain privileges, including custom facilitation and duty-free entry into 24 countries which recognize the certificates.

Certified American motion pictures, film strips, kinescopes, re-cordings and other audio-visual materials get duty-free entry into the foreign countries, plus other privileges.

Judge Lewis scored as specious the producers' arguments about the film "acquainting American youth with the danger latent in marijuana cigarettes and other narcotics. On the agenda, apart from the ANICA setup and the Italians desire to see Metro come into the fold, are two other main points: the availability of nine U.S. films for indie Italians' bid for the manufacture of monopack-system color release prints for use in Italy.

There had been complaints by some of the American companies re their representation in ANICA and the Italians' tendency to make decisions without consulting the U. S. distribs.

He added that this concern over quality was reflected in the new Italian film agreement which provides that nine films must be made available to indie Italian distribs. That's a reduction from last year, when each U. S. distrib was required to offer two films a piece to the local releasing orgs.

Minneapolis, Sept. 28.

For a change newcomers are taking the play away from holdovers here. A powerful guartet of fresh entries, "Betrayed," "Rear Window," "Sabrina" and "On Waterfront," is delivering in a big way. "Window" is especially sock at the State. Regular admission prices for all four maybe helps. It's the 24th week for still high-flying "Cinerana," the fourth for "Dragnet" and the third for "Duel in Sun" and "Apache." Weekend crowds for the Minnesota-Nebraska football game, which drew 58,000, and improved weather were favorable factors.

There's a general slump along town's mainstem, with some houses very hard hit. Reason seems to be a combo of ideal outdoor weather and a lack of much strong product. However, "Betrayed" opened solid at the Palace, and will do well on the week. Columbia's "Raid" is lukewarm. Biggest nosedive was taken by "The Egyptian" at Loew's Capitol, which dropped about 40% after its initial solid stanza, "Rear Window" continues solid in fourth week at Lopert's Playhouse as does "On the Waterfront" in first holdover session at Trans-Lux.

Standout newcomer, of course, is "Sabrina," which is soaring to a new house record of $68,000 or close at the Criterion. This tops the old high of "Hans Christian Andersen" by a considerable margin. Rave reviews for the most part, excellent word-of-mouth and the upped scale all are contributing to the showing, unusual for this season of the year. Crit is getting $2 top ($2.30 for loges) on the weekends and cashing in on lifted prices all along the line.

"Shanghai Story" with vaude looks to hit sock $27,000 at the Palace. "Bread, Love and Dreams," the other newcomer, soared to a terrific $17,700 opening week at the Paris. TOA YELLS-BUT NOT FOR COPS

Berger of Allied Scoffs at TOA

Reade's Social Call Upon Twin Cities Evokes No-Motive' Statement From Harold Field

Minneapolis, Sept. 28.

It's just a "coincidence" that the news of the coming to this Allied stronghold of Walter Reade Jr., TOA president, broke at the time of North Central Allied's picketing of the local Columbia exchange. So says Harold Field, the circuit owner who invited Reade to Minneapolis "long before there was any hint of the picketing."

And, asserts Field, who is a TOA member, the invitation was extended during recent. West coast meeting, not for the purpose of establishing a TOA unit here, "but because I thought this territory's exhibitors would like to get acquainted with Mr. Reade and learn something about TOA and its aims and how it functions."

So, says. Field, he and Eddie Ruben, another circuit owner and TOA member; who couldn't be reached for comment, decided to join in bringing Reade here, holding a luncheon for him and inviting exhibitors here to attend.

Neither Field nor Ruben is an Allied member, but Field declares he has "the greatest respect and admiration" for Bennie Berger, NCA president. As far as the picketing of the Columbia exchange is concerned, "If don't know what it's all about," says Field.

On his part, Berger, predicting that any effort which might develop from the luncheon to form a TOA unit "in competition with North Central Allied" is doomed to failure, declares the development "doesn't worry or disturb him in the slightest." He also takes a potshot at TOA.

"If (TOA here) at best would be only a 'paper organization' with a board of directors and few if any more members, and that's about and are with us 100%, and can't be taken away. They appreciate our many accomplishments for them.

"As far as TOA is concerned, it never has done anything of value for independent exhibitors and our theatreowners in this territory know that."

Reattewhite's in this territory know that."

Berger denies reports that he has received some adverse criticism from members because he and his directors employed two pickets to carry banners in front of the Columbia exchange here declaring the company "unfair to independent exhibitors." This was in protest against the claimed unreasonable terms for "The Caine Mutiny" and the company sales manager's alleged "arrogant" treatment of a National Allied committee seeking film rental relief. This picketing has been halted pending the outcome of Columbia's court action to stop it.

other of commina's court action to stop it.

"We've had nothing but praise from our members for taking the picketing step that we did," in-sists Berger. "There hasn't been a single fault found with the ac-tion."

EDMUND GRAINGER FORMS INDIE COMPANY

Hollywood, Sept. 28. Edmund Grainger is leaving his RKO post at the end of this year to form his own indie company, Edmund Grainger Productions. Inc., with a program of 10 features over a period of five years. First will be "Oh, Promised Land." Deal is under way with RKO for production and distribution facilities.

Producer has headed his own unit at RKO for four years during which he made such films as "The French Line," "Flying Leather-necks," "The Racket," "One Min-ute to Zero," "Blackbeard the Pirate," "Split Second," "Devil's Canyon" and "Second Chance."

Biting Sarcasm Hits 70-30 On 'Caine Mutiny'

Boston, Sept. 28.

A bulletin released last week by Independent Exhibitors and Drive-In Theatre Association of New England urges exhibs to bypass playing "The Caine Mutiny" terming Columbia's current deal the "most appalling terms ever demanded." Claiming that "Columbia has seen fit to rate the pic with a few all-time greats by demanding a 70-30 split, with an indicated 10% profit to the exhib" it points out "something new has been added, namely a floor of 50% of the gross receipts so that it may very well be that the exhib loses money while Columbia gets 50% of the gross and the 10% profit vanishes. This creates a precedent to which the exhibs dare not accede because if we go for this the practice will surely spread."

Continuing that "it is obvious will surely spread."

Continuing that "it is obvious that you cannot make money on this company's second feature and it's more obvious that you will make no profit on their big (?). hits it seems a three-fold shame that exhibs will continue to do business with a company which would preclude a chance of profit on their current features." Bulletin winds with the warning "Signing a Columbia contract, in our opinion, means committing business suicide with your fountain pen."

ness suicide with your fountain pen."

Commenting the bulletin, Norman Glassman, Independent's chairman of the board, predicted the current booking terms and practices of the majority of film companies would play a prominent part on the agenda of National Allied's convention next month. Glassman also took a verbal poke at the distribs attitude stating "It doesn't make sense to me that a company should spend so much money making a pic and then throw roadblocks in the way of the small exhib by demanding such exhorbitant terms. A pickle company does everything possible to market its product but distribs apparently don't understand or care about essential economics when they continually price their product out of range."

Bengal Brigade' Advance Booking Tied to Mag Ads

With a view to a maximum magazine ad tieup, Universal has racked up a record 1,446 advance bookings on its "Bengal Brigade," according to Charles J. Feldman, U.v.p. and general sales manager. These theatres will play the film in November. They're to be listed in two-and-a-half, page two-color ads in, the Oct. 19 issue of Look Magazine and the Nov. 12 issue of Collier's.

Similar national promotional campaign, with theatre listings in the same two national mags, was carried on by U earlier this year for "Saskatchewan." Pre-dating, U feels, doubles the impact of its national mag ads.

Tipoff of TOA's policing came last week at a regional meeting of the United Theatre Owners of Illinois at Springfield at which Levy declared: "I am shocked to hear of the many apparent violations of the decrees in U. S. vs. Paramount in this and in other areas." Levy stressed that the violations were mainly in the field of conditioning the sale of one picture upon another or others. He told exhibs to forward "their complaints in writing, giving the time. plaints in writing, giving the time, place, name of sales representa-tive, and the demands made by him, so that appropriate action can be taken."

Rhoden Cold To Expansion Via Drive-Ins

Elmer Rhoden, president of Fox Midwest Theatres, which is based in Kansas City, has no use for drive-ins. "We don't regard it as the type of show business we want to expand in," he commented. The circuit chief, in N. Y. last week, said this applied to his area where the ozoners operate on only a six-month-a-year basis. He stated he has "figures" on one company in business eight to hine years "and it has still to pay for one house." He acknowledged that the drive-in business might be more favorable

He asknowledged that the drive-in business might be more favorable in the south or west.

Added Rhoden: "The drive-ins don't cut in on our business because they are providing a service for people who wouldn't come (to conventional houses) anyway." He placed in this category persons with baby-sitting or automobile-parking problems.

Rhoden, who doubles as chairman of Theatre Owners of America's drive-in committee, said the closed-in operations score over the outdoor houses on another count. In hot weather, he noted, air conditioning is a definite lure for the regular theatres.

Minnesota communities have the legal right to ban drive-in theatres on the grounds an ozoner would constitute a nuisance, but it devolves upon a local city or village council to make the determination, not the state, according to a ruling by J. A. A. Burnquist, state attorney general.

Replying to a query from C. W. Kennedy, Wadena county attorney, he opined that a village in Wadena county, where it has been proposed to build an ozoner, has the power to regulate exhibitions and shows held outdoors.

Accordingly, said the state attorney general, the village itself must decide if the outdoor theatre would affect the public health, safety general welfare differently from a four-wall showhouse.

Inasmuch as he wasn't furnished with a copy of the proposed ordinance regulating or banning driven theatres, Burnquist said he couldn't decide if the proposal to prohibit the ozoner reasonable or not.

Kerasotes Figures Film Supply Undercalculated By 100 Features Yearly

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 24.
Theatres throughout the country could easily absorb 100 more pictures "of good quality," declared George Kerasotes, veepee of United Theatres of Illinois, a Thatre Owners of America affiliate. Speaking at a regional meeting at the Leland Hotel here last week, Kerasotes said that distribs had miscalculated the market by reducing the supply of pictures.

The midwest exhibitor leader miscalculated the market by reducing the supply of pictures.

The midwest exhibitor leader also called the film companies to task for neglecting showmanship and "exercising all their efforts to secure unreasonable and unequitable film rentals."

"Higher rentals result from higher grosses," Kerasotes said.
"However, securing high percentage terms does not necessarily result in high film rentals. The distributor has erroneously reasoned that he has completed his performance of contract by selling the exhibitors a valuable motion picturat high terms. Paradoxically as it may seem, the distributor has another important function to perform. He must cooperate with the exhibitor in selling his pictur to the public, not only on the national level, but also on the local level."

Kerosotes maintained that an exhib who have 40% to 50% to 50% of his to the public, not only on the national level, but also on the local level."

Kerosotes maintained that an exhib who pays 40% to 50% of higross for film rental cannot be expected to spend 100% of the advertising cost. His margin of profit is too small to risk a large advertising expenditure, he said.

"Many exhibitors," Kerasotes continued, "disappointed in the terms they have paid for product, are reluctant to exploit properly a high percentage picture. No exhibitor will complain about high rentals if his gross is high enough to cover his expenses and returnim an equitable profit."

Kerasotes suggested that to only fair way to sell a percentage picture is on a sliding scale, "equitable to distributor and exhibitor, and the scale would apply to all percentage pictures and not just the mediocre ones."

The exhib leader said sh wmanship had been sadly neglected by both distribs and exhibs. Pointing to the successful use of tv advertising by other American business firms, he called attention to the industry's also-ran performance. He cited the total of $123,398.998 spent for network video by leading corporations and noted that "not one motion picture company is listed among the first 100."

Showing instances where tv has aided the grosses of certain pictures, Kerasotes said "we have the stars, the directors, and the writers to use the facilities of this new advertising medium, yet we have failed to do so."

Allied Will Fight for Picket Privilege

Minneapolis, Sept. 28:
Federal Judge G. H. Nordbye has under advisement Columbia's charge that North Central Allied committed an illegal act in employing pickets to march in front of the film exchange accusing the company of being "unfair to independent exhibitors." Resting on his finding will be the granting of a temporary restraining order sought by Columbia against the picketing.

Allied agreed voluntarily to call off the pickets and refrain from any further picketing until its own S. D. Kane, executive counsel, and David Shearer, lawyer for Columbia, submit written briefs and the court hands down decision.

British Film Biz, Legit Leaders Into Com'l TV Via New Syndicate

The potential scope of commercial television in Britain has been widened by the formation of a major syndicate headed by leading executives from all branches of show biz. They've banded together show biz. They we banded together in the formation of the Incorporated Television Program Co., and made application to the Independent Television Authority to be a program contractor on a national basis.

Chairman of the new outfit is Prince Littler, whose many activi-ties in the theatrical world include similar positions with Stoll Thea-ties Corp.; the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane; and the London Coliseum. Val Parnell, managing Drury Lane; and the London Coliseum. Val Parnell, managing director of Moss Empires and the London Paladium boss, is managing director to the new organization. The legitimate theatre is represented by Steward Cruickshank, managing director of Howard and Wyndham and a director of H. M. Tennent Ltd.

The picture industry is represented on the board by Phil and Syd Hyams, who are chairman and managing director respectively of Eros Films, an independent British producing and distributing company. Harry Alan Towers, who has been a leader in the field of commercial radio, is also named director.

The board also includes Lew and director.

The board also includes Lew and Leslie Grade, joint managing directors of the Lew and Leslie Grade, joint managing directors of the Lew and Leslie Grade Agency; J. A. L. Drummond, who is associated with S. G. Warburg & Co., a firm of merchant bankers; and Suzanne Warner, an independent prices agenter. zanne Warr press agent.

The company was registered at Somerset House last week with a nominal capital of $28,000. The new organization is being geared to start on a major lineup of television programming, both live and filmed, as soon as the greenlight is received from the I.T.A. next

The financial resources of the new organization are such that they can call on a minimum of ($5, 600,000, with more at their dis-posal if the I.T.A. should consider that figure inadequate.

French Pic Reps See U. S. Production As Saving Grace to Own Industry

Paris, Sept. 21.

Roger Weil-Lorac, head of the Syndicat De Technicians in France, declared that he was gratified at th growth of U. S. film production in Paris, and that he hopes more companies and indies will follow the lead of Metro for its "Paris Story" and UA for its "Gentlemen Marry Brunettes," now shooting there. He said that French studios have been running at a 30% to 40% capacity the last few years, and that most French pic reps feel that huned American production. that hypoed American production there would be a saving grace and factor for technicians and studio owners and labs.

ractor for teennicians and studio owners and labs.

He realizes that there may be some repercussions to this Gallic "open door" policy to U. S. producers in the States since unemployment also exists there, and has cropped up importantly of late. But he feels that films needing the foreign locale are logical choices for this type of overseas production. So far the governmental pic body, the Centre Du Cinema, has endorsed this "welcome mat" idea for American film producers, and now the industry reps are being worked on to go along with the plan. There is plenty of internal dissension against this by those who feel that it may harm local production, but Lorac says there is room that French time will not be cut in upon.

Vidpix production is another thing France would like to en-courage. It would not be necessary to make a French production also under the new setup, but it would insure work for French thesps and technicians and would be a good wedge in introing Gallic stars to U. S. auds,

Last and only previous appearance of the Sadler's Wells in Italy was during the 1949 Musical May Festival in Florence. Troupe is currently prepping for a two-weck stay at Paris' Opera, preceding the Italian trip.

Cinerama's 1st Bow Outside U.S.

London, Sept. 28.
The London operation of Cinerama, which opens at the Casino Theatre Thursday (30), will be the first to run on a three-a-day basis. This, says Harry M. Kalmine, who arrived from the U. S. last week, has been necessitated by the heavy installation costs and by the burden of admission tax.

Thereafter, the theatre will make normal West End legit charges with a top around $2.20 While making legit charges, the theatre will have to pay the higher rate of admission tax which operates on films and which will slice the weekly take from a gross figure of $30,000 to a net of about $20,000.

Based on Stanley Warner experiences in America, Kalmine regarded Cinerama as a major tourist lure. He was confident the new pic would grab most of the trade from out-of-towners. Allowing for import dues, the cost of freight, and the retooling work, the Casino conversion has cost almost $200,000. About 500 seats were eliminated, leaving a capacity of about 1,200.

Internal squabbling is going on in French film circles on the growth of U. S. pix production here. Governmental bodies and the Syndicat Des Techicians are primarily in favor of this Yank film-making for it would solve perennial unemployment problems here. But the Commie-controlled CGT (Conferedation General De Travail) is using this as a wedge CGT (Conferedation General De Travail) is using this as a wedge to charge U. Government sources, on the other hand, say that 30% to 40% of the available studio space lies idle every year, and that increased U. S. production is a good thing.

This British import may be helped through the program market by lure of Paulette Goddard's name, but film stacks up as a routine whodunit, slow-moving and heavy on plot. As Miss Goddard's co-star, William Sylvester garners most of the interest.

Producer Michael Carreras poses two questions in his screenplay: who slugged Sylvester, femme's husband, on the head while on a fishing trip with three friends in Portugal, resulting in a three-year lapse of memory; and who killed one of these men the night Sylvester yieldenly reappears. Practically everybody in cast but the inspector comes under suspicion for one or the other deed, including Miss Goddard.

Sylvester plays his role stoically for certain dramfic effect, but femme star's character is of a rather unknown quantity throughout. Direction of Terence Fisher is plodding until a windup fight, when he manages certain realistic action. Russel Napier as the inspector stands out in support.

Alvys Maben, social secretary to Miss Goddard, is okay as a minx who tries to throw the blame for the murder on to Sylvester, and Patrick Holt is cast as the final heavy. Technical credits are standard.

ern powers lurks among a motley group of Europeans and Americans, Shanghai police chief Marvin Miller places them all under house arrest in a local hotel. Among those seized are Edmond O'Brien, a muscular physician who's practiced in China for years; Richard Jaeckel, seaman and international adventurer; Basil Ruysdael, a missionary, and Barry Kelley, a tycoon who's been shipping war materials to the Reds.

Also a hotel resident is willow Ruth Roman who appears to enjoy a special status with the police. She comes and goes at will since she's Miller's romantic interest. Much footage unreels before Miss Roman turns out as an anti-Commy who aids O'Brien and Jaeckel to-escape with priceless information for American military authorities. A far-fetched finale has O'Brien returning to his femme benefactor to press an affaire de coeur.

Frank Lloyd, who seems to have had an off-day on this one, seldom gets. a ring of realism into performances of most cast members, probably due to the stock story he was faced with. O'Brien, however, is lusty and vigorous in his role of a hard-hitting physician. Some striking performers, interesting ballets and the opportunity to see and study the technique and presentation of famed Russian ballet troupes in their present Soviet incarnation, are offered in this series of three ballet excerpts. To avid balletomanes, as well as those interested generally in the dance, this film is a treat. Otherwise, the pic is limited by its subject-matter and cast to selected art houses.

Film offers the familiar "Swan Lake," and two new modern works, "Fountain of Bakhchisarai" and "Flames of Paris." Leading dancers as well as the ballet corps of the Bolshoi Opera House, Moscow, and Kirov Opera House, Moscow, and Kirov Opera House, Leningrad, participate. Production is much more lavish than the normal stage ballet in the U. S., and the color is very effective. Film exhibits some male dancers superior to our own while the gifted Galina Ulanova lives up to her previous notices as the lead in two of the three presentations.

Film's canvas allows the director to fill out details in "Swan Lake," to make the story more intelligible and appealing than it is when staged in the U. S. Camera switches from an indoor theatre stage to outdoor settings of lakes and forests, for strong effect. But it is the brilliance of Ulanova's performance as the Swan Queen that makes this segment so fine. Pantomine, soft use of arms and hands, are added to her other technical gifts, to make the role believable while the dancing techque is remarkably finished and exciting. Ulanova is ably partnered by N. M. Sergeyev, who is not only a manly prince but a dancer of superior style and surprising turns. N. M. Dudinskaya, as the false queen, is also a brilliant, virtuoso dancer and a striking, effective actress. "The Shanghai Story," a meller localed in the Chinese metropolis, has a fair amount of suspense and action that will help this Republic entry get by satisfactorily in the twin-bill market. Fact that producer-director Frank Lloyd is a three-time Academy Award winner is a selling point while names of Ruth Roman and Edmond O'Brien are familiar to most film goers.

Intrigue and plotting that goes on within Communist China today no doubt would provide material for dozens of good stories. Unfortunately, the Lester Yard yarm, as screenplayed by Seton I. Miller and Steve Fisher, unravels as a web of talkiness, cliches and obvious situations.

Suspecting a spy for the west-is marvelously trained.

"Fountain" is an affecting, lush story of a Tartar chieftain falling in love with a Polish princess he abducts, and the tragedy of her death at the hands of the khan's former favorite. Ulanova is more maidenlike but no less appealing a dancer here while M. M. Plisetskaya, as her rival, is femininely handsome, fiery and also a fine terp artist.

"Flames of Paris" is weakest of the three works, but here too are some fine dancers, especially among the men (as V, M. Chabukiani), while M. L. Gottlieb, the heroine, does some brilliant fouettes. Crowd scenes are exciting, too. Bron.

Scripps-Howard columnist Robert C. Ruark, who wrote and narrates this documentary of a threemonth hunting trek into Africa, states in a foreword to the film that it was made to show the darkest continent "as it actually is nothing in this victure was staged or contrived." That's a commendable statement. However, the 64 minutes of footage are patently amateurish and the RKO release will need strong selling to eke out playdates in the program market. playdates in the program market. But with special handling the film could find acceptance in art houses. For despite its shortcomings there are a number of unusual angles to the venture which with good breaks could be translated into a profit for the exhibitor. Ruark, whose syndicated stuff appears throughout the country, no doubt will puff the picture. Moreover, while hardly a household word, his name is familiar enough to the general public to stimulate some curiosity.

In the pictorial account of the personal safari Ruark jumps off from Nairobi, British East Africa, accompanied by professional hunters Harry Selby, Andrew Holmberg and John Sutton. They're in quest of big game. Before the expedition winds up a bull elephant is bagged, a beligerent rhinocers downed and a crafty leopard is shot. Aside from actual shooting scenes, daily camp routine is detailed along with occasional close-ups of natives.

There will be those who will feel Ruark's picture ought to be run off before friends in the parlor on a 16m home projector. The Pathecolor in which this is filmed does not measure up to professional lensing and Ruark's commentary (witty in spots) is fuzzily recorded. Score of Paul Sawtell, while adequate for the purpose intended, cocasionally muffles the narration. Jay Bonafield carriers production credit on the film which was produced in cooperation with Voyager Productions.

S. corporations called their staffers to theatres, hotels or tv studios in cities around the country to veil new products or outline sales policies or invigorate morale via closed-circuit large screen tv.

A rough estimate of what industry has spent so far during 1954 for closed-circuit shows runs about $1,500,000. During the year nine business meetings were carried by

The largest umber of theatres on a business closed-circuit hookup was 39 for a Ford Motor Co. presentation. From a financial standpoint, the business meetings have proved a profitable operation for theatres that carried them. They involved no b.o. problems and, in most cases, brought in revenue at a time when the houses usually were not operating, especially when the meetings were staged during the morning hours. It's estimated that participating theatres earned about $3,500 each this year in extra coin from the business confabs. The total income for theatres that participated at one time or another in a business session runs roughly closed-circuit hookup was 39 for a session runs roughly about $200,000.

That the use of closed-circuit by business has caught on is evidenced by the number of repeaters. Ford, Chrysler and Pan-American Airways each used the medium twice during the year. Other companies represented include Dodge, National Dairy Products (Sealtest Division), Frankfort Distillers Co., National Assn. of Manufacturers, International Business Machines, Lee & Disney Hats, Smith, Kline & French Laboratories, N. Rundown of the studios' production activities would indicate that producers are practicing just that kind of selectivity. With the exception of Warner Bros., which is very heavily in CinemaScope, and 20th-fox, which is wholly committed to it, the companies aren't falling into any one groups.

Third-dimensional pix have seen their day-again—but there's no telling when they might be revived. Wanger observed that 3-D might have been a great thing if it had been given a real chance to get off the ground. Finally, there is theat too the screen's diversification program.

Feeling prevalls in many quarters that, regardless of the great strides made to improve the various color processes, black-and-white will never be wholly eliminated. There are some themes that simply require black-and-white treatment," commented one producer, adding he thought it was a great mistake to "cast" color almost irregardless of subject matter. Cited as good examples of producer's preference for black-and-white for certain themes are "On the Waterfront," "Sabrina" and "From Here to Eternity." Critics have made frequent mention of the fact that Hollywood has gotten its audiences used to somewhat shrill colors in films, and that this preference for loud contrasts has made it difficult to apply color to certain films with intimate and sensitive themes.

"The day may come when they'll point to a black-and-white film with the same sense of the 'un-usual' as they did to the early color pictures," was one comment.

Satisfaction with the development of IFE was expressed by Monaco who declared that Italo producers' belief in the agency was growing and that an increasing number of them would release through it. He said the organization would continue to function even after the American aid funds have been exhausted, and he disclosed that, within the past few months, IFE had begun to remit dollars to Italy, It was stressed, however, that this didn't mean that the outfit is operating in the black.

Italians are driving hard to establish themselves in all parts of the globe. For this purpose, the Italo industry a year ago established UNIEF which is to push the commercial promotion of its films. Monaco said UNIEF had the broadest possible scope and, if necessary, could go into distribution in a manner similar to the IFE function in the U.S. At present, UNIEF is supervising distribution contracts for Italo pix in Central America, Germany and France, and it's to expand soon to Spai and South America.

Close to French
Closeness to the French is indicated in the arrangement with Cofram, a French outfit with distribution offices all over South America. These outlets are open to any Italian producer who wants to make use of them. Monaco observed that, due to the coproductions, it was natural that there should be an increasingly close contact between the French and Italian industries.

Reviewing the history of the Ital-Reviewing the history of the Italian industry under the last two Italo-U.S. film agreements, Monaco observed that the deals had been beneficial to both the Americans and the Italians who had improved their respective positions in the same market. Italian production wolume had more than doubled in five years, rising from 60 in 1950 to 140 in 1951, he said.

to 140 in 1951, he said.

Over-All Data

Investment in pix is up from $15,000,000 in 1951 to $50,000,000 in 1954. The gross b.o. of Italo pix in Italy has quadrupled, going from $15,000,000 to $60,000,000.- Export volume has doubled, rising to 1.800 contracts in 80 countries last year.

As for the Americans (MPEA), their imports in the 1953-54 season had dropped to 220 films from a high of 280 in 1950-51, he reported. At the same time, they'd realized an increase in their net take from $10,000,000 in '50-'51' to $15,000,000 in '50-'51' to $15,000 in '50-'51' to '

from $10,000,000 in '50-'51 to $15,000,000 in '53-'54.

Monaco said the improvement in the Italian position was due partly to the increase in the number of theatres—Italy now has 12,000 including seasonal operations—partly to the increased attendance and the general improvement in production. ANICA topper emphasized that the healthy condition of the local industry had been achieved via financial and other measures rather than restrictions on the importation of foreign pix.

ways and means of popularizing the foreign film."

He also pointed up the rising trend towards the use of Hollywood personalities in films lensed abroad, and appended to his report a complete survey of available foreign product and its distributors.

Hyman cautioned theatre ops that, in introducing an "art" policy, they'd in most cases be "seeking to establish an audience where there has been none before and you must therefore proceed with patience and foresight." It's better to start on a minimum basis rather than play a foreign film too long and be disappointed, he counselled.

"If there has been no art or for-eign picture exhibition or if it has been very sporadic, it is safe to say one night a week or at most, two nights, would be sufficient as a starter," he said.

two nights, would be sufficient as a starter," he said.

And he added: "The number of times per week or month that you play at and foreign pictures is less important than the regularity with which you play them and don't expect to build Rome in a day. You are a 'pioneer' bringing a new entertainment form to many people and people don't develop tastes over night. It will take a showing of at least six or eight art pictures and maybe more before your audience of art and foreign film fans can be expected to expand. But experience has shown that this patience will result in expansion in most instances."

Some circuits, notably Walter Reade Theatres, have introduced foreign pix on a limited basis, but never in the sticks. Pattern followed in the main has been that outlined by Hyman, with certain nights in the week set aside for the foreign film showings.

Hyman said the arties would thrive most logically in logations the foreign film showings.

Hyman said the arties would thrive most logically in locations that are easily accessible to colleges due to the presence of a certain basic audience. He also suggested that it'd be best to get an important club, bank, insurance company or other institution to sponsor the art picture plan and to tie in with educators and public officials for a pitch that these films promote better understanding between nations and people.

Exhibs willing to experiment are Exhibs willing to experiment are urged to avoid cliches such as "epic" and "magnificent" in their ads. "A good rule of thumb is to undersell rather than oversell." Hyman wrote. Cinerama Still Makes History

$14,800,000 TAKE TO DATE FROM 8,000,000 VIEWERS—WOWED 'EM IN DAMASCUS, DWARFED SOVIET FAIR—HITS LONDON TOMORROW (THURS.)—AN AMAZING SAGA

Cinerama, the widescreen medium that touched off the industry's technical revolution and served as the spark for the resurgence of film biz, begins its third year on Broadway tomorrow (Thurs.). Since "This Is Cinerama," first film in the medium, opened in New York on Sept. 30, 1952, Cinerama has been installed in 12 other cities and during the two-year period has racked up a remarkable gross of close to $14,800,000 and has been seen by more than 8,000,000 people.

Reluctant to Book 2d Film

The New York run alone, starting at the Broadway Theatre on Sept, 30, 1952 and shifting to the Warner on June 5, 1953, represents a take of $3,600,000 and an attendance of more than 1,900,000. Now in its 105th week on the Main Stem, the weekly gross is still averaging about $40,000 at an admission scale of $1.20 to $3.30 for the 1,600-seat house. Biz is holding up so well that Stanley Warner, the theatre chain that controls the exhibition and production rights to the medium, is reluctant to withdraw the Lowell Thomas-Merian C. Cooper film to substitute Louis de Rochemont's followup attraction, "Ci erama Holiday."

While Cinerama's drawing power is generally accommodated.

while Cinerama's drawing power is generally acknowledged, filmites are prone to minimize the medium's influence on the industry as a whole. When Cinerama hit the market two years ago with a tremendous impact, the film industry was at the nadir of a post-war slump. Previous to its sock opening on Broadway, the established major companies and the object of the costly undertaking for general use. It was not until the initial sock critical reception that the realization struck that something new must be offered the public to bring back the film-going habit. This factor touched off the technical revolution and the resultant confusion that is only now shaking down to a semblance of normalcy.

There was a succession of rather hurried company

There was a succession of rather hurried company announcements relating to new processes. Three-dimension films with specs came and went. Cinema-scope, under the forceful direction of 20th-Fox, took hold and the entire industry shifted to some form of widescreen operation. The industry's era of bigness was launched and the public flocked back to the theatres. All in all, film biz was again hearing the happy clink of the turnstiles.

Bigness-Including Big Problems

Bigness—Including Big Problems

Indirectly, however, the era of bigness started by Cinerama is the cause for many of the problems currently facing the industry. The shift to fewer and bigger pictures is a by-product resulting in the nulti-millon dollar productions which require higher film rentals from exhibitors. The change-over is also the cause of the product shortage, a factor that has brought squawks from exhibs and has encouraged indie filmmakers to renew activities. The selling of fewer pictures at higher terms has brought distrib-exhib relations to a low ebb, with exhibs again threatening to appeal to the Government for relief. This may seem far-fetched cause and effect day-dreaming but, in the last analysis, the roots of the cheers and the beefs go back to Cinerama's unveiling on the public. Until Cinerama nit the market, none of the major companies ever dreamed of technical changes to meet the hefty competition of television. competition of television,

Despite many of the attempts at imitation, Cin-rama still remains the daddy of the widescreen rocesses. Even 20th-Fox toppers couple their all-out support for CinemaScope with the admission that their medium is "a poor man's Cinerama." However, Cinerama, the brainchild of the late Fred Waller, may soon come face to face with another giant in Todd-AO, the promotion of Mike Todd who was originally associated with Cinerama. Cinerama is admittedly a big city attraction. According to S. H. (Si) Fabian, prexy of Stanley Warner, there are no more than four or five more cities in the U. S. that can support the medium. It requires a city of over a million and a large surrounding market area on which to draw. Runs of at least a year are necessary for profitable operation. Installation costs for theatres run to about $100,000, and the type of picture required is costly to film and the subject matter difficult to find.

Hitting London This Week

The first film in Cinerama has chalked up runs of a year or more in Detroit, Los Angeles, Chicago and Philadelphia. It has run 47 weeks in Washington, 43 in Pittsburgh, 41 in San Francisco, 40 in Boston, 34 in St. Louis, 24 in Minneapolis, 15 in Cincinnati, and 13 in Dallas. All engagements, of course, are continuing: In addition to New York, Detroit, Los Angeles and Chicago have passed the $1,000,000 mark in receipts, with L. A. and Chi exceeding $2,000,000. win domestic outlets almost exhausted, Cinerama moves overseas, opening tomorrow (Thurs.) in London to coincide with the New York anni. All seats have been sold out for weeks for the British introduction of the medium. Other foreign openings are expected to follow shortly in Paris, Rome or Milan, Dusseldorf, and Tokyo. The foreign operation is under the direction of Robin International, a worldwide trade firm: worldwide trade firm.

Made Soviet Gesture Seem Puny

Made Soviet Gesture Seem Puny

An earlier overseas showing, sponsored by the United States Government, enters Cinerama as the representation of America, American life and living at the Near East International Trade Fair in Damascus, Syria. Delegations from all over the eastern Mediterranean are making pilgrimages to see the picture as guests of the U.S. Information Agency. Press dispatches report that the success of Cinerama dwarfs everything in the fair, including a three-acre Soviet exhibition.

Among Cinerama's achievements in the U.S. was the mail order and reservation pattern set not only in New York but in every city in which it is playing. As many as 2,000 letters a week have been received from all over the world. Group attendance of 500 and 600 people have chartered busses and trains. The New York City Convention and Visifor's Bureau lists it as one of the city's points of interest.

Appropriate ceremonies are being arranged for the New York anni. The showing that launches the third year will have as special guests 150 mayors of cities and towns within a 100-mile radius of New York. In honor of Paul Mantz, Bendix trophy winner and fiver of the air travel sequences that comprise the "America the Beautiful" climax to the film, a delegation of 170 uniformed pilots of the Air Line Pilots Assn. will attend the birthday celebration. Other honors in the form of placques, and scrolls will be accepted from the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the National Board of Review, and Audio Magazine.

H'wood Needs Near East's Market: Slow Native Adoption of Gear Primes Overseas Theatre Deals

Move by 20th-Fox to push its theatre expansion in Britain and the Middle East sees other majors also recyaluating their foreign theatre holdings and has revived interest in spotting additional showcases abroad.

Field has been comparatively stagnant for some years, but introduction of the new widescreen systems, and the slow progress in conversion abroad, spotlight the need for more American-owned houses which could be used as "pilot plants" in their territories. Murray Silverstone, 20th's foreign topper, disclosed recently that his company considered the Middle East "the turning point of civilization" and that it intended to back it heavily. He also didn't rule out expansion in other parts of the world. For the moment, 20th is building and/or acquiring 10 theatres in the Middle East. In Britain it has leased another two houses, in London and Manchester.

Metro operates, and for the most part owns, 41 houses in various parts of the world. Both Warner-Bros. and Paramount have show-cases, but for the most part neither they nor 20th lad in the past seen much reason to pushfurther expansion.

"It made sense at one time, when we needed model theatres abroad to show our pictures in," commented one exec. "Now we're a little more hesitant because of uncertain conditions. Also, the local houses have modernized a great deal Even so, we could use a lot more fine theatres abroad."

Unow has arrangements with foreign theatre acquisition and in fact had an option of 50% interest in all theatre outlets opened abroad by the J. Arthur Rank Organization. However, neither the U nor Rank pix made

Where 20th's exhibition strength is primarily in Australia, where it wows the 178-theatre Hoyts circuit, and in New Zealand, where it has the controlling interest in Amalgamated Theatres with 52 houses, Metro is most firmly entrenched in South America, where it has 13 theatres, all operated as up-to-date showcases complete with airconditioning, etc.

Metro also has 12 in Australia

All new drive-ins must provide individual speakers for each vehicle and a suitable fence must be provided to prevent spread of paper and other refuse to adjacent properties.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

Excerpting from a two-part article on Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, in the N. Y. World-Telegram & Sun last Thursday and Friday (23-24); "Mr. Balaban left school (in Ch'cago) when he was 12 to work as a telegraph messenger—the family needed the money. Then he went to work as a clerk in a cold storage plant where he never made more than $35 a week.

"It was at that time that Mr. Balaban's mother, who had come to this country with her husband, Israel, took the step that projected the family into the theatrical business. One of my brothers was a singer in a nickelodeon and my sister played the plano there,' Mr. Balaban explained. 'One day my mother said: Barney, take me to this place—I want to see what it's like.'

"Well' I did and when Mom saw me put down two nickels to hay

"'Well, I did and when Mom saw me put down two nickels to buy our tickets, she said: Barney, this is the business for us. People pay before they go in.'"

before they go in."

The two-parter by W-T&S staff writer Norton Mockridge relates how the Balaban family thereupon moved into the theatre business, buying the Chi nickelodeon via an investment of $750, half of which was borrowed. In tracing the Par chief exec's career, the piece notes his airconditioning innovation which kept theatres open during summer heat for the first time, how he kept his Par-affiliated theatres in the black during the depression, and his ascendency to the Par presidency.

Mockridge notes Balaban's aloofness from personal publicity and provides an explanation from the exec. "My motto," Balaban is quoted as saying, "is, Will it sell tickets?" Stories about the stars—yes. Everybody's interested in them. But stories about me? Why?"

Balaban gave the interview at the urging of friends in B'nai B'rith, reports Mockridge. It tied in with Balaban's role as honor guest at Sunday's (24) dinner under B'nai B'rith sponsorship for the promotion of State of Israel Development Bonds.

Venice apparently intends to hold a film festival in 1955 though there may not be any awards. International Producers Federation has already recommended that there shall be only one "A" film festival annually, alternating between Venice, the daddy of all European fests, and Camies, France, sunnerup in prestige. It should be Camnes turnnext year to stage the one "A" festival with the competitive (for prizes) aspect. There's no bar apparently to Venice having a festival so long as gold and silver lions of St. Marks are not handed out. On the other hand it's well recognized that a film festival loses much of its zing if the contest factor is omitted, as in certain "B" (inferior status) festivals, International federation will meet again in October in Madrid where the issue is due for further clarification. Federation president, Charles DeLac, for one, argues that noe enough "quality" films are produced in any single year to give both Venice and Cannes enough materials to judge. Peaceful coexistence of Venice and Cannes, with annual alternation of the right to give awards, is the probable course for the future. for the future

Direct-Mail-Advance Pitch on 'Tonight' Poses Some Interesting Questions

In a rare if perhaps not unprecedented direct by mail stance, Steve Allen turned pitchman for several weeks preceding his Monday (27) premiere as majordomo of the "Tonight" late nighter on NBC-TV. Over the signature of the show's front-runer were a coupile of front-runner were a couple of "hard sell" but with-a-light-touch letters to prospective clients, with such text as:

'Tonight' ... means association with an exciting network show ... and steady employment ... opens up a whole new area of late evening, live network television. "Comedy Hour' Just One Frantic Ad Lib Booking

Ad Lib Booking

Getting those Sunday night Colgate "Comedy Hour" shows on the air is posing something of a problem and necessitating virtually week-to-week hurry-up masterminding and bookings on the part of both the Ted Bates agency and NBC-TV. Since Colgate has upwards of $4,000,000 at stake in the Sunday night 8 to 9 showcase, needless to say the anxieties have been mounting at Jersey City hdgs of the client.

Right from the start the schedule went awry when Jerry Lewis, suffering from jaundice, was obliged to cancel out for the Sept. 19 preem. (That was to have been one of five Martin & Lewis appearances for the '54-'55 season). Lewis won't be ready until mid-November at the earliest. That meant Bates agency stepping into the last-minute breach with its Hollywood Bowl origination.

First of four "book shows" as NBC's contribution (along with the five M&L stints) was originally set for next Sunday (3), but last week the network found it didn't have a "book" ready, necessitating a scramble for variety talent, with Phil Harris, Dinah Shore, William Bendix, among others, corralled for the west coast origination being produced by Pete Barnum.

ing agency with $50,000,000-a-year billings in the till, is selling major control of the agency to a group of employees, about 20 in all, headed by agency prexy F. Kenneth Beirn. It is reportedly a capital gains deal which, it's understood, will permit Blow to devote time to the foundation He plans setting up. Beirn joined Blow '48; became prexy in February of 1953. John Toigo, exprexy of D'Arcy agency, joined Blow in July of '51 as veepee. With Jack D. Tarcher exiting the Cecil & Presbrey agency to join Blow as a veepee, taking along with him billings of $3,000,000, including the $1,500,000 Henrus biz, the Cecil & Presbrey outfit plans to close its doors at the end of the year. James M. Cecil, head of the agency died only last week. Shortly before his death the agency also lost the Sylvania account to J. Walter Thompson (under a similar set of circumstances in which JWT grabbed off the lesser biz as "consolation" billings after losing the $15,00,000 RCA account.

in the making for some time. With Beirn pencilled in as the new major factotum at Blow (although Blow continues as chairman of the board) it left Clyne with no alternative but to resign because of reported long-existing Beirn-Clyne differences as to policy. However, it put Clyne in the driver's sea on the Bulova biz (a Blow house account for 33 years and it's practically his to do with as he wishes. Clyne, who left for the Coast over the weekend for undisclosed business, may open up his own shop, assured of the $5,000,000 Bulova nucleus. However, he hasn't made up his mind yet. Agencies have been beating a path to his door, dangling fancy berths and titles, not only in hopes of capturing the prize "Bulova Watch Time" billings, but equally anxious to latch on to his services as one of the more hep account execs and radio-ty directors in the business. Blow couched the reorganization announcement as follows:

"Effective Jan. 1, 1955, the corporate name of the Blow Co., Inc., will be changed to Blow, Beirn & Toigo. The reason for the change is simple. When you have two men like Ken Beirn and John Toigo on your staff, two men who represent advertising and management on its highest level, men who have set paces in the advertising field, you give them the recognition to which they are entitled.

"It took 10 years to attain this goal of organization strength and dimension. Just a short time ago this agency had one stockholder. In 1955 it will have 30."

Jack Gould, who resigned from the N. Y. Times as radio-tv editor to join CBS Aug. 1 as information advisor on a corporate level, told CBS prexy Frank Stanton last Friday (24) that he was resigning. By Monday (27) afternoon he was back at his old Times desk. The move took CBS off guard. It was just a case, Goulds said, of "tiching to get back" to reviewing and reporting, which, after 20 years, he couldn't shake off.

Since Gould resigned, the Times had been keeping the radio-tv ed berth vacant, with Val Adams filling in. Understood that the newspaper had been needling Gould in the interim to return.

Major radio networks, already involved in a strong competition for the national advertising dollarvia the formation of the Quality Radio Group, were dealt another body blow last week by the formation of a 45-station lineup by the John Blair. Co. which will enable national advertisers to buy participations on top local shows under one package price and billings arrangement. The Blair operation marks the first time that local shows and local personalities have been made available to national bankrollers as a package and without the complexities of spot tim buying.

Montgomery, Too, Gets Spec-Happy

That Monday night "spec consciousness" on NBC-TV is getting contagious, with even the shows surrounding the upcoming one-amonth 90-minute Fred Coe-prod-duced stanzas initiating plans to inject an "extra plus" element of inventiveness into their programming. For example, the Robert Montgomery hour dramatics in the 9:30 to 10:30 p.m. segment has blueprinted an entire sequencing of two-part productions extending through the season, with a inimum of four (entailing an eightweek exposure) already mapped out, and likelihood of even more. Plan is to present the initial installments of the two-part two sagas on the same night that the Coe specs are showcased in hopes that the "continued next week" aspect of the show will invite a fresh audience enthusiasm for the Montgomery-produced dramatics. Definitely set thus far are "Great Expectations" in October, with Dickens "David Copperfield" likely as the Christmas season two-part entry. Others being mulled are "Hunchback of Notre Dame," "Les Miserables," "Tom Brown's School Days, and/or though these are subject to change.

It's also likely there will be at least one or two more Robert E. Sherwood originals for the Montgomery show this season, with the playwright expressing a new-found bullishness for the medium as re-stations are on by several thousand dollars from previous norms they have given up hope of revenue from national spot almost entirely.

Much of the reason for the decline in spot radio has been attributed by the reps to overspending in tv by "moderate-sized" national advertisers—those whose video excesses, they say, will soon eatch up with them. Whatever the reason, there are still situations like this that exist: a president of one national spot rep agency traced the dropoff in biz at one of his larger stations to the fact that 20 out of the 35 national bank-rollers who advertised via the outlet last year are currently out of let last year are currently out of radio entirely.

The reps noted that their intake was only off slightly in the first quarter of the year, but fell sharply in the second and third quarters. Listeners Beef Because Bergen, A & A Play Disks

The Amos 'n' Andy 25-minute cross-the-board show on CBS Radio is undergoing some drastic format revisions, primarily to heighten the story lines and dramatic content.

Actually the decision stems from listener squawks. The network admits it's literally been besieged with beefs from A & A fans who complain, in effect, "how come you're trying to make disk jockeys out of Amos in' Andy and anyway if we want disk jockeys we don't have to tune in to network shows when we're full of them our home town."

(While not basically deejays in their current format, nonetheless the fact that they've been playing some records on their strip show has been enough to label them as platter spinners, despite protestations of the web that it 't'ain't so.) Same situation applies to Edgar Bergen's new Sunday night hour show for Kraft on the same network, which incorporates deejay segments. CBS audience reaction (via flood of mail) is same; "who needs network disk jockeys?" Meanwhile, CBS bagged a third sponsor for A&A's "Music Hall," with Brown & Williamson (Viceroy Cigs), via Ted Bates, backing segments on Monday and Wednesday, starting Oct. 4. A N.Y. spokesman for the radio network said he believed conditions between his group and Fletcher to be friendly when plans to end the affiliation were first made known, but a few days later Fletcher sent a memo, addressed to "all Mutual stations in the Southeast regi ," taking the web to task. In the memo, dated Aug. 21, Fletcher spoke of Mutual's "stated lack of interest in selling baseball to the stations next year, or providing it in any form." Since it's difficult enough these days to keep affiliates in radio happy, the web station relations guys were highly-perturbed, since they insist the only mention they ever made of baseball in '55 was in a letter (believed sent by special delivery, airmail) the previous day, Aug. 20, to WRAL. Edward Klauber who died at New York Hospital last Thursday (23) at the age of 67, will-remain a name without which the story of the CBS network, and to some extent of radio, cannot be told. In many ways a brilliant man, he was also a strange, aloof, introspective man. During the heyday of his power at CBS it was often evident to those who watched him in public appearances at trade conventions and among advertisers that Klauber was embarrassingly lacking in the ability to engage in banter, small talk or hail-fellow-wellmet. This incurable shyness was especially noticeable because radio and advertising tend to be personalized and gregarious professions. Klauber had the reputation of

PEEPSHOW IN REVERSE

Spectacular television calls for spectacular dimensions, and at Spectacular television caus for spectacular dimensions, and at the moment the chicken-and-the-egg axiom sees spectrum entertainment hatched before the public can fully appreciate the show. Not that, at the moment, perhaps it's just as well, because the so-called spectaculars have been far from that in their audience impact.

But the industry problem transcends whether or not this-orthat video show in color is good or indifferent. The pacing between the production ii, i.e. the physical manufacturing of the sets, and the spectrumed spec must be made to coordinate

It's one thing for Milton Berle to create the great want-to-see, which is what gave tv its impact six or seven years ago and rightly earned for the comedian the affectionate soubriquet of Mr. Television. But that was in black-and-white; the average head of a family was willing to put its $500-per annum enter-tainment budget into the one tv basket—a time-payment set.

Color tv has a twofold problem. One is the basic that, unlike the black-and-white video, (a), the price at $800 or thereabouts is still not "popular" and (b), television now has some important competition. Ripley or not it's the picture business, the very thing which, for a time, was draped on the ropes with tv suspected of dealing the lethal blow i the next round or two.

Hollywood has done the job that tv has yet to evidence capabilities of doing. All the sardonic cracks that "bad pictures will only look worse" whether in big-screen, in any of the 'scopes, in 3-D, and/or directional sound, are now as dated as Jorgensen jokes. Veteran showmen at least mated "big" subjects to the big screens, so that it pathirs also that the control of the statement of the statem screens, so that, if nothing else, there was that visual evidence of size and scope and dimension—a healthy boxoffice contrast to the peephole dimensions of tv.

Now come the spectaculars which, for all their size, are to be seen in color by only a comparative handful of the public on so-called 14-inch sets (actually 12½-inch picture size), and the hoopla about shows costing into the hundreds of thousands strikes a very shallow chord.

Get those big-screen tv sets into the stores; let them see what's coming in tint and texture program-wise; and the economic ratio of supply-and-demand will soon achieve a merchandising appreciation that will be the best inspiration that the spectacular production lar production attempts on television should command. Right now they're playing to peephole audiences. It's like giving them "Gone With The Wind" to be seen on one of those historic peephole viewscope gadgets in Hubert's Museum.

The fact that the early-season spectaculars have been some-The fact that the early-season spectaculars have been somewhat lacking is beside the point. There's nothing like a big league audience to bring out the best performance in any rookie. Not to mention the boys with the checkbooks who certainly rate a better audience razzle-dazzle commensurate with their spectacular investments. Nor does this mean any pulling-in on the budgets; the medium has matured and merits going forward. The chicken-and-the-egg ratio should maintain a closer parity for the best results.

Directing "Hattie" is David Alexander, who quit as stager of the Martha Raye Show on the first day of rehearsal last week. Miss Raye's premer last night (Tues.) on NBC-TV was directed by one of her two writers, Norman Lear (other is Ed Simmonns, also ex-Martin & Lewis). This was her second key loss within a matter of months. After last season's click every-fourth Saturday excursions, her writer-director, Nat Hiken, nixed renewal of his NBC pact to go over to the CBS camp for preparation of a situation comedy series for Phil Silvers. Miss Raye's cowriter, Billy Friedberg, is associated with Max Liebman in latter's weekend spectaculars.

Alexander's "Hattie" chore preceded his doubling over into the Martha Raye Show. Last season he directed Miss Merman (along with Frank Sinatra, Gene Nelson, et al.) in "Anything Goes" on the Colgate-NBC "Comedy Hour"—and "Goes" was generally conceded to have reached the high point in variety "spectaculars" although that at tag did not receive its current meaning until Liebman blueprinted the style for NBC.

Transmission of live color television on a local basis presents no insurmountable problems to local stations, according to a report on the experiences of local color pioneer WKY.TV, Oklahoma City, prepared and released last week by the Katz Agency. Report, the second ia series on color by the station repfirm, recounts the experiences and problems faced by WKY.TV since it began local live telecasts on April 8, and comes to the conclusion that local stations better hurry to get in on the color bonanza which is "closer than you think."

Report, "Close-Up on Color TV," states that advertiser interest in color on the national and local level, availability of larger color screen sizes, increased network programming in tint, all add up to speedier use of the medium than previously believed. Katz agency reports that "quite a few advertisers, contemplating the placement of film programs on a national spot and local basis, have queried stating the placement of and local basis, have queried stating the placement of and local basis, have queried stating the placement of and local basis, have queried stating the placement of and local basis, have queried stating the placement of and local basis, have queried stating the placement of and local basis, have queried stating the placement of and local basis, have queried stating the placement of reports that "quite a few advertisers, contemplating the placement of film programs on a national spot and local basis, have queried stations on their timetable for installation of color film gear." And WKY-TV itself reports enthusiasm from local food and department store sponsors.

As for the WKY-TV color operation itself, the outlet will pick up network tint shows, of course, and is currently airing its "Cook's Book" hour-long cross-the-border in tint on a regular basis, along with specials that bring up the weekly tint time to seven hours. WEBS LOSING hadn't bought it nobody would have).

Despite the 11th-hour mile run by prexy Bob Kintner week in carrying the sponsorship ball to get ABC-TV off the $2,000, 000 hook on its NCAA grid schedule by slicing the client melon several ways, there's one unalterable conclusion on which the trade generally agrees—that this the last year for any national gridiron showcase. It almost cost ABC $2,-000,000 to find out the hard way that coast-to-coast collegiate gridcasts are looked at askance as commercially feasible items (just as NBC-TV came near finding it out last season when, by the skin of its teeth and somewhat paralleling the ABC situation, it latched on to a General Motors sponsorship when no other national client was in sight. NBC now confesses if GM hadn't bought it nobody would have).

Situation has nothing to do with ABC affiliation facilities or its ablitity to sell. Now that some clients have come along, the same prize outlets that NBC enjoyed last season moved in to share in the Saturday afternoon sponsorship spoils. But if ABC couldn't have sold it, which was the case almost up to game time, NBC recognizes that it would have been confronted with the same reasons; that basically the major contests are of local and regional interest; that while there's no indication of any waning interest in the sport, few contests are capable of achieving a national game-of-the-week glamor and stature, as reflected in the declining ratings in last season's schedule. When NBC wound up with a Utah fray for the Thanksgiving Day piece de resistance, the prevailing sentiment was: "That's all, brother!"

Locally, stations are riding wide and handsome again on pacting home games for home fans. That's where 99% of the major interest lies. It almost cost ABC lots of shekels to find it out.

To a lesser degree (coin-wise and general interest) the same persists to the tough selling applying and general interest) the same pertains to the tough selling applying to the DuMont' pro grid schedule and the NBC pickup of the Canadian contests. Having missed out in the bidding for the NCAA-blessed collegiate schedule, NBC figured it was a lot cheaper to latch on the Canadian games (through the simple expedient of paying line charges up to Buffalo) rather than be saddled with camera crews, technicians, etc., in pitching for service games. But it's not too surprising to NBC that the Canuck version isn't a hot commercial item in the states.

NBC's 'Look at Us' On 'Dark' Rating, But Gleason Tops

NBC-TV came from practically nowhere as far as inheritance is concerned and, in fact, brought about the "Operation Big Switch" of the year as 90-minute "Lady In the Dark". Max Liebman-Ann Sothern specola of Saturday (25) went against CBS' trlo of half-hour shows. NBC's Pat Weaver & Cowere making with the huzzahs as the 10-city Trendex showed an average of 25.8. for "Lady" while the CBS programs came in with 18.2. Latter figure would have been 20 or more had the 10 o'clock "That's My Boy" been able to maintain the 20.6 pace set by the preceding "My Favorite Husband" (9:30, also in color, to mark the first major tint conflict) and the 20.9 score at 9 o'clock of "Two For the Money," "Lady" kicked up her heels to show segment clockings of 26, 25.9 and 254—far from commanding the situation, of course, but of considerable inspiration to NBC in view of the fact that, two weeks ago (Sunday the 12th). Ed Sullivan's CBS-"Toast of Town" delivered a shellacking to Liebman's preeming tinterola, the Betty Hutton "Satins & Spurs." However, that was Sunday and this was Saturday, with the time and competitive elements differing sharply. The important development lay in the fact that the Mickey Rooney vidpixer at 8 and the reprieved "Place the Face" at 8:30 put together an anemic cluster of 6.9 and 6.1 at a time when Jackie Gleason, in his seasonal initialer, was coming through with the top weekend rating, a powerhouse 36.9 (Continued on page 62) the Dark" Max Liebman-Ann Sothern specola of Saturday (25) went Thus an outside buy today, such as the "Modern Romances" acquisition, is a rarity insofar as the two major webs are concerned.

Washington, Sept. 28.

The FCC officially gave its blessing yesterday (Mon) to a change in the call letters of NBC's owned-&-operated stations in New York, Los Angeles and Washington in order that the respective operations might reflect the parent company's "RCA" identity for which the web had pressed. Thus, in N. Y. WNBC, the radio arm, becomes WRCA (also WRCA-FM, and WNBT is transformed to WRCA-TV; in L.A., KNBH will be known as KRCA; but in Washington there'll be a necessarily clipped version, with WNBW becoming WRC-TV (the "A" of RCA being shaved because of conflict with the new call letters in N. Y.

New letters are effective as of midnight on Sunday, Oct 17, with Charles Denny, the web's o&o vepee, moving in immediately upon FCC approval to exploit the new tags heavily before the effective date.

NBC is betting that the protean talents of Steve Allen will boff his new crossboard network rompinto a two-pronged coin and looksee winner. The best ad glibber of the medium has had his 40-minute tic midnight) local spree, WNBT, N. Y., attention-getter ince its blossoming about 14 months ago, extended to an hour and a half. "Tonight" tees off at 11:30 and rides to 1 a.m. with the midwest picked up at midnight, N. Y. time. (Allen's regular N. Y. sponsor, Knickerbocker Beer out of the Ruppert vats, now leads into the web spread with a local quarter-hour, thus retaining its identity.)

ter-hour, thus retaining its identity.)

NBC's new Participating Programs Dept, has a minor league Fort Knox riding on its faith in the Steve-a-dorable as supersalesman, conferencier, funster, 88'er, interviewer, prankster—and a good mare dull and the only crap game in town has floated away. It's a certainty that Allen combines in his tall, bespectacled frame more positive pleasing elements for tviewers than almost anyone around, but it's in the "remains to be seen" futurities whether he or anyone else has the personal endurance to survive the pre- and st-midnight elaboration. This is an important conideration in view of the fact that ithout Allen this is just another show, as Monday's preemer seemed, to suggest, but with him at bat "Tonight" becomes a major and potent attempt to keep the image orthicons shining.

In the extended dress, the orthodox variety facets will undqubitedly nomen. In the approaching wee hours.

In the regular talent components, the local version has never been a genuine bringerouter. Allen was the show. Period. Good guest attractions helped and Allen was always a shrewd one at handling the glad-you-droppedins, giving them the careful cynosure which has endeared him to the extra-added acts. Regulars Eydie Gorme and Steve Lawrence re very pleasant and even engaging pipers. They are now complemented by another mixed pair, Pat Marshall and Andy Williams, who on first outing seemed to be ditto. Another addition to the troupe is Gene Rayburn, who apparently will be used as a second-man inserted into bits and skits, plus handling the late news. The latter is a repetitive read-off and may easily be characterized as a write-off, since this is dull and often stale stuff for the prelude-to-dawn-patrollers. It's fairly evident that Kenneth. Banghart is missed as the shirtsleeved, rapidfire disher-pper of the day's events in the midnight spot which followed Allen before he spread his wings. But the capsule news is of minor persuasion as set against the great potential inherent in remotes of special events, engineered or otherwise made available.

The initial attempt to be on top of the current hot stuff was exmpled in the Giant-Indian world series, but the confusion with which this was handled will undoubtedly be eliminated. Out of Cleveland came the gala crowd whooping it up for the Tribe, along with Henry (Hot. Lips) Levine and other supporters of that tean's stock. Truth to tell, it was a bit of alfalfa. Better was a chitchat with the amazin' Willie Mays by Michael Zeamer's mobile corps out of Harlem, and the stage-setting "Say Hey Willie Mays' duetting by Miss Gorme and Lawrence added up to topical showmanship, plus that split-screen bit with Allen engaging the Nat'l League batting champ the and Cox's own familiar monology, and in a brace of those w.k. falsetto tenorings of Bill Kenny of the Ink Spots. Here, as elsewhere, the music backing was from the top of Skitch Henderson's book. Leave it to Allen to take care of the competitors, whether "opposite" comic Ernie Kovacs, who hoped Allen would slay the field, including himself (to paraphrase his wire) or handling WCBS-TV with biting char , the frinstance being a congratulatory "wire" from "Warner Oland of "The Late Late Show." There is no enemy camp in the deep-down Allen.

As a final thought, there's a bigniph on lush special events in the remote-from-Coast premiere today (Wed.) of Judy Garland's Warner starrer, "A Star Is Born," the first of such fullblown klieg galas on tv and "Tonight" has it tonight. This is the stuff out of which a late-night click can be born. That and, of course, such top stuff as Lena Horne and the other juicy pactings over the formative weeks.

But NBC better watch for the irritant factor on the burgeoning participating plug parade. Trau.

gave the new medium its first pair of long pants, and its first touch of bigtime.

Berle, since these early days, has had a change of format and a change of sponsor, transferring from its early vaudeo to its present-situation comedy, policy.

Since his first season, Berle has also, unfortunately, followed a pattern in his opening shows. The desire to make a good impression, has rarely worked out on his seasonal preems. Instead, Berle had to get over the initial nervousness, and as the season got underway, he gave out that kind of show that helped him get the kingsized Nielsens.

This season's starter is no exception. Many of the stunts planned for this edition didn't come off, and the care and detail lavished on the show failed to make itself evident. However, should earlier history repeat, he'll find his metier as the season rolls along.

Berle, now on vi w alternate weeks, has added another permanent character, that of Nancy Walker, who plays the president of Berle's fan club. There was a slight plot in which Berle tried to frame a publicity stunt in which he breaks a leg. In this connection, he had Dorothy Kllgallen, the Journal-American's syndicated columnist, and radio columnist of the same sheet, Jack O'Brian, who did brief guesties.

Having found out the hard way that their Sunday night combination of Fred Waring musicals and cocasional telepix weren't strong enough to overcome the audience appeal of NBC's "Philco—God-year Playhouse" General Electric and BBD&O are going all-out in their drive for a place in the Sunday-at-9 sun with this new drama series. Among the more notable facets of the new "fight fire with fire" series are a drive for-star names (Jack Benny, Joan Crawford and Henry Fonda are among the names pencilled in for future productions; Gene Tierney, slated for her videbut on the preem, had to bow out because of illness), originations from either Coast to take better advantage of star availabilities and the original notion of mixing live shows with vidpix shot by Revue Productions; Gene Tierney, slated for her videbut on the preem, and to bow out because of illness), originations from either Coast to take better advantage of star availabilities and the original notion of mixing live shows with vidpix shot by Revue Productions (thus taking additional advantage of star availabilities and the original notion of mixing live shows with vidpix shot by Revue Productions (thus taking additional advantage of reruns for the 13 summer weeks). Not that the GE series will gain by default. For the MCA-packaged, Mort Abraham-produced series, judging by the preem, demonstrates a keen awareness of good dramatic values, along with fine production knowhow. It's certain to bring out some topnotch entries this fall.

First attempt had the virtue of a fine cast, good direction and a theme that though written about 160 years ago is still fresh. But it was a case of compressing too much into too little time: "Nora," the title of George Bellak's adaptation of Ibsen's drama about a married woman's long-delayed declaration of independence, suffered by virtue of the exaggerations necessary to compress a 'subtly developed drama in the short space of a half-hour. Bellak succeeded in establishing Nora's need for independence, but in doing so left his characters flat. and one-dimensional.

Phyllis Thaxter, who came in as a last-minute replacement for Miss Tierney, did well by her title role, bringing out the inner conflict of the mature woman who's treated as a child by her condescending husband. Luther Adler also managed to convey the character of the heavy with a conscience who create the household crisis and upon solving it sets up the new dilemma of Nora's independence. Patric Knowles came out the worst as the husband, for his many-sided personality simply couldn't be developed in its proper perspective in the half-hour. Don Medford's direction was excellent; Abraham's production values ditto.

Ronald Reagan's permanent host on the series, and is also pencilled in as GE's production supervisor. He's a gracious guy who endows the show with class and dignity. Don (Mr. Wizard) Herbert has taken over the half-time institutional ("progress is our most important product") commercials and did an entertaining and informative job of showing the development of the modern dynamic speaker.

Some of the greats were batting it around last Friday night on KTTV when Eddie Cantor pinned this posey on Harry Richman; "the this posey on harry Attenman; "the man who wore Broadway in his lapel." It's not to say that Richman is singing as good as, he ever did, as one well-wisher at the Moulin Rouge mike overstated, but that he's still a great entertainer and pours every song from the heart is not to be gainsaid. Even nature is no respector of great talent and the vocal chords can take only so much. But it can be noted that the rawages of time have taken little toll of his other theatric qualities that have so long endeared him to the scene. tackle a new one, "Hey There," in a park bench tableaux as if to prove that his technique is not rusted.

The "heart line" opened wide when he sentimentalized on "that old gang of mine," giving impressionistic takeoffs on Al Jolson Eddle Cantor, Sophie Tucker and his very own "Your Broadway and Mine." At the piano his fingers fly just as fast as ever. He was offstage only long enough to allow Jack Stanley's Dixieland sextet to wham over a rouser and the Encores harmonizing on a sprightly bouncer.

For a finish that wrapped up the show with gloss and glitter, Cantor and Bob Hope gagged around the mike like they would at a Friar roast. They also stidled up to the mike out front, a half-hour prolog in the film premiere tradition, to send Richman on his way to an untried facet of show business, his own TV show. In the foyer festivities Ida Cantor broke out in a song salute, "I'm Just Wild About Harry."

If KTTV liked the looks of the first one, syndication will follow. The cry of "roll 'em' should he sounding soon.

backers and given CBS-TV a solid edge in the early Saturday night rating sweepstakes. Only change was some added poundage gained by Gleason during his convalescence and summer layoff, but that didn't abate his energy, and if he keeps up the way he started off, it won't be long before he's down to the trim lines of last year. If anything, the first show was better than any of last year's, the reason being that Gleason Enterprises and CBS were wise enough to take a clicko phase of the program and expand it to the point where it took up most of the opening show. This, if course, is "The Honeymooners" segment, and although it was used as the basis of some shows last season, it's never been used to the extent of last Saturday's show, nor has it been used more effectively.

Save for the June Taylor dancers' opening sequence, along with Gleason's intro and his final standup thankyous, entire hour was a "Honeymooners Special" with a single plot unbroken except for commercials and the station break Gleason's quintet of writers served him up with some solid comedy sequences in this installment, and the comedy backing by the superh Art Carney and the standout Audrey Meadows was more than up to snuff.

He develops the inevitable toothache, and there's a riot at the finale when his on-camera bite results in a victual stampede by the howling Gleason. But plot considerations aside—though there was enough substance in this one to carry it for the hour—it's those kitchen scenes with Miss Meadows and Carney's unpredictable characterizations that supply the solid laughs throughout. Gleason supplied an added touch for the opening show with some intra-trade yocks, getting his manager, Bulleting to the dentist as "Dr. Durgom," and calling him "The mad butcher of Bensonhurst." and also calling another character as Hubbell Budweiser in an obvious reference to CBS-TV program veep Hubbell Robinson.

following the breakup of the longrunning and successful Max Liebman-Caesar-Imogene Coca Saturday night "Show of Shows" display, was kept under wraps as one of the major trade secrets of the

are that Caesar, NBC and the three participating sponsors seem to have got themselves a whale of a show. Pursuing the upbeated trend among comics, to deemphasize the variety format in favor of "book shows" (as evidenced by the Jackie Gleason, Milton Berle, Martha Raye displays, among others), Caesar, with a major assist from guestar Gina Lollobrigida, the Italian femme fatale, and from two ex. "Show of Shows" reliables, Carl Reiner and Howard Morris, made the transition with flying colors. It was an hour of comedy that did credit to the ambitious overhauling of the NBC-TV Monday night schedule which now finds "Caesar's Hour" and the "Medic" as a formidable and qualitative back-to-back brace of entries. Coupled with the one-a-month Fred Coe-produced spectaculars (for which Caesar and "Medic", will, be preempted) it could well turn the tide in upsetting the heretofore undisputed CBS-TV Monday night's sock getaway belongs to the quartet of writers, three of whom (Mel Tolkin, Tony Webster and Joe Stein). camped out in the "Show of Shows" pastures and thus are familiar with the Caesar touch-and-go. The fourth, Aaron Ruben, fugitive from the Milton Berle show, is anything but a slouch. In fact, it's to Caesar's credit that he had the wisdom to surround himself, with as enviable a flock of showmen as the comedic rosters on the tv spectrum can boast. Clark Jones, the director, earned his multiple-striped chevrons for his camera work on the "Hit Parade"; Leo Morgan, the -producer, is one of the established vets among fun shows; Hal Janis, exec producer, dittoed on "Show of Shows." And Bernie Green as musical director rendered an assist on Monday night's preem (notably in one dream sequence between Caesar and the beaut from abroad in which Green toyed around with a variation on Beethoven's Fifth) that rates him a full set of NBC chimes. Caesar's new format is described as a "comedy show ranging from stire to broad comedy, with music, dancing and occasional guest stars." That's a tall order to bring in on a high note of f affairs department with a page out of the Navajo Indian's tragic book. Produced as a joint effort with the American Museum of Natural History, the series, not the least of which is the thorough job done by Charles Collingwood as the narrator, bids for accolades almost every time it goes to bat.

Last Sunday's (26) opener, a filmed documentary credited to CBScience reporter Robert Northshield (along with technical crew and guides), was a bitter—often depressing—piece pegged around the Navajo tribal Indian's "medicine man" culture versus "progress" profferred him by the white man, with negligible success thus far. His culture, rituals, way of life and means of earning his bread on the vast reservation spreading over Utah and Arlzona—these were deftly subordinated to a back-andforth main theme revolving around a 'Navajo infant dying of diarrhea as he fay in his mother's arms. This and other diseases to which the Navajo is heir (pneumonia, tuberculosis) were punctuated in film and covering narrative by a combination of remarkable passages in the text and striking, compelling shots of tribal life and customs, including exercising rituals under the "medicine man" civilization.

awesomeness into the word "spec-tacular" on Saturday night (25) when, as his second spec of the season and the first in his one-aseason and the first in his one-amonth Oldsmobile-sponsored Saturday night series, he put on the widely-ballied tv version of "Lady in the Dark." Artistically it was a triumph, for the production had taste and dignity, was wholly adult and had a grand sweep that probably set NBC and the sponsor back a cool $500,000. But once again the new series of the most handsomely mounted and beautiful shows ever to grace a tv screen (particularly as seen in color), yet somewhere along the line in the mechanics of putting together a production to outshine all productions, the essence of the fantave of "Lady in the Dark" was diffused.

Max Liebman put a new kind of wesomeness into the word "specacular" on Saturday night (25) when, as his second spec of the eason and the first in his one-anonth Oldsmobile-sponsored Saturday night series, he put on the videly-ballied tv version of "Lady in the Dark." Artistically it was triumable for the production had triumable

ing.

But for all his fine technical correlation, Liebman's major lack was in failing to establish the necessary mood. At this stage of the game, he is an astute enough showman to realize that, within ty's confines (in contrast to the stage) you just cannot overwhelm an audience with a bedazzling display of color and infinite costume and scenic changes without confusion. Perhaps al' these elements cannot be retained except within the framework of a variety show, for a mood is more elusive and requires a less pretentious approach and a more subtle simplicity.

Liebman took full advantage of the opening "One Life to Live" number with its delightful dance of the ragamuffins; or the wedding dream sequence in which Bambi Linn and Rod Alexander and the bridesmaids danced so exquisitely; or again the elaborate circus dream sequence was color tv at its best. Miss Sothern's rendition of "My Ship" was superior to her other vocal attempts, for in the simple lyrical song her voice was adequate, but unfortunately not up to the intricacles of the Weill score generally. Carleton Carpenter played the ex-Danny Kaye legit role of the swish photographer with a verve and a bounce and may have contributed some pleasurable moments to those who never saw Kaye perform in the role. Robert Fortier as Randy Carver, the film idol, was far from inspired casting. James Daly, Paul McGrath, Shepperd Strudwick, Luella Gear were cast in straight dramatic roles and were adequate.

The coin-no-object dressup of the show even incuded installing Lee Bowman in a theatre box for the entractes and intros of, the commercials, which, incidentally, gave Oldsmobile three elaborate scenes in the color extravaganza.

It's unfortunate that in this fantastic medium of tv (and now color tv) it may be necessary to have $500,000 "experiments" before the perfect spec can be brought home. This certainly wasn't it, but from a standpoint of opulence and beauty Liebman hit the mark his second time up.

Carl Sandburg's epic poem, "The People, Yes," was a stirring experience as presented on WCBS-TV's "Camera Three" last Sakurday (25).
The 1936 prose-poem, by now a modern classic, stands up well with time. Its homely philosophies, amusing revelations and brave sentiments still ring true. Dramatic reading Saturday was done extremely well by a carefully-chosen quartet of actors-readers, to bring out the fine religious as well asreally patriotic quality of the work.
Sitting around a bare stage on high stools, alternating in reading, passages, lines and even part-sentence phrases, the simple, sincere and often eloquent approach of the artists completely offset the somewhat static quality of the presentation. Cast knew its lines so well that it was more recitation than reading, to make the event more vivid, dramatic and moving.
The static format was further relieved by films of average Americans, by a frequent guitar accompaniment, by an occasional interpolation of a folk-ballad that was sung, and by several pertinent comments from moderator James Macandrew.
Earle Hyman, Jean Stapleton, Gerald Sarraci and Michael Kane were fine choices for the reading, being sympathetic and forceful as well as skilled. Jard Reed lent the unobtrusive guitar accompaniment and some appealing ballad singing.
Whole event was a tribute to WCBS-TV's pubservice bent and the work of the State Education
Dept., U, of the State of N.Y.

WCCO-TV, Minneapolis

Teeoff of this football season show, starring Murray Warmouth, the new U. of Minnesota football coach, found the participants seemingly hard-pressed to fill the 60 minutes in a mannef to sustain interest. The program dragged somewhat and probably was too big a dose for even the most avid pigskin fans. However, subsequent shows will include the films of the preceding day's Minnesota football games—the general public's only chance to see them on the airwaves inasmuch as no Gopher contest will be televised live this season—and that means the hour will pass more quickly and interestingly for the area's football lovers who tune in. who tune in.

A vast amount of interest attaches here to any new Minnesota gridiron tutor, of course, because football assumes monumental importance in the local scheme of things. That goes double in the case of Warmouth, who came here a virtual unknown for the general run of fans and was a surprise choice to succeed the popular Wes Fesler after the latter resigned to become a radio station executive.

resire after the latter resigned to become a radio station executive. Those watching the show's preem probably felt that the new coach lacks the camera glamor and sparkle of his predecessor who also had his own tv shows during the football seasons. But Warmouth must have landed solidly just the same because of his apparent sincerity, friendliness, knowledge the game, obvious determination to make good and win games, candor, honesty and eagerness that made themselves felt over the air. He rates plenty good looking for femme viewers; possesses an effective airwave voice, and is sufficiently adept and quick at word slinging. While rather restrained and quiet in manner he still handles himself okay.

KGO-TV, San Francisco
Dean Maddox's amateur show has been a radio veteran here for over a decade. This fall it has switched stations and the opening show was the first local simulcast in San Francisco instory. In that respect it is noteworthy, but the immediate result of the premier performance was to raise the question: "Why put a radio show on tv unless you can offer something visual?"
As it now stands, "Amateur Show" suffered from the same fault as did the radio show, namely the heaviness of emcee Maddox's humor and personality. This was further heightened by the fact that he was seen only behind a sort of pulpit on the top of which were his notes. He was dressed in a dark blue suit and wore thick tortose-shelled glasses. The effect was funereal. Maddox is fundamentally too good a showman to let this continue, but the opening night presentation of the emcee was as light and airy as molasses.

In addition, the amateurs were never given the break of closeuper and no attempt was made to utilize the facilities of tv in presenting them. They merely came out stagether and did their bit and went back. Questioning of the competitors by Maddox was awkward. They stood on the stage alone while he remained behind the pulpit so they necessarily had to shout to answer his questions. Rafe.

The opening show (Sept. 18) suffered a bit from the fact that there was little to discuss except the game that had just ended and there were no guests to bat around football lore with Nevers. However, he has the vocal ease and confidence that comes from knowing what he is talking about and his comments on the game, football in general and reminiscences of his days at Stanford under Pof Warmer made interesting listening.

Visually, the show left something to be desired. The Nevers sit in a living room set and chat, which gives it a rather static format. Mrs. Nevers, articulate and charming on her own, set the tone of the show by saying that she thought she and the audience could pick 'em as well as the experts and proceeded to suggest that a weekly scoreboard be kept to see how she and the viewers did against Ernie and other experts who are slated to appear. The show was pitched towards the wife, who apparently is staying home from the game. Mrs. Nevers asked the questions and Ernie answered them. They used Consensus reports from Insand AP and seem to have a tie-in with the afternoon paper, the Call-Bulletin.

Despite a little opening show

Despite a little opening show loose ends, this program could jell quickly and provide a bright spot on Saturday screens and if Nevers continues to improve as a visual personality, he should become an important factor in tv sports here-best teres.

The transference of a cafe show to video is a delicate project. The major object is getting the feeling of a floorshow on the screen, otherwise it can be a succession of acts. Certainly Lou Walters, the Latin Quarter impresario, seemed stymied in his attempt to impart the fine Parisienne flavor of his Broadway spot. The costumes were almost motherhubbardish the way they covered up the femmes, and the spicy special material that gives added zest to the proceedings were scissored so that the LQ elements weren't as fullbodied as they could easily have been.

For its premiere on "Colgate Comedy Hour on NBC-TV Sunday (26), the Latin Quarter Revue tried very hard to have something for everybody especially with Look's presentation of its All-American Baseball team. The added spice in the way of Joe E. Lewis, Johnnie Ray and other elements in the show, contributed heartily to the proceedings. But in a case like Joe E, he needs the surroundings of a nitery where mature people congregate in order to get the maximum response. He's one guy that shouldn't be restricted as to time and subject matter or degree of sobriety. Any restrictions and the pixishness and zaminess just hide in some hidden recess. He's got to have a lot of time for his voomvoom-vooms and his special brand of asides. But even with all these restrictions, he managed to get a maximum out of a burlesque on "Rag Mop."

Ray's turn was somewhat spoiled by the inclusion of bobbysoxers in maximum out of a burlesque on "Rag Mop."

Ray's turn was somewhat spoiled by the inclusion of bobbysoxers in the audience. The screaming delinquents contribute very little to the stature of a singer, and they frequently interfere with the reception by home audiences. Ray's best numbers were "Meaning of Love" and "Walkin! My Baby Back Home." The reason for his quick climb a couple of years ago is best exhibited by the way he did these tunes.

Jane Morgan was decorative dressing. Her translations of English into French were pleasant. However, this revue served to intro probably one of the flashiest acts in show biz, The Ashtons, six boys and a girl doing risley. Their formations, catches and tricks are unbelievable. The production was good, but they it show signs of emasculation. It's the same show as seen at the cafe, but the cutting eliminated flavor as well.

The other major element was the exhibit of the Look selections along with a peek at the Giants team. Cleveland members were cut in from that city. Harry Wismer did the gabbing on this session.

However, it was evident from the show that there are tremendous possibilities in cafe units. They can be done successfully. There remains the feeling that if the Latin Quarter Revue were sold as a straight musical presentation on video, it would have fared better than its sales as a cafe spec. The musical elements were fine, but its cafe aspects didn't come off.

Rest of the show added up to an excellent layout. The Obernkirchen Children's Choir from Germany opened the stanza with their charming version of "The Happy Wanderer" and closed the hour with "The Star Spangled Banner." Also registering solidly was Harry Belafonte in a galypso number, "Hold Him, Joe," and a folk-styled composition, "Mark Twain," which made clever use of rear-screen projection.

Sam Levenson, who appears intermittently on "Toast," delivered another chapter of his childhood reminiscences. Theme for the night was child training in economics and he plucked all the memory strings for a good laugh score.

Los Chavales de Espagna (The Kids From Spain), who will return to the Waldorf-Astoria, N.Y., for another stand this week, were given a long showcasing in several instrumental and vocal numbers. Best was the sequence with flamenco dancer Trini Reyes. The other numbers needed an intimate touch which failed to come across the video screen. A mambo routine was executed in flashy style by Augie and Marge to round out the show.

Dr. Frank C. Baxter, the English Literature prof at the U. of Southern Cal. has returned to : CBS: "Egghead Sunday" arena after a brief absence. Show originates in Hollywood. The prof is now in a new time, at 3 o'clock, back-to-back with the 60-minute "Adventure," another Columbia gem from its seemingly cavernous storehouse of educationalers.

Without any hint of compromise with his lofty ideals, the splendid figure of the man, a tv litry titan for sure, went to work on Shakespeare's sonnets as the first course. When he got through, what with that one-easy-lesson via charts, models and mss.—plus a thoroughly delightful example of English as she should be spoke—the mechanics of lambic pentameter, so much so-what gobbledy-gook at school, suddenly came alive with a new vibrancy. When he teed off on the Bard's beat, rhythm and rhyme (nothing to it, just three pairs of quatrains with a couplet for the 14-line punch), he was a troubador in scholar's clothing. Baxter is boffo.

"Guilty Is the Stranger," a Tad Mosel script presented by the Goodyear Playhouse over NBC-TV Sunday (26), managed to squeeze a good deal of suspense and emotion out of a rather thin story, thanks in part to a couple of excellent performances.

This wasn't Mosel at his best, but even so he contributed a play of considerable dramatic impact and human understanding. Show lagged in spots and wasn't wholly convincing in others. Yet it carried a wallop and built up to a telling climax, brilliantly acted by Paul Newman.

Story was about a stranger who dropped in on the mother and flance of a soldier killed in the war. The boy represented himself as the dead man's friend, and was received accordingly by the mother. But the girl is suspicious and eventually unmasks him as a fraud. Twist at the end had her regretting her discovery.

Newman gave the boy's part a moverful interpretation that was moving even though it lacked sympathy. He was a crude, uneducated youth, doing penance for leaving a buddy to die on the battlefield. His final confession, done in effective closeup, had the quality of great drama and was extremely well handled. Fay Bainter as the mother offered a sensitive portrayal in a difficult part. Pat Crowley played the girl, lonely and resentful of the stranger's intrusion. She caught hemood of the play perfectly and contributed importantly. Joe Foley as her father, still mourning for a long-dead wife, had an impressive bit.

DRAMATIC NEWS

United States Steel Hour named TV's outstanding drama show... starts second season on ABC

One dramatic show that stands head and shoulders above all the others in television is United States Steel's outstanding Tuesday night drama on ABC. Produced by the Theatre Guild and directed with that knowing Alex Segal touch, the United States Steel Hour has won the coveted "Emmy" award, TV Guide's Gold Medal Award and many more. In other words, it has walked away with most of the top honors. And ABC, too, has walked away with an honor—the opportunity of again bringing this inspired dramatic program to television for its second season.

WATV's Multi-Lingual Schedule, With Accept on Italo Telecasts

Plans are now being discussed to give WATV, Newark, a strong foreign language program schedule, built primarily around Italo telecasts. Deal, it's understood, will see two or three hours of Italian aired five ayems weekly, this being by far the greatest amount of former law to the control of the control o by lar the greatest amount of the great in la nguage tv programming ever to be done by one of the N.Y. metropolitan area's seven video stations. In the meantime, the station has added several new shows to its regular lineup.

Until now the only regular foreign language tw'er done in N.Y. has been on WOR-TV, and that show, in Spanish, switched just this last week to WATV because the General Teleradio station had no place to put it with the advent of its new "Million Dollar Movie" slottings. Switching titles from "Spanish Hour" to WATV's "The Spanish Show," the Don Passante-produced stanza began last Sunday (26), adding a half-hour to its original 60, minutes via WOR.

Reported dickering with WATY for the ayem Italo block is a "large producer of Italian radio shows in N.Y." N.Y. is full of foreign language radio, and a number of the trade felt it was only a matter of time before either the Italian or Spanish-speaking segments of N.Y. had gained sufficiently in twittength to warrant special video programming. Both of these groups are strong minorities in the city, and as indicated by the number of "Spanish Hour" bankrollers, draw extensive sponsor support. There are already four advertisers in the WATY Latino telecast.

Viewers also heard that Caesarian operations, necessary in 25 deliveries out of 1,000, are performed with the greatest precision and that life expectancy has increased 22 years since 1900.

Witnessing of the actual removal of the baby—a girl, weighing seven pounds, three ounces—was followed quickly by the big dramatic moment of the program. It was the baby's first utterance, a squall, and joyful to the viewers. The cry was heard also by the mother who was anesthetized with a spinal injection and aware of the happenings. The doctor, in hushed tones, called it "a routine Caesarian."

CBS-TV's 'Crash, Robot & Tornado'

Come October, CBS-TV's Sunday television air will be punctuated with auto crashes, tornadoes and robot machines as part of an all-film series shot at 26 universities to show their contribution to public welfare and the search for human betterment as evidenced in their researches. Launching of "The Search" on Oct. 17 in the 4:30 to 5 berth comes after about two years of the web's "tooling up" for "Operation Campus," with a series of midstream changes that at one point indicated scrapping of the elaborate project.

"tooling up", for "Operation Campus," with a series of midstream changes that at one point indicated scrapping of the elaborate project.

"Search" was taken in hand by Irving Gitlin some time ago and thus he's producer of the 'U' package under a two-pronged CBS function—as director of public affairs, a post to which he was named recently in the consolidation of that department to embrace both radio and tv.

Stanzas until the year's end already have taken concrete form, leading off with 'U. of Iowa's researches on stuttering followed on the 24th by Texas U.'s documents on tornadoes, on the 31st by Cornell's findings on auto crashes, Nov 14 by a folklore piece filmed at U. of Arkansas, and on the 21st by a showcaser covering robot machines of the future as per the researches at M.I.T. Other schools involved in the 1954 "brain" operation are U. of C. at Berkeley, U. of Chicago, Yale, Texas A & M. Johns Hopkins and Fordham, and during '55 "Search" will display the advances made on given subjects by Ohio State, Harvard, Minnesota, Michigan, Princeton, Tulane, Colorado School of Mines, NYU, Illinois and UCLA, with additional films researched and scripted at St. Louis U., Wayne, U. of Penna, and Alr Univ.

The "actors" are limited to profs, students and research personnel in spot actuality reports, and the narrator will be Charles Romine, described as "a new tv personality specially selected for the series," who's been traveling with film crews to the various schools, along with writers, directors, et al.

Folds; 'Economic Reasons'

Hollywood, Sept. 28.

U. of Southern California has closed down its educational television station, KTHE—Channel 28 —"for economic reasons." School took over station, started late last year by the Allan Hancock Foundation when Capt. Hancock resigned last June from USC Board of Trustees. It was simply a case of the university "running out of money," according to a spokesman. Meanwhile, "Families Are First," a family program which has had the backing of 18 Southern California organizations during its tenure on KTHE, is being kept alive by Mrs. Florence Thalheimer, producer-moderator and educational director of station, while negotiations are on with both national networks and local stations to continue program on a commercial basis.

"I don't believe it's development that has any importance as far as we're concerned," RCA toper asserted in reply to a query on toll tv which was obviously prompted by the recent revival of interest in financial and other circles in the subject touched off by the Skiatron petition to the FCC two weeks back seeking approval for pay-as-you-see tv.

In his regular speech Folsom reported that RCA's volume during July and August was 5% better than the same months last year. Much of his remarks was concerned with color tv and he predicted the day when virtually every American home will have a tint receiver. He said by Jan. 1, 1955 82 stations will be equipped for colorcasting covering an area that embraces 87% of the nation's tv homes, and that by 1959, 95% of all homes are expected to be try homes, and that by 1959, 95% of all homes are expected to be covered by color.

With Eve Arden handing out the homework assignments, going to school would probably be fun. At least that's the impression given by CBS' "Our Miss Brooks" series, which resumed over radio Sunday (26). As show's title character, a smalltown schoolmarm, Miss Arden goes through her paces in a breezy and humorous manner that's a sure pleaser.

Opening show was broadcast from the War Memorial Opera House in conjunction with the annual observance of "I Am an American Day" and offered the usual Standard blend of classical and light classical vocal and strumental music.

Highlight of the program was the premiere of Carmen Dragon's "I Am an American" based on the prize winning essay (given last year by Voice of Firestone) by Elizabeth Ellen Evans which was adapted to the music of Dragon by Michaelis. Gal, with her fullblown pipes and individual styling, has the equipment to provide Sabbath eve listening with some much needed new excitements. Sympathetically backed by the Falls-Jones instrumental group, Miss Jackson gave out with four songs for a potent showcase of her range and warmth. Her robust handling of "Didn't it Rain" in jump tempo, backgrounded by the Jack Halloran quartet, was an special treat. And her version of the Lord's Prayer was a fitting finale to a pleasing 25 minutes.

Pace changers were furnished by the vocal group with a bright runthrough of the "Little Shoemaker." Miss Jackson's between-tunes palaver with Halloran, scripted by Studs Terkel, neatly captured the gal's infectious personality.

Not as authoritative, but effective for the purpose intended, was Sue Oakland's stint; she's a Barnard grad (at 18, indicating girl prodigy schooling) who studied Russian, and her questions touched on the period when Atkinson was also Moscow correspondent for the Times. Atkinson answered to the query that "if Helen Hayes is the first lady of the theatre" that in his opinion Alfred Lunt "the first gentleman" of the ditto. He named his current No. 1 choices in drama, "All Summer Long"), musical ("Pajama Game") and comedy ("King of Hearts"). There's no logrolling between Ora and Brooks. Atkinson and Jean and Walter Kerr, but a healthy fraternal association apparently exists between the top drama oracles of the two top standard morning dailles in N. Y. Atkinson likened Russia's famed ballet to the Radio City Music Hall brand; cited "the unhappy post" of any critic in Russian, be it one of painting, the ballet or the drama, because he (the critic) must conform to political ideologies; he cited his first suspicions of Russia's war-like attitude to America, even in 1945-46, directly after the defeat of Hitler & Co.

The McCrarys should spell their engineer on the obtrusive "Manhattan" (Rodgers & Hart) "theme song" which is now their signature signoff, it's too forte, and in fact needless, especially at the stage that Atkinson was doing his wrapup,

Herman Hickman was caught in his 10-minute sportscast act last week (22), six months to the day after his five-a-night teeoffer on WCBS, the N. Y. aural anchor of CBS. The amplitudinous ex-star athiete and grid coach (Yale) doesn't have to modulate that Tennessee (Univ. of) twang of his since the warmth of that regional accent rides niftilly along in tandem with his sports savvy. The scholarly Hickman is no mere disherupper of the scores (they can get a staff announcer for that chore) but a featurette provider with a faultless approach to the articulation department and a happy way with a human interest yarm.

Last week Hickman was engaged largely with the baseball firmament—natch!—that'll keep him well supplied until the world series is wiped off the boards by the football crazola. And, of course, the player who turned mentor knows that game from the ground up. The Hickman text is real cute, though not unprecedentedly so, in that there's no perceptible pause for the sponsorial pitch. It reads right through, with here and there a cue from leftfield, as Hickman doubles on the Shell game for the oil outfit on his All-American list. This season marks his 23rd on radio, a record that few AM-ers can match, so it's no wonder that he's got the formula down pat. Benny's not one for a change. A looksee at his cast shows that Mary Livingstone has been with his from the start, Don Wilson is in his 21st year with the show, Eddi his 21st year with the show, Eddi (Rochester) Anderson is in his 17th, Dennis Day his 15th, The Sportsmen their ninth and Bob Crosby, the youngster in the troupe, hi third. Even the opening show plotline remains the same. It was mostly about what they did on vacation. Day, for example, has been coming to studio every week and singing his heart out despite no audience. Technique of piling one laugh line on top of another is virtually a Benny monopoly and they know how to dish it out for him. For instance, Bob Crosby starts the ball rolling saying he'd been at brother Bing's place and it's an odds-on favorite to become a state before Hawaii. Then Benny comes in with "that means that Gary (Crosby) will probably go to Washington as a Senator." certs commentary technique which has increased his local popularity and won financial support from town's businessmen for his moppet series. He is completely natural, and, without "talking down" to his listeners, he rounds out the musical selections with interesting factual and background information. There are pleasing humorous touches throughout his comments, tossed in naturally and sans visible effort to amuse. He translates the world's great music in terms of everyday experiences, and manages to remain colloquial without sacrificing dignity.

Mitchell, along with station manager and producer Robert Rogers, have cannily chosen the middle level of symphonic music, rather than strictly longhair; Station alreadys counts most of capital's ardent music lovers amongst its listeners. an old program...some salt and pepper ...and a nickel...

Some six years and 271 broadcasts after its first appearance on the air STUDIO ONE ended its program on a note of rigid tension. Seconds later telephone switchboards of stations across the country turned into a mass of dotted lights as a flood of excited tributes from viewers poured through the wires for two hours.

Pive days earlier on the premiere of the same sponsor's newest show, THE BEST OF BROADWAY, a pair of salt and pepper shakers shaped like the familiar Westinghouse Laundromat and clothes dryer was offered free to any member of the television audience who attended a product demonstration at a Westinghouse dealer. Dealers reported the public "beating down our doors."

During his Friday morning program of the week before, Garry Moore, on the impulse of the moment, asked his viewers to send a nickel in the mail "just for nothing" to a woman in the studio audience. At the last count 130,000 letters containing nickels as well as larger sums had arrived at her home in Mt. Pleasant, Mich.

These three incidents provide the latest evidence of television's amazing power to generate excitement and action with almost any kind of program—new or old, lavish or modest, night-time or daytime.

They also demonstrate the validity of a basic policy of CBS Television programming: to build into every program the greatest values for its advertisers by bringing to it the best possible production skill and creative effort.

It is a policy that jams switchboards, produces nickels, sells home appliances.

It attracts larger advertising investments than any other single medium.

Explanation offered by several net execs is that the web, in its buildup for the fall, had overexpanded in many departments to the point where it was topheavy, not only in execs, but in necessary operating personnel. That explains the timing of the lopofts, with all that personnel needed for the season's bow, but unnecessary for the rest of the time. This means that 10 of the 20 local spots on "Tonight" were snapped up in advance of the debut Monday night (27). Canfield Beverages and Max Factor Cosmetics each cut themselves in for a weekly blurb. Geo. BarenBregge New WABD Chief Vice Knight

Norman Knight quit as general anager of WABD, DuMont's Norman Knight quit as genera; manager of WABD, DuMont's N. Y. o&o, and George L. Baren-Bregge, who's been sales chief for WDTY, the web's o&o in Pittsburgh, is in as his replacement. The moves occurred in rapid succession late last week, after Knight announced his intentions, which came as a surprise to all but a few top network execs.

Knight, with WABD since July of last year, is moving into a top managerial post with an out-of-town station, but he declined to name it until he actually sets a date of departure from DuMont, expected sometime between Nov. 1-15. BarenBregge spent most of his professional career in Pittsburgh, as sales manager for KQV and then in the similar WDTV post. Earlier he also held a sales job with WJAS.

Esso's Longterm Deal On Pitt Weather Strip Pittsburgh, Sept. 28.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 28.
Esso has just signed a longterm deal with WDTV for a five-minute weather strip on Channel 2 every evening at 6 o'clock Monday through Friday. It'll come off the first part of the Buzz 'n' Bill show but they'll pick up the time at the end with the disappearance of "Viz Quiz," long a five-minute feature at 6:25, after several years. Buzz 'n' Bill as a result keep their full 25 minutes as in the past except on Friday when Ray Scott telecasts "Sports Editor" at 6:25.

AFTRA Laying Groundwork For New Web Pacts

Execs of the American Federation of Television & Radio Artists have begun laying the groundwork for negotiations of a new network contract to replace the current one that expires Nov. 15. Although negotiations haven't begun yet, AFTRA has already mapped certain demands agreed upon at the union's national convention in August in Detroit and is planning to submit others to its membership by the end of the month.

A pair of dramatic aces plays to a full house on ABC. The Motorola TV Hour (produced by ABC) was one of television's shining dramatic hours last season. Paired on alternate weeks with the distinguished United States Steel Hour, ABC's companion drama quickly dominated Tuesday evenings. No wonder sharp-penciled Y & R and Elgin Watches played this ace in the whole week and grabbed the show, the time, and the network—and this year the TV Hour, sponsored by Elgin, will-again help make Tuesday evenings on ABC a must for viewers.

Because of its one-shot strait-facket, tv cannot hope to achieve the importance, review-wise, as obtains in legit and films, with the oritics placed in that "make or break" position vis-a-vis the investment put into Broadway and Hollywood properties. But in a general way, television reviews are reduced even further in value under "Operation Lobby" wherein N. Y. to-Hollywood busybodies use devious methods to influence the notices. At the very least, the premiere of a series can be valuable when the critics are qualified to offer guideposts for the future in reviews bearing no outside influences. Radio historians will undoubtedly emphasize the role played by Klauber in the formulation of CBS news policies, which in 1938 and 1939, on the brink of World War II, were widely esteemed as the most farsighted precepts. Klauber fostered Paul White and Edward R. Murrow, among others, and insisted that CBS had no news comentators, just news analysts. mentators, just news analysts.

There were those who considered this a distinction without a difference. Throughout this period Klauber remained a little-known figure of authority (Paley was not paying too much attention to CBS in those days) who put in long hours shut off in his office. Nobody knew much about his private life. He seemed to live a reclusive existence with an invalid wife. She died in 1943 and in 1945 Klauber married again. again

CBS finally wanted out from Klauber's somewhat martinet style of administration. His services were recognized in a generous lifetime pension. It has generally been assumed that had Klauber restricted of CBS his personality. been assumed that had nature re-mained at CBS his personality, would have forced Kesten and others of the latterday top echelon to quit, something Paley could not then afford. Even today when old-timers at CBS indulge in retrospection there is considerable de-hate about the net contributions to CBS growth made by Klauber. He was a hard man to love because of was a hard man to love because of, his austerity of manner and "perfectionism" tendencies plus an almost total absence of humor, but he had a core of oldtimers who gave him much credit for his qualities as an organizer and administrator and declare that in respect to certain "public interest" questions his penetration as a thinfor his penetration as a thinker was deep.

Chicago, Sept. 28.
In one of the few instances on record where a bankroller dropped at v show before it hit the air because the association had controversial overtones, the Peter Hand Brewery here quietly checked out of its deal for Ziv's "Corliss Archer" vidpix series which was scheduled to start Oct. 6 on WNBQ.

scheduled to start Oct. 6 on WNBQ.
Sudsmaker, not anxious to ruf-fle any public relation feathers, asked and received its release from the Ziv deal after one of the local tv columnists fingerpointed in a lengthy piece the tleup between the beer maker and the telepic involving teenage characters. Client and BBD&O, it agency, are shopping around for another series to put in the Saturday night 10 o'clock slot it has on order at WNBQ. slot it has on order at WNBQ. United Television Programs new "Mayor Of the Town" is under-stood to have the inside track.

"Mayor Of the Town" is understood to have the inside track.

Incident is a classic example of the difficulties of trying to please everybody. Brewery bought "Archer" in the first place as a replacement for "Boston Blackie" because it figured that beer and cops and robbers aren't a good combination. Before it bought the situation comedy, BBD&O checked the audience characteristics of the series in its AM version and found that its listenership was predominately middleaged. Then as a further step, the agency asked the tw writers on the four Chi dailies their opinion of a beer firm sponsoring the series.

Ethel Daccardo of the Daily News, which doesn't accept beer and liquor lineage, gave her reply in her column some six weeks before the show was due to start. She gave it the full crusading treatment, playing up the teenage and beer angle. So lest there be any concern in anyone's mind that the brewery is interested in the teenage beer market, the firm decided to bow out and seek another property.

cided to bow out and seen another property.

Ziv, meanwhile, came out all right, selling the "Archer" series to Oscar Meyer meatpacking firm in three markets—Chicago, Madison and Davenport.

Montreal and Toronto, a feat hitherto impossible.

Big stumbling block to national sponsorship in Canada has been the Montreal-Toronto situation, where the single-station market obtains, much in the fashion of the prefreeze American situation. Canadian Broadcasting Corp. controls the stations in Montreal and Toronto, and for the time being, no competitive grants are in sight. With both stations SRO (and with a long waiting list) it's been a tough problem for advertisers to clear time in the two markets. And without Montreal and Toronto, most Canadian advertisers won't buy a national spot spread, just as a network or national spot spread would be inconceivable to most U.S. national advertisers were New York and Los Angeles omitted.

this week set details of one of the tins week set details of one of the most ambitious longrange produc-tion programs in telepix history and at the same time came up with a revolutionary distribution pat-tern which MPTV topper Matty Fox said is the key to "economic survival" in the syndication field.

Distribution of some 50 properties to be produced over the next. 10 years will be handled through a newly formed independent company, UM&M, which will operate with MPTV on a contractual basis under which it will handle syndication on a percentage basis and will blanket the country with some 200 "resident salesmen" and district supervisors, covering virtually every market on a day-to-day basis. It's a two-way exclusivity deal, under which MPTV will release through no other company, and UM&M will handle distribution of MPTV properties only.

New distribution outfit, which

UM&M will handle distribution of MPTV properties only.

New distribution outfit, which will have some 200 salesmen and 23 district supervisors, is a combination of United Film Service, Motion Picture Advertisers Service and Minot TV (hence the UM&M corporate title). UFS and MPAS have operated in the sale and production of theatrical commercials for over 30 years, maintaining resident salesmen in some 150 cities and servicing some 30,000 advertisers. UFS and MPAS will of course continue in the theatrical field independently (they've both been in the black since they started in business), but will pool their facilities with Minot for television activities under the UM&M hanner. Minot prexy Charles Amory negotiated the new setup with Fox.

Low-Cost Coverage-

Low-Cost Coverage

Importance of the distribution operation—and Fox states emphatically that other telepix operations will have to come up with similar distribution arrangements if they're to survive—is the fact that UM&M provides blanket coverage of every market and every major advertiser (the UFS and MPAS rosters include the big national advertisers as well as the corner stores) at relatively low cost. Once a syndicator gets past the top 40 or 50 markets, Fox points out, cost of sales zooms to as high as 75% of the gross price of the show. UM&M, which is working on a straight percentage of the gross, will sell those smaller markets at a cost no greater than the normal selling expense incurred in the top 50 markets by the average distrib.

KTLA's studios at the former KTLA's studios at the former Warner Sunset lot acquired by Paramount will be remodeled beginning Nov. 1, with the reconstruction program to cost $2,000,000, according to Klaus Landsberg, v.p. of Paramount Television and manager of the channel. Landsberg has devised engineering innovations for inclusion in plans of the new studios on the 10-acre site which is the future home of Paramount Television Productions and KTLA. Among these are a peripheral type batten lighting system, and a centralized plan in which all electronic equipment has been designed as a central core. Latest of the "ghost stages" to undergo the metamorphosis is Warnner Bros. The talent agencies, who hold more than a comfortable hold more than a comfortable hold live video, have moved more importantly in the vidfilm field, and up to now show signs of domination in that industry. The major offices have already set up production distribution, syndication units and exercise a good deal of control over the output because of their hold on headliners, directors, producers and writers.

Although vidfilms are still in the growing stages, the control of these offices is considerable and there's every indication that their hold on the industry will increase in time. With the opening of more vidstations, especially now that the FCC is anxious to get the industry going in ultra-high, the percenteries will play an increasingly important role in the development of the field.

Naturally, considerable opposition has been set up by such out-

Naturally, considerable opposi-Naturally, considerable opposition has been set up by such outfits—as. Ziv and others which do their own production and distribution. However, these indies and film studios now in tele production still have to come to the agencies to get their stars, and frequently stories, directors, etc. Therefore it's evident that the majors have a stake in virtually every vidfilmer now covering the markets.

The major portion of the agency control is contained in Music Corp. of America and the William Morris Agency. Each of these offices now derive a major portion of their considerable revenues from the tele industry, both live and film. Income from the latter seems to be increasing at a rapid gait, inasmuch as many in position to demand terrific returns have been thinking along the lines of residuals, subsequent runs, etc., all of which means that income will be rolling in for a long time after they have made the film. Thus when looks and popularity have faded, they'll still be taking in loot.

At Music Corp. of America which has set up Revue Productions as its production arm, probably the largest assortment of their own telefilms is on the market. MCA has a comfortable lead in this respect via their own productions of "City Detective," "Pepsi Cola Playhouse," "Chevron Theatre," Guy Lombardo Show, "Biff Baker, USA," "The Westerner," Ray Milland show, the Robert Cummings Show recently sold to Winston, "Heinz Playhouse," "Hollywood Theatre," the filmed portion of the General Electric show, "Mickey Spillane Show, "Pride of the Family," and the Joan Blondell (Continued on page 44)

Sinn Sets 6 New Vidpixers for Ziv

Ziv Television Programs prexy
John Sinn returned from the Coast last week after setting plans for the production of six new syndicated shows during the coming year. While not revealing the names of the properties, Sinn said they'd embrace the musical comedy, situation comedy and panel show formats

Sinn said the upbeat in production is due to expanded sales during the past 18 months. Ziv's sales volume, he said, has jumped by 68% during that period. New series, Sinn stated, will be shot in color, as per Ziv's usual policy. Although shooting in color will add heavily to production costs, he added, the tint treatment insures "a residual income not available to black and white films which will be dated the day that the first color television set rolls off the mass production line."

VARIETY'S weekly chart of city-by-city ratings of syndicated and national spot film covers 40 to 60 cities reported by American Research Bureau on a monthly basis. Cities will be rotated each week, with the 10 top-rated film shows listed in each case, and their competition shown opposite. All ratings are furnished by ARB, based on the latest reports.

This VARIETY chart represents a gathering of all pertinent information about film in each market, which can be used by distributors, agencies, stations and clients as an aid in determining the effectiveness of a filmed show in the specific market. Attention should be paid to time—day and time factors, since sets-in-use and audience composition vary according to time slot, i.e., a Saturday afternoon children's show, with a low rating, may have a large share and an audience composed largely of children, with corresponding results for the sponsor aiming at the children's market. Abbreviations and symbols are as follows: (Adv.), adventure; (Ch), children's; (Co), comedy; (Dr), drama; (Doc), documentary; (Mus), musical; (Myst), mystery; (Q), quis; (Sp), sports; (W), western; (Wom), women's. Numbered symbols next to station call letters represent the station's channel; all channels above 13 are UHF. Those ad agencies listed as distributors-rep the national spot sponsor for whom the film is aired.

"Studio 57" is one of Heinz's first video ventures. To get the kind of coverage wanted, bankroller latched on to an estimated 19-20 markets via DuMont and another 13 or so through a national spot booking. A Revue production (an MCA subsid), the half-hour vidpic stanza is just one of several dramatic anthologies made by that company.

Bowing installment for the pickle-maker was a meller, "Ring Once for Death." With John Howard and Emlen Davies as the leads, the story begins in Hong Kong, where the couple, a doctor and his wife, have returned after 20 years of married life. There they make a visit to merchant Sam Kee, only to find that the elder is dead and the son has taken over. The son (Keye Luke) peddles them a clapperless crystal bell, with the warning that if it's again mated with elapper it has the power when rung to restore people to life—but for each life given another is taken. Unknown to all, for the time being, the doctor's wife is carrying that clapper as part of a crystal neckpiece sold her by the departed both parts of the bell would ever be brought together again.

Right off, it restores the life of the new merchant's small child, but takes the life of an old man. Then tracing with an uninspired touch, writer Lawrence Kimble, adapting the Robert Arthur story, has duo return to America, where ultimately they believe their own son is killed in an auto accident. Just as the mother is about to bring the ghostly clapper to the bell to receive the one she believes her son (at the risk of whom else she knows not), her son appears. The dead man was a thief. In her surprise, she drops the beat mace the mode of the permade we haven for the state of the permade we haven for the state of the permade we haven for the state of the permade we haven for the take men and the state of the permade we haven for the state of the permade we have for the state of the permade we haven for the state of the permade we haven for the state of the permade we haven for the state surprise, she drops the bell and it is shattered.

A wiser choice than the incredible "Ring Once for Death" could have been made by Maxon for the Heinz starter. The stanza wasn't particularly well-written or too smoothly directed, and hence failed to conjure up suspense. The cast struggled against the unnaturalness of their parts. Dealing in these unperceptive histrionics promoted a cheapness that became connected with the entire show.

Heinz made an immediately evident mistake in shooting their commercials. In addition to letting him handle the selling, the sponsor came up with an unctuous anouncer, who was out of place serving also as host to the drama. Shots of the food products themselves during the commercials were handled well.

After nine years on radio, "The Falcon" switches over to the visual medium as another entry in the package with plenty of action and a well-developed plot line.

Charles McGraw plays the Fal-

a well-developed plot line.
Charles McGraw plays the Falcon, U.S. Intelligence officer whose assignments take him abroad. He is sent to Vienna in the initialer, where he's detailed to investigate the disappearance of large Government shipments of the desperately-needed drug, terramycin, which he discovers have been hijacked by a black market ring.

As projected in the moving Gene Wang teleplay, McGraw's sleuthing takes him into contact with the gang and his skin is saved only by the last-minute appearance of the Army major with whom he's been working undercover. Major's secretary is the one who's been tipping off the gang anent dates and routes of shipments. McGraw puts a maximum of punch into his characterization and is a good choice for part. Suzanne Tafel scores as the secretary, John Damler rates okay mention in major role, Fred Essler is convincing as a black market contact and Kurt Katch shows menace as leader and executioner of the ring. Greta Granstedt is impressive, also, in a brief role, mother of a dying boy who needs the drug.

Bernard L. Schubert produces with a view to catching the proper atmosphere and Paul Landres' direction is hard-hitting and realistic. Editing by Warren Adams is fast and lenser Kenneth Peach's angles effective.

'Corliss' Canada Spread

Ziv's "Corliss Archer" series has been set by An-Canada Television in eight Canadian markets via a cosponsorship deal with B. C. Packers and S.O.S. Sponsors, via the James Lovick agency, has set the series for 52 weeks in Sydney, St. John, Kingston, amilton, Kitchener, London, Regina and Saskaton.

Sponsors will go into additional markets as time opens.

HYMAN RESOLVES FAIRBANKS DEALS

Eliot Hyman's Associated Artists, which several weeks ago completed the financing of the 1955 crop of "Douglas Fairbanks Presents" telefilms and set the customary deal with Rheingold for key markets with AA distribbing elsewhere, last week caught up with the other cycles in the series. It concluded its deal with Interstate under which it takes over distribution of this year's 39 films, and also bought a financial stake in the 1952 series, which is now being distributed by NBC Film Division under the title of Paragon Playhouse.

If its channel 3 signal can cover Montrealand this will be tested by a Canand this will be tested by a Canadian agency within the next two weeks—therein lies a means by which a Canadian outfit can cover the No. 2 market. Similarly, WGR-TV in Buffalo has demonstrated its power to cover Toronto. Procedure would then be for the Canadian bankroller to buy Buffalo and Montpelier, then buying on a spot basis all the other Canadian outlets he wants, since the others don't have the clearance problems that exist in Toronto and Montreal.

Fox's commitment with UM&M is to supply five new series (at least three of them to be half-hour shows) annually for the next 10 years. For this purpose, he's set up a rotating production fund of $3,000,000. MPTV won't physically produce any of the series itself, but will finance all of them, wholly or in part. It won't take on properties on a straight distribution basis. Scheduled to be turned over to UM&M within the next three weeks are MPTV's eight.current properties, "Janet Dean," "Duffy's Tavern," "Flash Gordon," "Junior Science," "Sherlock Holmes" and "Paris Precinct." Amory, one time Pathe Labs. v.p., formed Minot several months ago and worked out a similar scheme with MPAS and UFS but was hampered by lack of product. He'll naturally act as liaison with MPTV. MPTV will continue to sell its new properties nationally, in conjunction with UM&M, but the latter will handle all regional and local sales. MPTV v.p. Ed Madden will head the national sales operation and coordinate with UM&M, with Lew Kerner continuing as production v.p. on the Coast and veep E. H. Ezzes remaining in charge of the library division. No less important than the low sales cost involved in the new distribution pattern is the number of untapped advertisers it will provide, according to Fox. There are untapped advertisers it will provide, according to Fox. There are thousands of theatrical advertisers who've never used television simply because they haven't been exposed to the fact that'top name properties are available at prices they can easily afford. Resident salesmen who have already sold them theatrical commercials can sell them, on low-cost vidpix, and by nature of living in the town, can work out all manner of cosponsorship arrangements. Moreover, in relation to selling costs, the resident salesman can follow up his initial approach without the expense of flying back and forth from his base of operations to the point where the sales expense nearly equals the gross income.

Economics of syndication are such, Fox points out, that by selling the top 40 or 50 markets, a syndicator can get back up to 75% of his negative costs. But it's those 175 smaller markets that supply the profit on vidpix. And that profit is eaten away by the cost of getting to those smaller markets, if they're gotten to at all. He feels that the UM&M setup will solve the problem for him, and that some similar arrangements will have to be made by other syndicators if they're to stay in busi vide, according to Fox. There are thousands of theatrical advertisers

Contrary to trade belief, the Minot sales have been going well on the one property that UFS and MPAS have been handling. "Hank McCune Show," which was bandied about from distrib to distrib before it landed in Minot's lap, has been sold in over 80 markets in the four months under the Minot banner. UM&M exclusivity deal with MPTV has one exception, which is the current Minot catalog, which it will own and continue to distribute. This will contain three other properties besides "McCune," one of them being "New Orleans Police Department," which MPAS produces itself. The Minot sales force covering the northeast and N. DEAL OR DISK—WHICH RATES?

All-Industry Chart

Wha' hoppened? To that all-industry chart which several of the diskeries regarded with favor and planned to take up at an early meeting.

The gripes are still going on about payola; rigged charts; girls in music stores being candy-gifted to plug or mention that artist or label; secretaries to disk jockeys with similarly loose information (drives) and other its expenses. tion; "drives," and other influences on the deejays themselves.

This is where we came in. If the "charts" are phoney; and if a label, which knows it has 200,000-300,000 in record orders doesn't find itself strategically placed on the charts, it works an economic handicap. The chain-reaction is wellknown by now—it influences radio and tv programming, talent plugging, deejay spottings, and the like.

The Record Industry Assn. of America has an opportunity to become more than a passive trade association where the boys get together on label markings, industry standards, and kindred nice-Nellie projects because a trade association is not supposed to be too vigorous about anything too vital for fear of being accused of "acting in concert."

Well, the "charts" is one concerted move that would be a big plus for the music business at large—writers, publishers, phonograph record companies, artists, deejays, everybody—and the only indictment the industry faces is because of its do-nothingness about it.

The RIAA has passed word on to VARIETY about "costs," and the like, but if the trade papers can afford it then certainly the record trade can too. It would at least have the saving grace of uniformity, and a strategic advantage of better policing to circumvent the rigged reports, as crop up from time to time. This would be uniform yardstick, promulgated by the industry's own trade association. All brands then would make sure that Larceny Label (be it from the midwest or Philadelphia) toes the mark.

MGM's Frank Walker said he'd propose it at the RIAA. RCA Victor's Manie Sacks has been repeatedly scorched by the knowledge that his vast sales organization has moved certain platters into the hundreds of thousands onto the dealers' shelves, and has on more than one occasion expressed frustration about "not showing up" when he knows comparative sales statistics.

With the new fall selling season this is perhaps the ideal opportunity for the RIAA to do something other than issue polite bulletins to one another. Abel

SHADY TRICKS

Is the deal more important than the disk? That's the big question mark in the record industry today as the major labels continue to be stymied in many hinterland areas by the shady dealings of a large number of indies on the deejay and distribution level.

Biggest problem facing the ma-jors in their battle against the indie operators centers on launch-ing new talent. Execs at several indie operators centers on launching new talent. Exees at several of the top line diskeries admit that there's never been any trouble getting local distributors and/or dealers to order the established artists, but they've been constantly thwarted when they come up with a disk tyro. Here, they claim, the distrib-dealer holds back, demanding special concessions and deals. It's in this respect that the indies step in and take over. The majors, for the most part, work on a fixed sales, and distribution schedule while the indies operate on a loose and flexible price structure.

Mambo Fever Gripping Chi

Chicago, Sept. 28.

Chicago, Sept. 28.

That mambo fever has gripped the Windy City, and it's reaching the point at which nitery ops convert to mambo joints when other show policies fail. Newest to showcase the jazzed-up Latin beat is the erstwhile Encore Room in the heart of the Loop, now to be known as Mambo City. Boniface Milt Schwartz, who also runs the Preview Lounge downstairs, had tried smart acts and jazz units in the Encore Room and failed to make it click. New policy has the advantage of a lower nut and a cult-type following.

An underground hideaway on South Michigan Ave., the Starlite Room, was probably the first in town to sense the trend and abandoned a small popular band policy some six months ago for mambo units. Room has been doing healthy business ever since.

On West Madison St., whilem stripper stronghold, a large cabaret has been reshaped into a straight mambo dancery which caters largely to the Latino trade.

Future of the nation's danceries, as bandied about at last week's National Ballroom Operator's Assn. conclave here, apparently hinges on whether or not promoters will continue to sell dancing strictly, or if they are willing to make their bandstands double as showcases for a host of other attractions.

Reactionary contingent urged ops to stick to waltzes and foxtrots, to shun the mambo and jazz, and "sell dancing, not entertainment." Reasoning behind this attitude is Reasoning behind this attitude is firstly, that the rooms were conceived initially for dancing and, secondly, that dancing, when it's wanted, is cheaper to buy and sell than name entertainers. Birdland Group Brings Fine Layout To Carnegie Hall But B.O.'s Off

Album Sweepstakes On

Arlen-Capote 'Flowers'

There once was a time when a jazz concert in New York's Carnegie Hall was a rare event. In the past few years, however, this once stald longhair auditorium has been jumping almost once-a-week with jazz bashes. Norman Granz's "Jazz jazz bashes. Norman Granz's "Jazz At The Philharmonic" troupe opened the season Sept. 18 and last Saurday (25) the Birdland concert, under the banner of Kahl Music, rolled into Carnegle Hall for another. double performance at 8:30 p.m. and midnight.

8:30 p.m. and midnight.
While the jazz market is apparently large enough to support a flock of niteries, it's another question whether regular weekly concerts, with a $5 top, can make a go of it. Granz copped capacity crowds for his bash, but the Birdland layout failed to sell about half of the expensive seats, despite a fine layout at the sector mere with 10ts by of performers with lots b.o.

Sarah Vaughan, who recently appeared at the Birdland jivery on Broadway, toplined the jazz bill and delivered over a half-dozen numbers with a vocal technique that seems to be getting more and more intricate. Miss Vaughan can do anything with her pipes, from an Yma Sumac slide from coloratura to bass-baritone to an Ella Fitzgerald scat chorus, and she proves it in virtually every number.

Count Basie's orch provided solid inderpinning to this concert with its swinging music. This crew is probably the best large band around today and features such standout sidemen as Frank Wess and Frank Foster on sax, and Joe Newman on trumpet. The sections hit with remarkable snap and precision in richly textured arrangements. Basie orch opened the show with a brace of instrumentals and also backed Billie Holiday and Miss Yughan on the vocals. Miss Holiday, who closed the first half of the show, is still an impressive stylist, although her vocal equipment is not what it used to be.

For the hipster set, Lester Young, Charlie Parker and the Modern Jazz Quartet rounded out the bill. Young, who used to be a Basie sideman, blew several standout choruses working in front of the big band. Parker, backed by a hythm trio, apparently had an off ight and failed to deliver his susal quota of kicks. The Modern Jazz Quartet, with its delicate sound patterns, is better suited for a small club than this cavernous hall. The Bill. Davis Trio, a Hammond organ combo, registered as crowd-pleasers with its insistent rhythm numbers.

POSITIONS

Hollywood, Sept. 28. Capitol Records, which started in a small backroom in a Vine Street office building a dozen years ago, broke ground Monday (23) for its new $2,000,000 homeoffice structure, the world's first circular building. Prexy Glenn Wallichs, who founded the firm with Johnny Mercer and the late Buddy De Sylva, operated a small tractor, which turned the first shovelful of earth.

A building, 13 stories (limit height in Los Angeles), will be ready for occupancy late in 1955 with Capitol occupying half the space. Remainder is to be rented. Groundbreaking ceremonies were followed by a Glenn Wallichs Day luncheon at the Hotel Roosevelt cosponsored by the Hollywood Advertising Club and Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, Flock of Geejays including Peter Potter, Affarvis, Gene Norman, Dick Haymes, Alex Cooper, Jim Ameche, Bill Leyden, Bill Ballance and Bill Stewart, were on hand to join the creemony.

German Siemens Group Invades Brit. Market With New Disk Label

London, Sept. 21.

A German recording company, controlled by the powerful Siemens group, has formed a subsidiary company to invade the British market. Project is promoted by the Deutsche Gramaphon Geselschaft of Hanover which is mainly active in the longhair field, but whose disks are issued under the Polydor and Heliodor labels.

The new company, with a capitalization of $28,000, is known as Heliodor Records. Managing director of the new outfit is Werner Riemer, managing director and financial veepee of Deutsche Gramaphon, with Alex Herbage as artists & repertoires chief. Latter was formerly with British Decca's artists department and operated Argo classical label for three years before going Into commercial radio.

Heliodor Records will swing

"Stealing" of arrangements in the music biz, unlike lifting of some other performers' routine in the old vaude days, has been an accepted if not wholly legitimate practice for many years in the disk biz. It has been one of the major hazards against an indie company or artist breaking through for a hit. Given the major's superior pressing and distribution facilities, they are in a position to "cover" a potential hit on a minor label with the exact same arrangement and blanket the country.

Typical recent example was Mercury's cut of "Sh-Boom" with the Crew Cuts, which was closely patterned after the Chords' version for the indie Cat label. Latter number also sold considerably, but Mercury walked off with the lion's share of the market. Same situation holds for the South African number, "Skokiaan," which was originally cut by the native Bulawayo Sweet Rhythm Band for London Records, Four or five subsequent versions also featured the soprano sax lead which gave the original its distinctive sound."

A couple of years ago, Sunny Gale turned approximation of the control of th soprano sax lead which gave the original its distinctive sound.

"A couple of years ago, Sunny Gale turned up with "Wheel of Fortune" on an indie label only to be knocked off by a similar version by Kay Starr for Capitol. A reverse twist happened to Miss Starr on "The Breeze," which she cut for a Capitol album. Trudy, Richards followed Miss Starr's version of "The Breeze" note for note for the indie Derby Records which had a relatively good juke sale on that number about two years ago.

Russ Carlyle's recent waxing of 'In a Little Spanish Town," with a reedy arrangment, has now led to several other companies putting out the same number with a similar sound, such as David Carroll's orch for Mercury and Harry Jerome on MGM.

Blasts Copyists.

Jerome on MGM.

Blasts Copyists

Carlyle sounded off against th
"copying" practice, declaring "one used to feel that he had a chance when the public accepted his or her talents and it was worth the years of trying for the goal, for after all it would be expressing yourself. But these days are going fast and something should be, done about it. In many cases now, the original artists, who start a song, may never be heard of again, and the sad part of it is, the public is not aware of what is happening. Actually, they have no reason to care. Regardless, copying is copying and, in my estimation, it's as bad as stealing."

Carlyle's "Spanish Town" platter, incidentally, is now in the unique position of being distributed by two labels, Burgundy Records and Label X, the RCA Victor subsid. Carlyle claims he never made a deal with Burgundy for distribution and subsequently sold his indie-made master to Label X.
Both companies are now handling the platter until there's a legal decision or settlement.

Louis Armstrong's "Satchmo' A Lusty Autobiography

By MIKE GROSS

By MIKE GROSS

Louis Armstrong's autobiography, "Satchmo" (Prentice-Halt; $3.50) is a must for jazz buffs. His total recall of life in New Orleans Is vividy presented and rings with authenticity.

Although his horn is mightler than his pen, book is easy to digest and gives a topnotch historical account of the emergence of jazz as an indigenous American musical form. The book covers the first 22 years of his life running from his days in a New Orleans' orphanage to his joining Joe (King) Oliver's band at Lincoln Gardens, Chicago, in 1922. In between is a candid account of his early tooting, and carousing days. It seems, though, that someone has cleaned up the syntax and websterized the spelling thus losing much of the Satchmo flavor.

Jazzophiles, however, will overlook the syntax and the content The spelling thus losing much of the Satchmo flavor.

Jazzophiles, however, will overlook the style for the content. The story of Armstrong is the history of Armstrong is the history of American jazz and since he's been a giant in the field for more than three decades, it follows that his reminiscences of the New Orleans tailgate band beginnings and the follow-through to Chicago are a 'solid tracking of the jazz trail. He's a bit misty-eyed about New Orleans in the early 1900s but he pulls no punches in describing his gigs in the red light districts, back alley razorblade battles, and association with prosties, pimps and sundry sharpshooters. It's all good background stuff for the kind of music the boys were blowing those days and it never gets in the way of the musical history he's relating. Interspersed throughout a re vivid accounts of such early jazz greats as King Oliver, Kid Ory, Sidney Bechet and Johnny and Baby Dodds. It's all a slick slice of Americana and some enterprising pic producer could work it into a neat historical musical film, cleaning up some of the shady sections, of course.

Armstrong had been writing look (in longhand yet) for the past couple of years and his original text was so voluminous that the P-H editors were forced to do a hefty pruning job to bail it down to 240 pages. Yet, it doesn't seem that anything was left out. Armstrong has promised P-H to bring his story up to date since this edition was a couple of years in the making, there's no telling when the '22 to '54 section of the Satchmo saga will be ready.

name from a major and the indie they generally swing to the indie where the financial risk is smaller. The indies also can swing special cuffo disk deals with the orders, while the majors have found such an operation generally impractical.

It's practically the same story in getting deejay spins. The indies shoot all on their platters turning over a hefty cash outlay for "deejay promotion." Distribs for the majors find it increasingly difficult to get air time without these gratuities. One diskery exec figured that the best way to assure getting a new disk off the ground was to apply an additional $2,000 for promotion to platter's initial outlay. H. claimed that if the distribs in 10 hit-producing areas around the country were given an extra $200 to play with, the record would get enough exposure to start it rolling toward the hit bracket.

BMI Expands Script Service With Name Bios

As an additional facet of its programming service, Broadcast Music Inc. has packaged a new series of "Meet the Artist," for cuffo distribution to radio stations. Series will be made up of indefinite number of 15-minute stanzas, each framed around the biog of a current disk name, either vocalist or bandleader.

BMI has readied 12 scripts on such names as Rosemary Clooney, Frank Sinatra, Hank Williams, The Three Suns and others, and plans to expand the series to cover over 100 disk personalities. With the bi mmentaries, BMI also indicates the musical selections to be spotted. All of these tunes, of course, are BMI.

Inside Stuff—Music

George R. Marek, RCA Victor artists & repertoire chief, had to get special permission from Vatican authorities in Rome to produce sections of Michelangelo's Sistine Chapel fresco in the diskery's album of Verdi's "Requiem," conducted by Arturo Toscamini. Set includes 11 full-page halftone prints of fresco details as illustrations to Marek's liner notes and choral text. The set, issued this fall in commemoration of the 80th anniversary of Verdi's death, was taken from a NBC broadcast in 1951.

In a move to cash in on LeRoy Holmes' disclick, "The High and The Mighty," MGM Records is rushing into market an extended play platter of the maestro's workover of four pic themes, Included on the platter will be "High and Mighty," and the themes from "Rear Window," "President's Lady" and "Battleground." Disk is set for Oct. 8 release.

Disks Pressed On Paper Open New Selling Vistas

heading of a technique of pressing disks on laminated paper. Process, which was kicked off a little less than a year ago by Sight & Sound Enterprises, has now been taken up by the Gothai Recording Corp., and show biz as well as commercial outfits are hopping on the paper disks as a new pro-motion device.

The laminated paper platters are now being designed primarily for postal cards or other mailing devices, but execs of both orgs expect that its incorporation in national mag advertising is in the offing. The paper disks are taken off previously recorded acetates and pressed directly on the paper without eliminating the art work, color or print. It's then laminated to protect the grooves. The paper disks are grooved in 78, 45 or 33 rpm.

According to Gotham execs, the paper disk will replay more than 150 times without any loss of fidelity. Price for production of the paper platters vary with the size of the order. For example, Sight & Sound's tab for a postal card platter runs from 10c each for an order of 50,000.

The paper platter technique already has been used by major automobile companies as sales aides to dealers, by pic companies to push new films, by publishers as trailers for their new copyrights, by disk artists as mailers to their fan clubs, and by ciggle firms which have printed their radio-tv commercials on laminated postal cards for mailings.

The Gotham outfit is headed up by Herbert Moss while Sight & Sound is run by Larry Forray with Floyd Gilbert as account exec.

Rubinstein Stumps For Jazz at Edinburgh Fest; Raps Longhair 'Lifting'

Raps Longhair Lifting'

Edinburgh, Sept. 21.

Artur Rubinstein, top classical pianist, hit headlines here by suggesting there's room in the dignified Edinburgh. International Festival of Music and Drama for jazz. He helieves there is a place in the Festival for one or two serious jazz concerts, separate from the other sections.

"The Americans are taking jazz very seriously," he said. "There is so much money in it. Jazz composers do some marvelous things, and they can achieve a high degree of perfection.

"Some jazz players have amazing technique. They never play a wrong note. We do. I do not know how they manage it."

But there's one field of jazz of which Rubinstein does not approve. He objects to the adaptation of classical melodies to Jazz numbers. He recalled how, after the first World War he tried to induce leading musicians to petition the U. S. Congress to do something to stop it, but he could not get support. Conductors and performers were afraid they would lose contracts if they opposed the prosperous industry of Tin Pan Alley.

Rubinstein dismissed the question of the work involved in adapting a classical tune to jazz. "These people are only doing what I did for my aunts when I was four," he said. "They make more money than the original composers. I doubt if Tchaikovsky made more than £100 out of his Piano Concerto during his life. The man who adapted it has made a million."

Another point, said the pianist, was that people were beginning to know great works only in the jazz adaptations. One day in New York a man refused a record of Rubinstein playing the Tchaikovsky Concerto, remarking to the shop assistant, "I don't like the arrangement."

Runs Into 'Fanny' Release

RCA Victor's commitments to the legit musical, "Fanny," for original cast album promotion via singles from the score, has upset the company's policy of spacing releases by its top artists: Eddie Fisher was assigned to cut the title fune from the Harold Rome "Fanny" score even though Fisher's slice of "I Need You Now" is just starting to take off.

Latter number has already gone over the 500,000 platter sales marker and is still moving fast. Victor execs don't want to slow dow "I Need You Now" but, at the same time, they would like to see Fisher repeat his "Wish You Were Here" legitune click with Fanny," both being Rome compositions. In the meantime, Miller Music of the Big Three, publishers of "I Need You Now," are stepping up their promotion and will continue to lay on the tune until Jan. 1 at least.

Sale of the new Miller package continues the spectacular postmortem popularity of the bandleader. It's estimated that sales of Miller disks, during the past year which also saw his Universal Pictures' biog, "The Glenn Miller Story," helping the platter push, totaled around $5,00,000. With the present set, that will climb to $10,000,000.

Mont'l AGVA Execs Not Joining Jones; Rehearsal Snarl Snuffs Doucet Takes Over as Branch Mgr.

Reports that former American Guild of Variety Artists execs and staff members had quit AGVA to join Dick Jones' rival group were emphatically denied here in Montreal. Situation as to AGVA staffers, however, was almost completely reversed, as Paul Doucet, who had been assistant branch organizer here, had withdrawn his resignation of last week and now has become temporary branch manager. Board member Leo Rive is also expected to withdraw his resignation and present the Montréal situation to the AGVA national board meeting, which convenes Oct. 26 at the Henry Hudson Hotel, N.Y. The only resignation that's still alive is that of Armand Marion, who had been branch manager here.

Dissension was no surprise to local members of AGVA, who have been watching their union fall slowly apart over the past several months because of a top brass hassle and near-indifference by the excutive staff of AGVA to consider the problem of inter-union strife. AGVAites in Quebec province also feel they have been victimized on many counts and are particularly bitter that the current AGVA-AFM dispute should've been dumped in their laps when prior to this fight, which started in the U.S., both unions had worked in harmony.

Talent Market Bullish
Right now the talent market is bullish. Upped receipts should enable the houses to pay for big name U. S. acts and make for the hands-across-the-sea show biz clasp as of yore, Coquatrix broke the lee at the Olympia with Billy Eckstine last year. His acceptance by the Gallic crowds behooves more of the same. Xavier Cugat was socko at the converted Alhambra, and comes back next week for a repeat performance. In the offing are Lionel Hampton, Louis Armstrong, Harry James and Betty Grable.

Arg. Nabe Houses Dread Summer, New Vaude Law

Buenos Aires, Sept. 21.

As spring brings competition from outdoor resorts neighborhood exhibitors here grimly anticipate a financial debacle because of the obligatory vaudeville law. They consider the law has increased partons' tendency to bypass the neighborhood house in favor of the big, uptown deluxe theatres since paying for the unwanted "live" entertainment there at least assures better showmanship in more comfortable surroundings. Thus on weekends and holidays the firstrun uptown houses are turning away. uptown houses are turning away patrons while the nabe houses are patrons while the nabe houses are virtually empty.

Exhibs claim the trouble stems from uniform prices in all except the smallest nabe houses. They hope for scaled prices and rentals according to the quality of the product, giving the same pictures but at lower scales in the suburban districts. but at lower ban districts.

The exhibitors realize that as warmer weather sets in obligatory vaudeville turns will be even less welcome to audiences which are likely to dwindle for seasonal and vacation reasons. Naturally, this does not affect the uptown air-conditioned spots to the same degree.

The vaudeville acts imply all sorts of unforeseen gimmicks for exhibs. For instance, there has been a loud squawk from the Authors' Rights Society (Argentores) on account of very blue material, used by vaude turns in out-of-town distr.' is. This segued into the Entertainment Board's banning monologists until machinery can be set up to censor their scripts and gags. In the meantime, exhibs, not the acts, were held responsible.

Lack of dressing-room facilities is another headache even in firstruns making conditions unpleasant for the talent. There have been cases of improvised dressing-rooms which have to be shared by three turns simultaneously with ushers

The Vaudeville Talent Union recently held a general meeting to discuss these problems, but the time was mostly spent launching diatribes against exhibitors and has been booked to preem formally Oct. 11, with its grind starting the following day. House expects a lengthy run and therefore stopped the Gleason negotiations.

Deal had been in the works for a long time, but hadn't been inked formally. It was understood that Gleason was willing to play the house with a cast that would include Art Carney, Audrey, Meadows, a line routined by June Taylor and possibly the Dorsey Bros. Band. For this profusion of talent, the house would have made a 70-30-10 arrangement, by which Gleason would get 70% of the gate, with the house being guaranteed 10% of the gross as profit.

Par's booker Harry Levine had also been trying to get Eddie Fisher into the house, but all vaude bets are off for the time being because of "Star's" booking.

Vaude has also been knocked out of the Chicago Theatre, Chicago, by the Garland pic. The long-running time made stageshows unfeasible. Paramount expects to resume vaude in that house as soon as the film's run ends, since stageshows provided a healthy margin of profit in this spot.

Currently, the N. Y. Par plans stageshows around the holiday seasons, such as Easter and Christwas—unless, they get other big pix.

Miss Piaf would tour in such towns as Montreal, Boston, San Francisco, Chicago and other major stops with the exception of New York. She's expected to play the Versailles next September.

Ing that tootiers must play for all acts, whether belonging to AGVA or not.

The Casino, at the expiration of its contract after the musicians notified the house that they wouldn't play for AGVA members, took the case to the Labor Board. After hearings, board told that union that it could not specify such a clause and ordered them to renew the contract.

The Musicians Union, here, headed by Walter Murdoch, was an unpopular organization this week after the windup of the Canadian National Exhibition. Because of the enmity between both unions, the CNE was forced to put on a show considerably below its usual quality. The Toronto Daily Mail, among others, had blistering editorials aimed at Murdoch.

Weekend Nitery Bookings Spreading In East; Work Potential On Upbeat

The weekend nitery bookings are + spreading in the east. Some spots New Orleans Swan Room are spending as much for weekend talent as other spots do for a full talent as other spots do for a fun-week. The potential of the part-time nitery is admittedly big, ac-cording to talent agencies, since it is on the upbeat in only one section of the country.

Promising aspect of the part-time cafes lies in the fact that it may lead to full weeks, and if it doesn't then it may induce other spots to attempt a partial nightclub operation.

In the midwest, the general run of nightclub will either have full week shows or none at all. In these sections it's generally feit that the weekend shows tend to destroy its character and fail to give the cafe any kind of identification. In those sections of the country, it's also believed that operation with talent during week-days even when it's slow is necessary, if the house is to be filled over the weekends.

However, a recent tendency in the east is to either darken the spot on the slow days, or to operate that time as a straight restaurant. It's especially prevalent around New York suburban areas or in out-of-the-way spots which depend on the lush weekend traffic to get big crowds. For example, the Boulevard, Elmhurst, L. I., has as its normal policy weekend shows, but occasionally goes in for full week operations. The same situation applies to the Brooklyn spots, the Town & Country and the Elegante. Others include the Casa Seville and El Mombo, Franklin Square, L. I., the Monte Carlo, Little Ferry, N. J.; Rustic Cabin. Englewood Cliffs, N. J.; Boulevard Chalet; North Bergen, N. J., and others.

Many spots are name conscious and will pay top prices. Some agencies have been able to get fullscale salaries for some of the performers on the ground that it's tough travel, and because the seating capacity wouldn't permit them to do less.

The part-time nitery is not a new development, but many of the offices are starting to devote serious attention to them. With employment a fairly scarce item at times, they can't afford to neglect any possibilities, especially some that give promise of becoming important outlets.

Reading, Pa., Sept. 28.

Rain washed out the Reading Fair for three days and caused a 91,688 drop in attendance, compared to 1953 figures. A total of 195,034 passed through the gates compared to 286,723 last year. Adults paid a tab of 75c.

The fair, which opened Sunday, Sept. 12, broke all records with a 46,512 crowd. The rains came on Wednesday and Thursday and again on Sunday (19), normally a big auto race day. The belated signing of the Fontane Sisters, Lanny Ross and Peg Leg Bates for opening night didn't help swell the grandstand, where patrons paid $1 to $2.50 tops. The biggest crowd of the week was for the fair-sponsored beauty contest.

Just what cost Weinger would bear in transferring staffs and casts to Florida isn't known. However, the cost of putting on a show from the southern resort would be considerable. Hotel Pierre, N. Y. Hildegarde & Jack Whiting, with Howard Fenton & Gene Bone; Stanley Melba and Chico-Relli Orchs; $2 and $2.50 couvert.

Hildegarde, "the incomparable" the billing with which her longpersonal manager, Anna Sosenko, endowed her-has been the unpredictable the past two seasons. It focuses around the necessity for a male vis-a-vis. For a sea-son Johnny Johnston was such, ith the blowoff engagement last month in Las Vegas; the Milwaukee chanteuse's Hotel Pierre reopening of the Cotillion Room sees Jack Whiting as her male partner. The unpredictability focuses on the observation whether and why, after more than a decade of socko soloing, Hildegarde felt that she needed somebody in the boy-girl idiom.

The fact that it came off well with Johnston and dittos here with Whiting, of course, best answers any critical captiousness or instrusive appraisal of ephemeral values. Therefore; as a man&woman; song-&dance turn, in the best variety tradition, this certainly comes off well—in spades, because there are two of them.

Hildegarde made an ad lib aside about "no more 40-course banquets," which was a reference to avesteryear VARIETY critique anent the generosity of her wares. With whiting, she errs almost in making it too frugal a meal. In actuality, however, the 45 minutes between the pair is perked with the right paprika for all concerned.

Obviously, in between their statler Hotel (Hartford) break-in the weekend before and the Gotham preem they trimmed, edited and switched—and the shifts are all on the plus side. Before an analysis of the repertoire is essayed it is basic that Stanley Melba, the maestro-impresario of the Pierre, do something about a portable podlum to give Whiting "equal time," as they say in broad-easting circles, in the spotlight. It's not deliberate on the chanteuse's part that the piano rests on a moveable platform which, with its front apron, also affords her an advantageous rostrum position, and that Whiting must terp his terps on the dancefloor flanking that elevated Steinway. Bossman Frank Paget should be able to achieve a like vantage point for the vet song-and-dance man who crowds Dan Healey and Phil Regan as the oldest youngest looking juveniles in show biz.

Both work well. Hildegarde does her prelim chores, and then brings on Whiting as "the king of musical comedy." And when he noblesse-obliges "queen of the brings on Whiting as "the king of musical comedy." And when he noblesse-obliges "queen of the solid his proposed to the cue to throw that out. But these are lesser details. The sum total is highly effective. She pianologs her way to a solid hit. After her audience number with a ringsider—somehow these bits create a customer embarrassment which a gracious performer like Hildegarde should further protect by choosing a younger, and generally more willing partner—she brings on Whiting.

The Jimmy Walkeresque resemblance is a natural in spot like the Plerre. Utilizing "Cousin from Milwaukee," Hildegarde returns to "Wunderbar," serenaded by six fiddles from the Cotillion Strings (under the baton of Robert Norris), thence into "Wien, Wien" (in German), a Vienness waltz pot-pourri, "Why Not Happen to You," another double-number with Whiting, and a good softshoe (straw skimmers, canes "n' all), and a reprise of "All This Is Mine," new ballad credited to Stella Unger (Anna Sosenko did the melody, but purposely unannounced), and other "reprises" the musicomedy manner. manner.

Joanne Gilbert is back at her point of professional incubation and she's still a favored daughter of the Strip habitues, judging from opening-night reception from a packed room. For 30 minutes on the opener she stood mikeside with a good mxture of melodics attuned to her particular talents. Decked out in a white slacked outtit, she bounced into "Putting on the Ritz" a la Harry Richman with high hat and cane and six numbers later was still steaming in a matador number with cape flying. But in between the tempo wasn't so torrid. She uncorked a cutie, "Let's Get Busy," with some special wordage that gave her the opportunity to display a flair for subtle innuendo. Still the best of her repertoire is "Hello, Bluebird," with the soft lilt of a thrush singing to an imaginary pet. "Love Walked In" and "Alouter" provided latitude for romantics and dialectic take-offs, the latter not especially impressive in the Gallic. Idom after hearing some of the real Frenchies who have played this stop.

Long the hq for Gotham's cool music set, Birdland has now fallen into the mambo groove with the showcasing of the Chico O'Farrill orch. The booking isn't too far afield from room's regular policy, however, since O'Farrill is as cool as he is Latino. The orch's repertoire is strictly in the progressive idiom and the chile beat which is peppered throughout gives the hepsters an interesting, and often a stimulating instrumental treat.

With mambo mushrooming around the country, O'Farrill is being groomed by General Artists Corp. as its answer to Muisc Corp. of America's Perez Prado. MCA is way out in front with Prado but it's a big mambo cake and O'Farrill some hefty slices.

It's a big band that O'Farrill is fronting here, perhaps a little too big for the size of this room. His four reed, six brass and six rhythm hit with the kind of sound that almost blasts the customers from their seats. The hefty decibel is the nature of the mambo beat, so the big noise from the podium doesn't come as a surprise to those familiar with the new Latino musical style.

familiar with the new Latino musical style.

O'Farrill is a serious, tense-maestro. He's been a longtime arranger for some of the top dance orchs and the arrangements show that he's an experimental, imaginative musician. He gives each number an interesting south-of-the-border twist and he keeps the mambo devotees rapt all the way. Birdland's setup is strictly for listening but O'Farrill's repertoire indicates that he'll also do well with the mambonicks once he starts hitting the ballroom belt. In all, he dishes out a brand of cool chile that makes the tablers stick around for second helpings.

tifully-gowned headliner. "If You Love Me" is an emotionally romantic mod offering. A change of pace comes with "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" and the diversified repertoire gives full play to her talent and winning personality.

A medley of her film songs includes "Deep in My Heart," "Indian Love Call" and "Rose Marie." "Since Pat Hennessey Moved to Tennessee," although conveying a clever idea, misses somewhat and lags the act's terrific pace. "Calendar Hit Parade" is a smash windup with a song adaptable for every month of the year. It remains for "Auld Lang Syne," depicting New Year's Eve, to make the final moment of the chore memorable as the star walks around the edge of the stage handing the microphone down to diners for snatches of the song. The dramatics involved at the windup finds the gourmets seeking some emotional outlets which results in the ovation to Miss Blyth in heigtime nitery debut. (She made her nitery bow earlier this month in San Diego.)

Jean Carroll is a clever comedienne who scores with rapid-fre jokes. She delivers like a female Henny Youngman. In fact, she uses his song, "It's Later Than You Think," to separate the bon mots, which incidentally can also be heard by Myron Cohen and Sam Levenson. Not just the jokes but hunks of material. Yet, no matter who got it from whom, Miss Carroll's delivery is unique and earns salvos all the way. She is a happy gal, laughing and kidding while belting her special songs and banter.

Orch (11); no cover or minimum.

While the Chordettes are a pleasing femme quartet of barbershop harmoneers, the current layout on this two-framer is weak. The lack of stellar nitery names or talent makes this one a weak sister at the boxoffice.

The tv-talented Chordettes, in a 20-minute stand, perhaps Ill-advisedly throw the ball to the competitive Gaylords by announcing they would sing that group's successful "Little Shoemaker." Their harmony has an interesting chimelike quality as the four belles take seriously and intensely to their chore. The challenge of working in a big Vegas room is evident in the tightness of the quartet but songs like "Mr. Sandman," "I Don't Wanna" and "Mighty Lak A Rose" are well-delivered.

Freddle Ross, a comedian of fair talent, uses bad jokes and material that earns loud reaction and that for the most part finds the boite habitues sitting on their hands. The stuff is altogether too blue for happy consumption. Instead of leaving 'em laughing, he leaves 'em astounded as he winds with a pop song parody that might emerge better were it sent to the cleaners.

Sid Krofft and his unique puppets show, the opening act, its by far the best on the bill. The clever young puppeteer manipulates the strings while dancing with his characters all over the stage. Props and costumes are excellent. The Oriental and mephisto numbers and the Harlem street scene are sound toppers in the hands of this clever young performer.

The Thundrebird Dancers hold over a pair of nice production numbers suung by Barney Rawlings and well-played by the Al Jahns crew.

George White's "Glad to See You" floorshow revue, which stayed at Nick & Arnold's Club Versailles for two years, was about in the same stage as the Mervyn Nelson-produced cavalcade of Dietz & Schwartz production numbers—overboard with ingredients which a little judicious editing was able to cure. "Bon Voyage" is likewise fulsome in its cavalcade of the cream of the crop of a quarter-of-e-century of Dietz & Schwartz tur and it's only a matter of streamling to achieve the same brisk endresults. George White's "Glad to See results.

Opening night saw an alltime hit parade diffused and betimes confused by a "plot" of a sort which seemed to get in the way of the specialists, all of them good and at times socko. Lacking the robust comedy which a Georgie Kaye and Fay DeWitt were capable of delivering, Paul Grey and Louise Hoff, none the less, have their moments. True, they go overboard a bit on the indigo, but the prime hurdle is a slow-momentum pacing. However, once the customers are "with it" they get the message all right, and to healthy results.

Grey is a sort of Anglo-Saxon

Grey is a sort of Anglo-Saxon version of Myron Cohen, with the same high-dome appearance, san the dialectics, although it's not unlikely that Mr. Grey, too, has been burnished in borscht in his show biz antecedents. He has at authoritative audience stance and a knowing style which could be bolstered with a little more of the boffola for a faster getaway. His non-sequitors are not too cerebral, and do get results as he breezes along, but he might accelerate faster with a zingier opening couple of minutes. His 'Ireland must Be Heaven' parody, is a libel against Miami Beach, for all its possible reportorial accuracies on certain aspects. Considering that a large majority of the saloon spenders, especially in a spot like the Versailles, are the regular Florida clientele it's a question of judgment there.

Louise Hoff's "Blue Grass Widow Blues," with its "Come Into the Fields" reprise is likewise not for the Campfire Girls. As the "romanic," couple, both are a little too sophisticated to fit the "plot" where Miss Hoff suposedly bon-voyages, excepting that she remains strikebound in port. The action is keyed to the cavalcade from topflight musical comedies over the past couple of decades.

The program notes nostaglically credit the original terpreters, viz Clifton Webb & Tamara Geva doing "Alone Together" from "Flying Colors" and Tilly Losch as the original of "Dancing in The Dark" from "The Band Wagon"—excepting that here Tommy Wonders (who put on the crack terps) and Margaret Banks are the dancing pair and Rosemary O'Reilly & Don Deliar share the singing chores.

Miss O'Reilly and Denny Desmond, who does a cabbie bit also, click in the Indian number, "We Won't Take It Back" from "Inside USA" (originally Beatrice Lillie & Jack Haley).

Show breaks down into a series of good specialties which are not as defity held together by the "book" but which is a readily corrected element. Wonders' own dances, along with the staging; Anna Andre & Betty Colby's tery specialong her Lati nonsense with Carl Conway all combile into ty; Miss Andre and Dellair in "New Sun In The Sky". Miss Hoffs "A-Broad At Home" saucy monolog; her Lati nonsense with Carl Conway, all combine into a big league revue.

Paradoxically, Dietz & Schwartz's ASCAP medley for the finale is the standout, all participating the reprise of 10 more numbers, topped by "That's Entertainment"—a sort of forerunner to Irving Berlin's "No Business Like Show Business' "No Business Like Show Business' "Schwartz taking a bow from their ringside table.

"Bon Voyage" will have smoother sailing at the S.S. Versailles once the pace is accelerated and the libretto utilized only as an excuse to tie the durable standards together. Salvatore Gioe, the regular meestro, plays the show well and Panchito's rhumbaists continue to make their mark with the maracas. Joe Crosby's costumes also rate a special credit. Abel.

Of the many explanations-which-don't-quite-explain Guy Lombardon's evergeen popularity the most plausible is "nostalgia". He gives out quiet versions of the music of yesteryear. Graying hubby nudges the wife, "Remember dear, the night I proposed?"

So Lombardo is back at the Roosevelt Grill for his 25th season, And opening night the room was jammed, reservations in total confusion, harried waiters mumbling to themselves and a highly literate busboy shaking his head and speaking wonderingly, like everybody e'se, of "the magic name of Lombardo."

The music put out by Lombardo remains his own unique brand. Everything is muted, understated, undemanding upon the customers. Now and them there even a brief hint of hillbilly idom. Sambas there ain't, drive numbers never, open brass practically never, Meantime, the dance floor is invariably crowded by couples who have plainly been practicing monogomy, if not the foxtrot for 20 years and more.

The verve and magic of the routine has been lost and the sophisticated lyrics offered in exchange are not adequate compensation. It would be unfair to suggest that, by revamping her act and jettisoning the dance routines, Miss Thompson is now just another singer. She still possesses, a unique style of presentation and there are occasional reminders of her graceful terping by the effortless way in which she glides across the floor. The poetry of motion is a reminder of things gone by but not full replacement value.

This getup is quite becoming for her opening number, a monolog of a hostess at a cocktail party, but hardly decorative ing for her opening number, a monolog of a hostess at a cocktail party, but hardly decorative enough for some of the other entries. The hostess theme embraces the entire act and has a familiar, slightly venomous ring. Almost every song is in the same sophisticated stylized key, but the most acceptable number is "I Love a Violin," in which each line is repeated by the orchestra and which proves a strong closer to a not-so-strong act. The "Basin Street Blues" and "J'Adore La Nudite," are attractive offbeat entries. The George. Jazz Fever Sweeping All Over Gotham Town: Composer Latest Inn

Jazz is being dished out in hefty helpings around. New York these days. A flock of niteries and eateries in the past year have switched or converted to a jazz policy featuring such varied musical forms as hot, cool and dixieland. The jazz fever has swept all over town—stretching from the eastide's Embers and midtown Broadway's Birdland to Greenwich Village's Eddie Condon's and Nick's. To these perennials have recently bean added Basin Street, Childs Paramount and The Metropole—and all are doing standout business.

The Park Ave. Restaurant is known for having incubated Billy Daniels after he had been around for a number of years without making any headway. Since then there have ben any number of kids who have attempted to repeat that feat. In the current lineup, there are two who are working along stylistic lines. Tony Cordell is the soft-spoken type, and Paul Edwards works the nostalgia route with carbonings of Joison and Cantor and that school of singing. Both are under New Acts.

Then there's the femme contingent, on this show comprising Judy Paul Hunt and Ann Duncan. Both seem to know the ropes of the song circuit. Miss Hunt, a blonde with a busterbrownish haircut, can work the intimeries such as this and has a voice big enough to cover in the larger spots. With the accent now on recording stars and name acts, the Rustic Cabin has shelved its onetime policy of booking top bands. In line with the trend, this spacious Route 9W spot a couple of miles north of N. Y.'s George Washington Bridge has been using disk personalities as regular weekend fare through most of the summer.

Platter names appear to be paying off for the Cabin, for Harry Belafonte drew turnaway biz last week at this roadside rendezvous, which isn't bulging with 1,200 customers. Moreover, the new management of Dave Kaufman and Bob Berg, which acquired the premises from Bill Levine last spring, plans to operate on weekends with disk acts all winter.

erate on weekends with disk acts all winter.

Kaufman, who's bonifaced several cafes on Long Island in the past, estimates that 60% of the Cabin's patrons are Gothamites who make the trek to Jersey via the bridge. While character of the trade is difficult to analyze, Kaufman believes that some of it may have formerly patronized nearby Bill Miller's Riviera, recently razed to make way for the new Palisades Interstate Parkway.

At any rate, the Cabin is making a bid for the Riviera biz with acquisition of Walter Nye's band (exriviera crew) as permanent house orch. In addition, a raised dance floor has been installed remi iscent of that once in use at Miller's old bistro. Drapes are also liberally placed around the room to help provide an intimate atmosphere.

Riverside, Reno Reno, Sept. 16. Sunny Gale, Frank Fontaine, Miss Malta & Co., Riverside Star-lets, Bill Clifford Orch; no cover, $2 minimum.

This is a pleasant-enough variety package which will do well in the theatre-restaurant. Opening night had a younger clientele, and this is about what can be expected for the two-week frame.

Sunny Gale's blues quality and style are always in evidence. Arrangements do not always seem to fit the chanter's style and this is obvious with "Three Coins." Although accompanied by her own conductor and backed by the excellent Bill Clifford outfit, Miss Gale has to wind up her arrangements with backhand motions a times.

Gale has to wind up her arrangements with backhand motions at times.

A medley of theme songs of famous stars is offered, but without mentioning any names. Cafe habitues and show people connect each song properly, but most audiences are completely in the dark as to who is being saluted. The whole medley goes by without the sound of applause, until the finis.

Blond and bouncing, Miss Gale sells best with her disclicks, "Teardrops On My Pillow!" Goodight Sweetheart, Goodnight" and "Smile."

Frank Fontaine is a change of a face (to say the least) from the usual brand of comic who plays here. His sweepstake winner, with the hat over the ears, and a dumb pug face, is hilarious even when he can't be understood. Singer's impreshes are done in one song—a few bars, and sometimes only a few notes, each—which gets an overdone routine out of the way. He checked out a little early opening night and will probably have to plan on staying around an extra five or 10 minutes.

Miss Malta and Co. is an amazing kennel of canines who walk in and out of a cottage door and front gate on cue. One poses as an elephant who balances atop a barrel. A couple of "boxers" stage a round with a knockout, and one prancing mutt has a dachshund on a leash.

round with a kilokavit, and on a leash.

With this fairly light variety show, George Moro has put two ultra-lavish production numbers on both ends. Neither is in keeping with the program itself although both are the usual outstandingly-costumed, brilliantly-choreographed routines. The girls are exquisite in a closing Viennese waltz set and an opening Oriental, slanteyed harem number. But in contrast with the rest of the show, the numbers are heavy.

The Clifford crew is working for same new styles and dance numbers. A vocal combo recruited from the band with Clifford and Betty Joyce sounds good. Mark.

Darmora; lyrics by A. H. Andyman; music by Lew Stone and Orch; $2.35 minimum.

One of the recent editions to the London cabaret scene, Oddenino's Hotel, situated right in the heart of Piccadilly Circus, has made a pitch for the pop trade by offering a fullscale miniature revue with one of the lowest minimum charges in town. The policy seems to be paying off and the current revue opened to a near-capacity turnout.

The production is pleasing without being extravagant. It is slickly paced, although it would be helped by the addition of an emcee to introduce the performers. The costuming is attractive and the presentation has been staged and lit with a professional eye.

The prolog to the cabaret is filled by Odennino's mattre d' de Fay with a presentation of carnations to all femme members of the audience. That's a time-devouring stunt which doesn't add much to the gayety, but seems to please the ladies. From then onwards, however, the production moves, slickly with a couple of charming dance contributions by Greta Unger, a moderate bit of vocalizing by Annette Batam and a firstrate comedy duetting sesh by the Discords. The latter have a polished laugh-provoking routine with their deadpan interpretations of some of the pop classics.

The femme dancing quartet has nearly half the program time and fills it to advantage, although they have a limited range when it comes to vocals. Lew Stone, who moved to this room after a long sesh at the Pigalle in Piccadilly, has done an excellent job with the musical arrangements and takes the backgrounding comfortably in his stride.

In addition to interest payments of $1,600,000, this has been reduced by principal payments of $4,400,000. The chains expended $5,500,000 in equipping 250 theatres for CinemaScope. National's cash position "continues to be strong" in spite of this shelling out of $9,000,000, of which only $1,400,000 was borrowed, reported Skouras.

In the year prior to the divorcement from 20th, National, on a proforma basis, had earnings of $1,877,000 or 68c per share. The first year of independent operation brought the previously stated profit of 91c per share ($2,515,000). When scenes from Par's initial V'Vision pix were shown at demonstrations around the country a few months ago, many tradesters clearly were impressed with the brilliance of the images. The light and resolution achieved in the latest innovation surpass by at least 100% those previous results, it's now claimed. The lens of greater focal length and the doubled lighting produces what is termed the unprecedented clarity which gives the illusion of depth.

Don Philips is a personable youngster who goes one step beyond the routine juggling turnhe does it all perhed atop a unicycle on a small round table. He comes off strongly with a couple of stunts, but overall he's got a lot to learn about pacing, humor and routining.
His best turns are those in which he uses a mouthpiece, both arms and one leg (the other remaining on the pedal). In one case he does this with hoops and a ball, in another it's all balls, with five spinning at once. His bit with the hats is old hat, ditto with the pins. But he can develop the others with profit. Lots more work will eliminate some of the less solid material and some of the stage awkwardness.

Palace, N.Y.
Nightingales are goodlooking femme trio who have toured with Gene. Autry but who haven't been caught on their own. Each possesses a good voice, and they've worked out some interesting harmonics and equally good staging. There's only one thing wrong with their singing—it's too calculated, and lacks spontaneity.
Result is a lukewarm reception on their three numbers, "Sometimes I'm Happy," "Simple Motody" and "Mocking Bird." Although the arrangements are topnotch, giving them an opportunity to display good ensemble work and their individual versatility in solos, the net result is too slick, too carefully planned. Even when they cut loose, as in the latter two numbers, there's an absence of freshness and conviction. Could be that it's the absence of at least one current, pop that gives this impression, but if they'd cut down on the over-arranging and give a little more heart to their umbers, they'd do far better.

Granted that backstopping by the Jimmy Tyler band isn't of an always helpful nature, the Honey Tones are still capable of perpetrating a few musical faux pas of their own. "Tuxedo" proves shrill rendition, possibly because the team hasn't quite overcome its stage fright. The other three numbers are generally okay, but lack distinction.

Good voices are detected among all the girls, but for proper blending they need more seasoning. With that and a shift in choice of music, the Honey Tones should be ready for the bistro circuit.

of admissions. Consequently, the solution, according to many lies in the one-show-anight idea.

With a single display, the operators think they'll be able to get a cover charge, since space will be more desirable and the show crowd may be sold a feeling of exclusivity. Owners have long been afraid to clamp on a convert, but with names playing a single show, this is their chance, they feel.

this is their chance, they feel.

Again, the one-show-nightly idea will attract a lot of players who normally wouldn't consider a cafe date. The easy hours may attract sufficient names to alleviate the headliner shortage to some extent. There's a possibility of getting the toppers at lower prices, but it's admittedly not probable.

The one-show-nightly policy worked out very well for Alan Gale when he operated at Copa City and at the Celebrity Club, N. Y. However, this was done because of Gales peculiar format, which calls for a two-hour show.

Another factor pointing to spread of the single layout lies in the possibility of catering to dinner crowds at lower prices and then getting an equally large house for the late show with talent.

Operators, o far, have only the one example—Gale's. Most would like to see another make good at this project before jumping in.

Current Palace display is equally divided between newcomers and Palace veterans. Combination makes for some freshness, but all told it's a fairly routine layout, though nicely spiced with a variety of different types of acts.

In next-to-closing is Lee Davis, who for as regular a performer as he is here, ought to do something about initiating some changes in his material. He's got some fine outlines in his politico monolog and in his treatise on health and hospitals, but it's becoming a little familiar. As vehicles for his jokes, they'll stand up, but he ought to intro some new material within those vehicles. Otherwise, he's as ingratiating and funny a chap as ever.

Another house regular, but one whose routine permits of less changes, is Ken Whitmer. His instrumental prowess is demonstrated by a visit to the pit, where he plays piano and drums in addition to the onstage violin, trumpet, sax, clarinet, trombine and the inevitable trick cigar and umbrella. It's a pleasing turn throughout, and Whitmer's self-deprecating patter is an added asset.

Two other oldies are the Roy Douglas & Geraldine ventro turn and George Nicolls & Rene's magic stint. In the latter, Nicolls has expanded his cooking routine, to take up most of the turn, but his sleight-of-hand and radio disappearance are still solid. Cooking routine, with a dog emerging from the pot after his mixing all kinds of ingredients, is a socko finale. Rene, his assistant, is a looker and performs a couple of stunts on her own. Song entries are handled by Evelyne Dorat and The Cinq Peres. Former is a well-robed blonde who chirps some w.k. standards but lacks the individuality and stamp to bring her above the others. Gal remains supporting fare. Latter are a group of boys garbed in pastel-colored clothes and harmonizing on various pop and classic numbers. Though voices are well modulated, this group remains strictly Gallic in comie innuendos and, though liked here, does not shape for international tastes. Yves Joly brings bis beguiling puppetry act into this hall for sock results. Here he has a group of umbrellas enacting a love drama on a black background and making the rainshedders become litting and recognizable human types. This goes over fine.

Robert Rocca, a leading chansonnier, handles the comico aspects with some fine material, in which public figures and mores are mercilessly lampooned for aud satisfaction. Then Trenet, with quashed hat and gleaming eyes and teeth, saunters on for a broadside of charm, poetry and fantasy that has the crowd all for him. two numbers, he had the stubholders enjoying the act;

In a 45-minute act, with Jack Lambert handling the batoning and the 88 chores from pit, and accompanied by red-haired looker Angel Marlo for femme-stooge, singer concentrates mainly on tunes from his films.

In a medley from "Show Boat," Miss Marlo joins, him for "Only Make Believe." Keel's rendition of "September Song" is probably highspot of his repertoire, He also joins with Miss Marlo in a neat skit on "Kiss Me Kate," star emerging from behind mirror onstage in full "Kiss Me, Kate" makeup and costume. Miss Marlo's "I Hate Men" gains good mitting.

Jack Simpson reveals yood musicianship with his xylophone, and Albert Burdon, northeast England comedian, brings a team of four stooges to work his w.k. world's worst wizard sketch. He employs a wooden cabinet and much slapstick, overcoming Auld Lang Syne tepidity towards English comedians and garnering average laffs.

Headliners Dinah Washington and Peg Leg Bates, respite sharp performances, have a tough time lifting stubholders out of the doldrums occasioned by a weak supporting card at th Apollo. Bates and Miss Washington appear in that order to close the bill. She maintains her slick reponli. She maintains her slick repetoire, giving out with a success-sion of "Pennies from Heaven,"

"Dream," "Such a Night," "Hurt Anymore," "Love for Sale" and the risque closer, "Long John." Thrush knows what her audience likes. The first three in her tunalog are of the type that gained her-wide acceptance, Yet "Hurt" and "Long John" re strictly for the home crowd, which still savors rhythm and blues. Bates is a hard worker. The one legged performer launches his share of the frame with a workout in "Shiek of Araby." He slows to a shuffle in his next number, finishing it off, however, with some nifty gyrations. As a breather—mostly for himself—Bates idles around the shelf, pitching some polite but ineffectual chatter at pewsters. A challenge routine with his talented supporter, Sammy Green, helps Bates round out the act.

The Honey Tones (reviewed in New Acts) provide mediocre entertainment. Slappy White, who first appeared as a solo comic at the Apollo in June, hasn't changed his monolog sufficiently to get solid laughs in his appearance. The most disturbing value on the current card is the sloppy choreography by the Brownskin Chorus, comprised of eight femmes and two males. Feature work and backstopping by the Jimmy Tyler sidemen is shrill and intrudes.

Second season of this pop music hall shows that it is here to stay. SRO, with chairs in the aisles, is greeting every one of these presentations with the vociferous give-and-take attitude of yore. Crowd is at home and the younger element makes itself known in its tastes. Banding of the Left Bank Existentialist and jazz element, backed by a core of solid staples, makes this a pleasing show. Offbeat balladeer-Mouloudji comes into his own as a topliner this stanza and sidney Bechet registers well with the crowd.

Acro, song and terp acts are neatly ranged to make this a well-balanced affair, with Pierre Bel's virtuoso juggling and the unicycle cavortings of the Naukos (2) standout./(See New Acts.) U. Their rope skipping, candor and precision score heavily. Francis & Julia supply an okay carloca type dance interlude and Count Leroy, U. Recording - remembered Phil Brito is now a local resident and plays this house regularly. The amiable songster sits well with all age-groups, scoring most effectively with the faster-tempoed tunes. He works in clicks he's been associated with as well as current hit paraders to add balance to the layout.

Trumpeter Del Forrest handles

Trumpeter Del Forrest handles the emcee chores in okay fashion and in own slot has them all the way with adroit tootlings. Works in some gags and chatter but sells best when he takes to the instrument to display virtuosity. Another theatre going the music hall way is the Etoile, but present show will not help this become a permanent adjunct to this type of spec, which is regaining lost ground here. Average show off-beat location and tabs militate against this, and there will have to be big names or drastic revamping to make this theatre stay in the vaude groove. Headliner Henri Genes is an ex-chansonnier, long in pix, making his comeback to the boards. Though he has a good pop appeal and routine, it is basically Gallic and he lacks the name for big drawing power. Rest of the show is ill-balanced and doesn't have the flair.

First up are the Meneghetti (2), show is ill-balanced and doesn't have the flair.

First up are the Meneghetti (2), a fair tumble act whose attempts at flippancy are not underwritten by perfection in their acro portion, and hence this is standard. The Vivollys (2) do a laconic fey-mime routine reminiscent of Mack Sennet characters, and get laughs and mitts, but need a better show to offset their offbeat routine. Two singers, Jacqueli Villon and Mathe Altery, are okay in their ofbits; but are misplaced in a pophall. Former is a Left Bank type who shines in caves with her low-life ballads, but is too planted and stationary to make for top music hall projection. More movement and interp are in order. Matter is a soubrette type and soprano activities ar more for musicals. However, gal looks good and gets a nice hand.

The Romanys (2) add the right hall topy in a rest and the side of traction are The Mexican Trio & Dr. Carbajo, an exotically costumed quartet, who give out with folk songs. Good rhythming and song choice make them a neat offbeat addition to the nite scene here and this stint should lead to their being pegged into some botte.

Gaston Lenevyong Crab (20) are only competent without the added boost of uniqueness. Andre Chanu provides the emcee routine, and his only approach is only rou-Mosk. .

Blair's 'Package'

all other intents and purposes with the exception of local programming-personalities, it's a network sales operation. Run of 24 weeklyparticipations (one-minute) go into top local shows, with about 25% of them going into nighttime, the remainder in morning and after-

of them going into nighttime, the remainder in morning and afternoon.

Rating of 43.0

On top of this, Blair has projected such a 24-participations package to a cumulative unduplicated rating of 43.0 per week, with an average frequency of 2.3 times per week. This projection is based on a Nielsen survey prepared for Broadcast Advertising Bureau, in which a one-week run of 21 local announcements in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles produced those results. Blair feels that since these are the most competitive markets and also the most mature in tv, it's fair to project this to the 42 other and less competitive lineups in the group, aside from the fact that the Blair package contains 24 participations instead of the BAB 21. On the basis of these ratings, the package breaks down to a costper-thousand of 49c.

Plan was unveiled at a press luncheon in N.Y. last week by Blair exec v.p. Bob Eastman and prexy John Blair.

Key to the network decline over the past few years has been the fact that so many of its entertainment facets have been absorbed by television with the result that its programming has swung to the staples which can be reproduced by local stations. Accompanying this has been a billings decrease on the part of the nets and a simultaneous with that least and a simultaneous with the televant and a simultaneous with that least and a simultaneous with the televant and the simultaneous with the televant and the simultaneous with upbeat mational spot billings, with national advertisers feeling that local personalities doing the same type of show aired by a network could sell better than the network personality. Some national advertisers and their agencies have advertisers and their agencies have been reluctant to use spot because of the complexities of research, timebuying, contracts, billings, etc. for each market. Since the Blair setup obviates this, it's a good bet that lots more network coin will be diverted to spot.

Lower Filmhouse Taxes Expected in Holland

Amsterdam, Sept. 21.
The long battle between the Dutch government and film tradescems coming to an end. The Mister of the Interior some time ago had fresh negotiations with municipalities about the amusement tax, stressing the fact that a tax of 35% must be considered too high for pix houses.

Several smaller cities and towns thereafter lowered the tax, and now the municipal authorities of the key cities, Amsterdam, Rotterdam and The Hague, have moved ordinances to lower the tax for theatres from 35% to 25%. In all probability this will be accepted. For the Dutch film trade this means a big success scored and a great relief.

Dancing Waters, good variety acts and substantial production.

"Hippodrome" is a rapidly gaited show. In fact, some of the roller-skating numbers have the essential rapidity of a blades display, but with the added advantage of being able to book any kind of vaudeville turn because of the fact that they need not fear locomoting on a slippery surface.

vaudeville turn because of the fact that they need not fear locomoting on a slippery surface.

The production elements are good with Gae Foster, the former regiseur at the Roxy Theare, N. Y., devising the routines. Miss Foster's numbers have a good light texture tht are floor-filling as well as easy to look at. The costuming is frequently lush and picturesque and blends well with the generally light tenor of the show. Sole drawback, at show caught, is the lack of some, heavy comedy. However, that is amply compensated by the light touches given the layout by Al Gordon's Dogs, the Toy Boys (2), and the Impressionaires.

These acts are strategically spotted so that a comedic even is consistent. Gordon's recalcitrant pooches draw a good supply, of yocks and the Toy Boys provide a cute note. These midgets, for merly with the late Paul Remos, perform many of their standard routines and have added a few to meet the requirements of this show. The lowercased performers get along handsomely. The Impressionaires have sufficiently strong voices on their own so that the comedy can be projected in the kingsized spots. They also go over well.

Also in the act sector is The Trio Olympiad, one of the best hand-to-hand trios that's been exhibited in this country. This imported male trio, working in not much more than gilded bodies, do some amazing lifts with scarcely a muscular ripple. For example, one of the tricks has the understander lifting his hands way above his head and holding still while a partner climbs up to a handstand. They do a lot of these amazing stunts, which in many turns would mark the climax of the act. They do these as if they were the easiest tremendous.

The other act on the bill are the Herzogs, two girls on a swinging

One of the most utilitarian aspects of the show is Dancing Waters, the fountain display. This devise being put to some excellent use in "Hippodrome." It not only takes the place of an act or a production number, but it seems able to supplant backdrops as well. Dancing Waters, controlled by a console, is able to provide some striking formations, Blend of lights, music and columns of water, not only make good on its own as an applause getter, but is able to provide some added glitter to some of the production.

Spike Jones is making a laughing stock of himself again. This time around he's hitting the road with a fast, funny and fancy show that combines the best of the agedin-the-wood material from his former "Musical Depreciation" revues with a helping of updated stuff and nonsense that's packaged under the label "Musical Insanities of 1954." The title fits:

Revue's a lead pipe cinch to show to advantage during the long road junket ahead (better than 70 stopovers, winding up at the Flamingo, Las Vegas, and, if anything, should gain added laugh values once the breakin stack is taken up and some of the routines are cut down to size. cut down to size. Production rative hours and 20 minutes opening night and can be tightened to advantage.

Per usual, revue leans heavily on the talents of such regulars as the Wayne-Marlin Trio, Bill King, Freddy Morgan, Bernie Jones, George Rock, Sir Fredric Gas, Peter James and Helen Grayco (Mrs. Spike Jones).

Billy Barty, the mighty midget, is also standout in his (thanks to tv) familiar Liberace routine and impressionistic tintypes of Billy Daniels, Johnnie Ray and James Cagney. Dolores Gay, a newcomer, is the sole hoofer in the show and turns in a brace of fast routines that are easy to take.

Of the City Slickers' new material, biggest yocks are registered by the musical and visual takeoffs on film themes from "High and the Mighty!" "Three Coins in the Fountain," "River of No Return," "Johnny Guitar" and "Moulin Rouge."

George Rock is back with a couple of newly-minted pantywaist routines, "Tm the Captain of the Space Ship," and "God Bless Usall," neither one of which rates with his "Two Front Teeth" of earlier vintage. Withal, selections are well liked.

Strongest entry in the vocal department is Miss Grayco, who reprises her recent waxing (Label X) of "Teach Me Tonight" and "Oop-Shoop" (on the flip side). Pair of closers, "Steam Heat" (from "Pajama" Game") and "Lady Is a Tramp," are whammed across for solid audience response and a begoff finish.

A strong carryover from last seson is the unbilled stylish stout with the kinetic midriff and the highpitched giggles. She's a sharp foil for Spike's ripostes and an amusing patsy for Freddy Morgan's shenanigans during her vocalizing of "Indian Love Call" (with added belches).

Morgan, by the way, teams with Sir Fredric Gas to provide the one-of "Indian Love Call" (with added belches).

Morgan, by the way, teams with Sir Fredric Gas to provide the one-two laugh punch during the show's most rollicking sessions. Always funny, they keep getting better each time around.

Bill King's familiar juggling routines also win an appreciative hand, and the acro antics of the Wayne-Marlin Trio (Glenn Marlin, George Wayne, Dolores Marlin) continue to rate aces with their hoists and bends.

Per usual, the Spike Jones afficionados are treated to offbeat orchestrations of "Hawaiian War Chant," "Cocktalls for Two," "Black Magie" and "Poet and Peasant Overture."

In sum. "Musical Insantities of

"Black Magic and ant Overture."
In sum, "Musical Insanities of 1954" lives up to its billing as "The Craziest Show on Earth." Jona.

SMALL-PARTY BIZ UPSURGE

BERT LYTELL

Bert Lytell was surely one of the best-liked actors of the two generations which his long career in dramatic stock, silent films, radio, Broadway legit and television spanned. At the Lambs Club, in Actors Equity, during the many in-trade crises over which he often had a mediator's role, Bert Lytell was always a useful and respected member of the show biz family.

Having himself so often rendered eulogy to the departed, no-body more obviously rates printed salute now that he has joined the great company than the man whose graceful and tasteful gestures in bereavement were widely appreciated.

Of itself it is not remarkable to know or be known by thousands of persons in so gregarious a world as show biz. Many others have vast acquaintances. Bert Lytell's place is one of almost universal affection. He was not the kind of actor who was always "on." But many of his best qualities and most useful contributions derived from his being so at home with people and before people. He will be very much missed.

Actual production cost of the show is understood to have been about $35,000 in England where about $35,000 in England, where such amounts generally run approximately one-third of Broadway levels. New gimmick has apparently sprung up spontaneously. Certainly, it has not been promoted by the party agents, who are inclined to frown on smaller parties because the commission (if any) does not pay the expenses involved. Agents dare not refuse to handle the small parties, however, for fear of losing the accounts, who also buy full-house benefits.

Interim Stock Policy Flops at Lyceum, Mpls.; Lean Booking Outlook

Lean Booking Outlook

Minneapolis, Sept. 28.
Lyceum Theatre is quitting its
"in-between" dramatic stock policy after only two offerings, "Time of the Cuckoo" and "Raim" (the latter with June March, burley stripper, as guest star). Business has been poor despite newspaper critics' praises, good audience reaction and newspaper editorial urging public support.

Owner Bennie Berger's idea was to try to keep the local legit flagship going with dramatic stock in between the infrequent touring shows. The old Log, successful summer stock operation at a suburban lake resort for 15 years, was installed on a five-nights-a-week basis at $2.50 top: Somewhat similar policy flopped last season at the Nixon, Pittsburgh.

Lyceum is in a bad way for bookings, although the Theatre Guild has promised subscribers six shows this season. Thus far only one, Pienic," has been delivered. "The King and I," which was strongly counted on for a fortnight in November, is now deferring Minneapolis until after its upcoming Chicago run. That may delay it until next season. The only definite bookings at the moment are several two-for-one's, including "The Moon Is Blue" and something called "Naughtie Natalie."

called "Naughtie Natalie."
Legit fare, however, is being served by the U. of Minnesota Theatre, some other college groups, the non-Equity Star Playhouse established in a church here following the recent destruction by fire of its four-wall suburban theatre, and a local theatre-in-theround.

Settlement of differences between Sandy Wilson and Vida Hope, respective author-composer and director of "The Boy Friend," and producers Cy Feuer and Ernest H. Martin may depend on the success or failure of the revue, which opens tomorrow night (Thurs.) at the Royale, N.Y. Wilson and Miss Hope have been barred from the theatre during the last week or so of rehearsals.

Whether or not Wilson's contract with the producers has been violated may be a matter of interpretation. As a member of the Dramatists Guild (he was required to join under the organization's basic contract with the League of N.Y. Theatres), an author has final approval of any and all matters of script changes; casting and selection of director.

Although Wilson's contract with Feuer & Martin for the Broadway production of "Boy Friend" is understood to contain important visions, it is said to retain the script, cast and director provisions intact. Wilson has filed a protest with the Guild on the barring of Miss Hope and him from rehearsals, as well as against allegedly unauthorized cast changes.

But despite the fact that the term.

But despite the fact that the tour has included many one-nighters and that the company has had to work under all sorts of unusual conditions and handicaps. Corey and costars Paul Douglas and Steve Brodle declare they're enjoying the experience. Douglas admits, however, that he'll be glad when the tour ends next April 15.

"It's the sameness that gets monotonous," he said in an interview during the one-week engagement at the Auditorium here. "With most of our engagements one-night stands, you just make a train after the performance, but you don't get much sleep in a sleeper. You get a little more shut-eye in the hotel, but go to the theatre the next night and start all over agai.

"The thing that makes it endurable is the difference in audiences. Believe me, we're certainly glad to settle down in one town for a week. I've got a thunk full of dirty clothes. I'm going to send them out the first thing in the morning."

Just For Practice

That's why the two new works in the recent ballet season were done in practice clothes, sains costumes. Choreographer George Balanchine also drew no fee, keeping expense down further. And new works for opera (like the Menotti "Saint of Bleecker St.") were nixed.

To hold down costs further, and and noin down costs turtner, and make some coin, management plans an innovation with its next ballet season, set for November. It will devofe the several weeks entirely to one show, its last season's big hit, the full-length "Nutcracker." There will thus be no need for ightly changes, extra costs, etc.

ightly changes, extra costs, etc. Fall ballet season just ended drew far better at the b.o. than expected, with about $180,000 on the four weeks, so the management hopes to come out almost even on the run. It also hopes to break even on the operas, between the upcoming season and the tour that follows. Whatever losses management incurs it will ment incurs. it believes it will ment incurs, it believes it will make up on the drama season, due this winter. Under the system in force thus far, the revenue to the charity for the supplementary parties is relatively trifling, as the "donation," as the overage is termed, is usually $1 per ticket, and not more than $2. "As things are going, however, I'll have to install a whole new bookkeeping setup to handle this new business. That'll cost a lot of money, but I have no choice And after all, though, I make enough on the big parties to absorb the increased overhead."

Healthy Step

Healthy Step

Although the party agents are in agreement that the upsurge of small parties is a time-consuming, overhead-increasing development, they generally figure it's a healthy step for them and for the theatre as a whole. As one agent observes, there can't be a reasonable objection that small-party audiences are cold. The smaller groups don't pay prohibitive prices for their tickets and they don't take over a whole house, but are mixed in with a larger audience.

Moreover, it's claimed, the

Moreover, it's claimed, the small-party business represents new patronage for the most part. Also, it's not the sort of patronage that insists on seats in the very first week of only the smash hits, but is willing to contract in advance for a dozen, or more shows to be selected by a party agent as "worthwhile."

Betsy Was Just Prankful, But Equity Disagrees, Sustaining Dismissal

New York.

Editor. VARIETY:

front page of Variety last week concerning my disagreement with the management of "Oh Men, Oh the management of "Oh Men, Oh Women," it is quite right in most of the statements excepting, and I think this is quite important, that tit, became apparent during the Equity Council inquiry, through letters and written statements made by my doctor, that I was not absent from the theatre at any time "unnecessarily." The main objection was to some now well objection was to some—now well known—pranks I played on cer-tain of my fellow actors who did of humor.

I would like to state that I did what I did in a spirit of fun, with no malicious intent, and I had no idea it would ever backfire with such serious consequences.

I would very much appreciate if my above statement could be printed intact, if possible I would so much like a chance to impress upon people that I am not by any means a prospective Lucretia Borgi, but most important, in spite of the indications to the contrary that I am serious and retrary, that I am serious and responsible about my work. I will certainly understand perfectly if you can find no way of getting in "my side" of the story, but it would make me very, very happy if you could.

Betsy von Furstenberg

Equity Okays Firing

Cancellation of Betsy von Fur-stenberg's contract as featured femme lead in "Oh Men, Oh Wom-en" was approved last week by the Actors Equity council. Actress ap-peared before the union's govern-ing board to protest her dismissal from the Cheryl Crawford produc-tion, but her plea was dismissed.

Authorship of "The Clandestine Marriage," opening next Saturday night (2) at the Provincetown Theatre, in Greenwich Village, N. Y., is credited in the program to David Garrick. That is a switch from the traditional billing of the Restoration comedy as having been written in 1766 in collaboration with George Colman, the elder. Amanda Steel and Martha Farran, who are reviving the play under the production auspices of Players Theatre, are being guided in the matter of authorship credit by a recent book, "David Garrick, Dramatists," by Elizabeth P. Stein. The volume claims that evidence indicates that Garrick was sole author.

David Merrick and Joshua Logan, producers of "Fanny," are using a touch of courtliness in filling mail orders for the musical. Tickets sent to advance applicants are enclosed in a card with a drawing of a smalltown French shopkeeper on the cover and the statement, "Your tickets, madame." Folder is arranged so the tickets can be inserted as if being handed by the Frenchman. On the inside of the folder it reads, "We hope you enjoy 'Fanny,'" with the signatures of Merrick and Logan.

Nervous Company
Although Wilson has avoided interviews on the subject, he is known to be afraid to push Guild action against Feuer & Martin or to attempt legal steps, for fear of jeopardizing the critical and boxoffice chances of the musical comedy. Also, he fears that the company, already on the eve of the premiere and presumably more jittery because of the difficulty because of the difficulty because of the author-composer and director and the management, would be hopelessly thrown by additional tension.

The dispute, which had been kept under cover, came to public attention first in a dispatch published in the London Daily Mail of last Thursday (23) by the sheet's drama critic, Cecil Wilson, currently visiting New York. The piece reported the barring of Sandy Wilson and Miss Hope and quoted their rather guarded comments on the situation.

There is any agently no question

There is apparently no question of royalty payments to the author-composer and director, and their billing has not been altered thus far. But both have been excluded from rehearsals, which have reportedly been taken over by Feuer. Both the latter and his partner, Martin, have avoided explanation or comment. or comment.

"Boy Friend," originally done as a sort of cabaret show in London, was expanded and produced in the West End last December, where it is still playing to profitable attendance. It was seen there by Arthur Lewis, production aide to Feuer & Martin, and acquired by the latter for the U.S., with Miss Hope signed to repeat her original staging.

Musical is the The-"Fanny" bowing into the Shubert for a three-week stint to an advance sellout. They wouldn't buy "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" last week at the Nixon, even for twofers, and the Manny Davis production wound up under $10,000. It looks even slimmer this stanza.

House is scaled regularly up to $4.20 ($3.50 plus city and Federal taxes) and a few patrons paid that price. Most of the attendance was at cut-price, however.

"Blondes" also tried giving two evening shows Friday and Saturday instead of the usual matinees, and this may have helped a bit. Although it got one good notice, two poor ones made it tough for the saga of Lordei Lee to get going and there was little bo. action until the weekend. Feeling generally is that the twofers have been overdone here.

For all its evident good intention, "All Summer Long" turns out to be one of those grim dramas of bickering, frustrating family life. It takes place on a dimy-lit stage against an artfully ramshackle exterior-interior house setting, and the unhappy children invariably call their quarrelsome parents "mom" and "dad" and long to "get way" from there.

After nine scenes and $65,000 worth of production, author Robert Anderson's theme turns out to be merely the truisms that a house without love is not a home and that children need affection, understanding and patience. Unfortunately, the presentation of this bronide lends to seem rather static and monotonous as theatre. It's a dim prospect for Broadway, but conceivably might be film material if considerably punched up.

Despite its vigorous characters that react to circumstances and each other (not always with clear motivation) and an affecting basic situation, "All Summer Long" has relatively little incident, but depends on symbolism that isn't sufficiently projected in terms of theatre. So although this new play by the author of "Tea and Sympathy' has commendable, if somewhat studied, qualities, it lacks excitement.

Director Alan Schneider has not been able to inject a sense of movement or depth to this still-life, and the actors are generally left in the position of reiterating a small set of attitudes. John Kerr, who scored a personal click last season in, "Tea and Sympathy," plays on a key of almost unvarying flat understatement as the crippled older brother.

June Walker (Kerr's offstage.

June Walker (Kerr's offstage mother) is as expressive as the role of the doting, foolishly optimistic mom permits, and Ed Begley is alof the dotting, and Ed Begies, mom permits, and Ed Begies, most suspiciously convincing as the most suspiciously convincing hate-filled father hate-filled and appeal most suspiciously convincing as the thick-skinned, hate-filled 'father. Clay Hall is plausible and appealing as the uncomprehending, inanticulate boy; Carroll Baker is acceptable as the mean, shallow older sister, although her emotional scenes seem artificial; John Randolph is suitably direct as the insensitive brother-in-law, and Daniela Boni is believable as the sexconscious moppet neighbor.

Jo Mielziner's scenery is a triumph of dingy foreboding, the clothes designed by Anna Hill Johnstone are properly dowdy, and Albert Hague has supplied the rather consciously atmospheric incidental music. Hobe.

Home Is the Hero

Theatre Guild and Worthington Miner roduction of three act drama by Waller acken. Stars Macken, Peggy Ann Garner, atures Glenda Farrell, J. Pat O'Malley, treeted by Miner, setting, Marvin Reisa L Booth, 'N.Y., Sept. 22, '54; at $4.60.

"Home Is the Hero" exhibits many of the traits if not the grand literary strain of the Irish family dramas of the 1920s. It is put together by a stagewise author-actor,

For New York, it has been given For New York, it has been given a sturdy production and a splendid cast by Worthington Mi If there remains yet some reservations as to its survival in Broadway competition, these go to the core of the question: what does the author have to say? Unfortunately, the play ends logically but on a note of letdown.

Walter Macken, who plays the pivotal character, a domestic dictator and bully, is a veteran of the frish theatre and also a novelist. As a playwright he organizes his scenes and moves his characters for carefully-paced stage action, Resultantly there is a lot of suspense and audience engrossment which makes Macken's third act the more disappointing. He has not said very much when it is all over except that Paddo O'Reilley was a bully to start with and learned from punishment only to become a bully to start with and learned from punishment only to become a teetotalling brawler instead of a boozing brawler.

Paddo is a throughly unpleasant human being whose twin characterizations, self-pity and self-righteausness, evoke in the viewer a desire that he get some emotionally-satisfying comeuppance. He doesn't.

"Home Is the Hero" does not end with the central character changed as a result of the events revealed in the play. Here may lie the best clue to its clouded outled to the product of the events revealed in the play. Here may lie the pest clue to its clouded outled to be the self-pit of the events. The Theatre Guild subscriptions lent performances.

The Theatre Guild subscriptions are now worth about three weeks' support to a play. The Booth is small and operating overhead probably modest for this show. Whether parties, Irish societies and forced draught could keep the show open for a moderate run is a dubious possibility given the either/or realities of the New York legitimate.

Macken's sprint reals of intermate.

Macken's script reeks of interpersonal hostility, since the Central figure hates everybody, including himself. There is, however, a smattering of Irish wit and colorful idiom. Against this, is a surprising lot of Americanisms in the dialog, hinting at the influence of Hollywood films in Ireland since O'Casey's time.

Incidentally, "Home Is the Hero" should make a good picture, since there is abundant scope for clash and suspense.

Of the 10 who comprise the east and suspense.

Of the 10 who comprise the cast, it is difficult without seeming invidiousness to check-list in any given order. Macken himself is a competent actor who makes Paddo thoroughly believable. He does not have the sheer physical size for the bully he plays but he makes up in inner ferocity for the masculinity a Hollywood producer would more visually stereotype. As the pathetic, loving-but-scared wife, Glenda Farrell gives a scrupulously in-character, entirely persuasive, intelligent performance.

Most of the troupers, regardless of the economic verdict, do themselves distinct benefit careerwise. Loretta Leversee, an unknown, may perhaps count on the greatest legup professionally. She plays her love scenes with the lame son of Paddo most beguilingly. Latter role is managed with much light and shade, by Donald Harron, including the melodramatics when son faces father.

reading the menotramatics when son faces father.

Peggy Ann Garner adds stature with this assignment, playing the confused daughter. She, Harron, Miss Farrell and Frances Fuller as the forgiving widow of the murdered man are more or less "straight" in a gallery of Irish pixies, of which J. Pat O'Malley and Art Smith are notable for picturesque etching in the script and theatrical saves in the interpretation. Ann Thomas is also vividly tinted in the tradition of a giggle-water-addicted biddy. The Irish women speak of a journey to the nearby pub as "going for a message."

meany puo as going for a message."

The "modern" Irishman in the script is well played by Christopher Plummer. Well-dressed and of uncertain source of income, he is what the English call a spiv. It makes for a good melodramatic encounter when he returns to encounter Paddo after Paddo has set out to whip his own daughter with a belt. (As respects threatened or actual physical violence there's enough on stage to supply Richard Widmark and Jack Palance at their sadistic peak) •

At a guess, Walter Macken will come up in the next years with a play about which there can be more unreserved praise. Less the poet than some of the Irish dramatists of the previous generation, he seems more of a sheer stage craftsman, Land.

As boxoffice for a short engagement, the Old Vie revival of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" is a proven draw with a huge advance sale. As entertainment, however, it's not so dreamy.

The huge, heavy production, with towering, rococo scenery and opulent costumes, the 60-piece orchestra playing Mendelssohn's lush music, the pointlessly pretty choreography, declamatory playing and deliberate, relentless pace make this an exhausing show. If it's art, it's not much fun.

Probably the 3,612-seat Metropolitan Opera House is an unfortunate place for even so lavish a spectacle. On that enormous stage even the ponderous Robin and Christopher Ironside scenery and the ballet seem lost. And it looks a little ridiculous to see an actor, after reading an exit line, trying to be jaunty as he walks about half a city block to get offstage.

Also, though the well-projected

Also, though the well-projected voices of the actors are invariably audible, something about the accustics of that vast, multi-tiered house makes even the meticulous British enunciation frequently unintelligible. So despite the quick-silver of Shakespeare's verse and the loveliness of Mendelssohn's music, this "Dream" is more imposing than diverting.

Perhaps any realistic production of Shakespeare's uninhibited, somewhat meandering fantasy would seem a bit earth-bound. But this ornate production and the literal performance tends to grind an audience limp. Somehow, there's Just too much of everything.

Michael Benthall's explicit staging seems to accentuate the overpowering tedium, and Robert Helpmann's choreography, which is not so much formal as banal, compounds the impression. As a performer, Helpmann is the outstanding member of the company. If his dancing is no longer spritely, his acting of the Oberon role is vigorous and authoritative.

Moira Shearer offers one expertly decorative dance, and is visually attractive, but her playing seems mechanical and there's something slightly cool and mechanical about the regal magnetism of her Titania, Stanley Holloway is a relax and amusing Bottom within the limits of Shakespeare comedy. There are also competent performances by Philip Guard as Puck and such supporting players as Eliot Makeham, Philip Locke, Daniel Thorndike, Norman Rossington, Michael Redington, Anthony Nicholls, John Dearth, Ann Walford, Patrick MacNee, Terence Longdon and Joan Benham.

There was some question as to whether this musical revival should have an out-of-town breakin or open cold on Broadway. On the basis of its premiere performance here, a cold Broadway opening might have been just that—cold.

years, the story line of "On Your Toes" has become "Down at the Heels."

Show's first number takes longer to get started than a Stanley. Show's first number takes longer to get started than a Stanley. Steamer, with dialog and situations almost as ancient.

However, there is fine dancing, culled from a variety of patterns. Rapid fire motion is the basic choreographic theme, climaxing in the title number, a cleverly conceived and neatly executed ensemble piece.

In for terping laughs, also, is a harem ballet as the first act finale and, of course, the wow "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue" highlight.

Bobby Van bows into the dancing lead lifere impressively. He leaves 'em asking for more on his solo stepping, as well as dueting with Kay Coulter, a personable lass who makes a capable vis-a-vis both vocally and terpwise.

Costar Vera Zorina has effective moments in the "Slaughter" scene and the semi-comic harem ballet. Elaine Stritch sells herself completely with nonchalant comedy reading and punchy song delivery. Nicholas Orloff is amusing as a fading Nijinsky. Joshua Shelley comes through competently as a songwriter; Ben Astar makes a fitting ballet impresario, except for overly thick accent; George Church of the original 1935-36 cast, does good "heavy" work in ballets, and Jack Williams contributes an okay vaude hoofer bit.

Score reprises a list of raves of nearly two decades ago, with undated orchestrations that make the songs nicely listenable. Slight alterations have been made in original lyries to add a more topical flavor and help put the numbers back on the most-played lists. Tunes as whole are skillfully handled, and conductor Salvatore Dell'Isola directs the pit occupants capably. Mounting is a visual treat, with color used unsparingly in both materials and lighting.

If Broadway is willing to accept Toes" as primarily a series of song and dance numbers, it may find a fair enough response. Otherwise, it may be a case of back to the mothballs for this once-great musical comedy.

spring Broadway until the works are thoroughly oil up on the road. It wowed the local first nighters here, and could do the same to the steelier New Yorkers, but not without considerable polishing here.

What it has in common with 'Itch' is that its characters are similar. New York career people caught in the hirresistible impulse to roll in the hay without facing the ensuing responsibilities. On the one hand is a married chemical engineer in New York to push a new wonder drug and, while at it, engage in whatever romantic diversion he can find to replace the prosaic suburban domesticities of his marriage. On the other is his old friend, a career bachelor into whose apartment swarm a procession of career girls on the make. While the situations are often comic and the dialogue sparkling, the comedy frequently verges on the amateur farce with fisticuts, chewing up the scenery, lashings with a crop and various other manifestations of the high spirit. It is in the over-doing of these elements, not to mention the over-drawing of one incredibly possessive girl that gives it all a dubious outlook.

The elaborate kiddishness of the bachelor is also a flaw, though it

The elaborate kiddishness of the bachelor is also a flaw, though it seems clear that no one could get away with it but Ronny Graham, who behind a Good Time Charlie exterior, conveys an authentically seductive charm. voice sometimes seems a little thick and unruly.

Kim Hunter, as the all-wise hopeful who misses her male prey by a riding crop, takes the lead, but Janet Riley stands out in a frightening example of femme go-getter. Parker McCormick, as anotherhopeful, accomplishes a lot in a little time, and Julia Meade, another ditto, lends decor to the affair. Jack Manning never quite puts over the fatuous role of the young scientist, but Joey Faye contributes a brief, very funny bit as a hopped-up musician.

On the whole, the plot line is well worked out and there is always something doing, so there's probably the basis for a film, especially since there is not any really blue material. But the direction often overemphasizes the action, and the lines, especially in the opening phases, tend to be over cute. The set is attractive. Elie.

Unfortunately, the star's material is only mildly interesting. In the dream sequences, showing childish fantasies of becoming a lady, Miss Kitt introduces six songs by James Shelton, with lyrics by the composer and the authors Sebree and Johnson, They are well-suited to Miss Kitt's style, but obviously are too sophisticated to fit the role she is portraying, so the play lack integration.

Miss Hayes almost made the audience forget the antique quality of James M. Barrie's perennial revival, despite fact that she's no longer ideal casting for the spinster role she first did 28 years ago. But the sumptuous tasteful decor with which Huntington Hartford has converted this old house used as radio theatre for years makes it one of the most striking legit showplaces in the U.S.

places in the U. S.

For once, a local house has matched the "brilliance" of the opening night audience. But in addition to the luxurious appointments, the classic white and black marbelized front, the clean architectural lines, the striking interior coloration in gradations of greys, black and green, and the handsome mezzanine with two bars serving between act drinks, it's obvious that millionaire Hartford is making strenuous effort to bring the Coast good legit fare.

It had been assumed that Hart-mat minionaire Hartford is making strenuous effort to bring the Coast good legit fare.

It had been assumed that Hartford was just angeling the acting career of his wife, Marjorie Steele, but there are apparently no plans for her appearance here in nearfuture. She's now a click in the London production of "Sabrina Fair." Next show at this spot will likely be Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn in "Face to Face," a program of readings, one week after Miss Hayes' four-week run closes. This 1,032-seat theatre is a credit not only to the man who gave it legit life and his name, but also to Vine Street, which has had no such class house in many many years. Whether or not be realized it in advance, opening night indications are that Hartford may have the biggest thing since popcorn in his mezzanine bars, believed to be the first in any legit house in this country. It was a battle tonight to get near the bars during intermissions. The bars close the moment the curtain is announced for the next act, but there are after-show snacks and refreshments available. If he gets the shows that'll draw a bonanza in the bar.

As for "What Every Woman Knows," the play is sadly dated. There's no denying that the star has given the Hartford house an auspicuous opening. Her name insured a distinguished turnout, and Hartford and associate producer-theatre manager. Richard Skinner have provided a first class production.

Miss Haves gives a brilliont per-

Miss Hayes gives a brilliant performance in a role which she knows every nuance, a role for which she's temperamentally a natural. She gets outstanding support from Kent Smith as the pompous, obtuse Scot politician. Viola Roache, Tudor Owen, Walter Kingsford, George Mitchell and Lorna Thayer are all effective in support.

Terence Rattigan has dished up a new double-bill which should keep the St. James's Theatre, at capacity level for months to come. These two one-acters, rich in character observation and fauitlessly and sensitively constructed, are excellent: theatre, worthy of transference across the Atlantic.

Unlike his earlier double-bill, "The Browning Version" and "Harlequinade," this new dual-bill uses the same setting for both and, apart from the roles interpreted by the two stars, the characters are the same. Essentially, they are different in content, but both develop the theme of loneliness with delicate and emotional sensitivity.

The locale is a private, gented hotel in an English resort. In the first piece, "Table by the Window, the author brings together a divorced couple, both unhappy and lonely. The man (Bric Portman) is an ex-junior minister who did a jail term for assaulting his wife; she (Margaret Leighton) is an exmodel whose second marriage is a failure and who tries in a calculated way to win back her first husband.

In the second playlet, "Table Number Seven," Portman plays a bogus ex-major with a classical education but in reality a Service Corps second-lieutenant promoted from the ranks. He has been convicted for offenses against several women in a local film theatre and there is a sense of outrage among his fellow residents. Miss Leighton, in contrast to her earlier part, plays a frail and nervous spinster, with a streak of sympathy for the hounded man, but dominatel by Britanian and the players give superberformances. The two stars show once again they are fine and adaptable actors, and they extract the full emotional content from the situations.

The other roles are also played with distinction, with standout performances by Miss Neilson-Terry, Beryl Measor as the owner of the hotel, May Hallatt and Jane Eccles as hotel guests. Lesser parts have been skillfully cast and the entire company works as a polished team.

The atmosphere is enhanced by Michael Weight.

Whatever merits "No News From Father" may have had in its original Dutch text, the sparkle has vanished in its cross-channel transition. The scrambled story of a wife contronted by her long absent husband just as she is about to re-marry is an ancient.

Popular with radio audiences for his dry wit and admired for his dramatic force in serious stage work. Bernard Braden is not well served in this seesaw between comedy and farce. It has genulnely amusing patches, but generally fails, despite the star's personal appeal. It would lack novelty for the U. S.

When hubby shows up just in time for dinner, after 10 years in the Arctic, he wants to step back into the marital circle, but his wife fences him off until their young daughter's wedding is set. She temporarily succumbs to the old charm, then dismisses him to marry the family lawyer.

An outstanding performance is, given by Eleanor Summerfield as the wife. Robin Bailey is agreeable as the suitor and the daughter and her fiance are well played by Jill Dixon and Gerald Harper.

Af the outset let's nave no nonsense about the whole affair. The Majestic Theater has been startled out of inactivity by an old play . . . a 33-year-old play . . . by Avery Hopwood and Wilson Collison. "Getting Gertie's Garter," which first saw the white glare of Broadway the same season that spawned the Francine Larrimore-starring "Nice People," with Katherine Cornell and Tallulah Bankhead in SUPPORTING roles, is packing them in at the Majestic. They are pouring from motor vehicles, trains, trams, trolleys, trottoirs. They throng through the state of the free from the cob buffoorers, it is so old it is new to them and has been in rehearsal for their benefit, all these years, Nat Burns, veteran comedian who has staged the Max Yorke production, is the tippling butler who is the ringleader in these fractian high jinks. David Ffolkes' wallboard sets have a full complement of doors, without which no farce can meet the yard-wide, all-wool specifications. Other participants in the hectic, headlong, revelry are Dodie Bauer's high-pitched and suspicious blonde life who does a striptease behind a blanket, Velle Davenport, a statuesque brunette bride whose pre-marial peccadillos have come back to haunt her nuptial night, Larry Bockius, without whose hide-and-seek efforts to retrieve the celebrated garter Mr. Hopwood would have been sans a farce; Tye Morrow, who becomes remarkably adept at climbing into and walking out of the old grandfather clock, and Eulabelle Moore's Negromaid, Lilac, who would appreciate a chocolate-tinted duplicate of the face on Gertie's garter. Lawrence said there had been a "leak," that he contemplated breaking the news of the suit just before the World Series opening. Thomas F. Young, who has been covering baseball for almost 40 years and who has not missed a game, regular or exhibition, played by an Albany professional nine since 1927, is supposed to have arrived at the $50,000,000 figure via multiplying McCaffrey's estimated losses of $250,000 (since 1949) by 200—the number of minor league teams "damaged" by the radio-television."

Sharpshooting Annie Oakley

Sharpshooting Annie Oakley

"Annie Oakley of the Wild West" by Walter Havighurst (MacMillan; $4.50), is a beguilling biography of the trim little sharpshooter whose name has become part of show biz lingo. (Annie could shoot holes in playing cards tossed into the air; and since her demonstrations, all pre-punched ducats—and even unpunched passes—have been known as "Annie Oakleys").

Annie has been immortalized by Herbert and Dorothy Fields, Irving Berlin, Rodgers & Hammerstein and Ethel Merman in "Annie Get Your Gun," and this is not the first time that Little Sure Shot has found herself between covers. Havighurst's book, however, seems to have more savely of Annie's to have more savvy of Annie's showmanship than other accounts. Proper credit is given to the pros in Annie's life: Frank Butler, her husband, an exhibition shooter; Major John W. Burke, her pressagent; and, of course, Buffalo Bill Cody himself, with whose show Annie became a world figure and a legend.

Hayighurst permits the reader to meet Annie behind the scenes as well as in the arena. She is assessed through the eyes of performers who knew her, as well as from news stories of her appearances before royalty.

Calmest person around Hollywood, psychiatric seminars are all agreed, is Edith Head, designer of clothes for Par's Peacock Alley for more years than gallantry permits me to say. For months this espionage arm of columnists have been watching for signs of crack-ups among the guys and gals who costume major studio productions. They have found stars who are worried stiff about what changing hemlines, waistlines and bustlines were going to do with their careers, but the tremors never seemed to continue to the sources of all these manoeuvers.

Threatened on one side by all the jitters caused by revolutionary changes in picture projection and, on the other, by that Blue Devil Dior, it didn't seem possible that Hollywood stylists could keep out of the way of nervous breakdowns. None, however, has taken an overdose of sleeping tablets and Miss Head in particular has taken it all as serenely as the Venus di Milo.

Miss Head's explanation of her own ity is this. In the first place she is currently working on costumes for Cecil B. De Mille's "Ten Commandments" and in the second place she does not design clothes for commercial wear.

Moses Among The Mazes

The clothes of Moses and the women of his time were ahead of Dior in mammary de-emphasis by 3,000 years. They were made of handwoven materials to keep out the heat and the cold, not to top nature in sex appeal. Judging from their romances they did as well as latterday designers, if the intention was to speed up the day of the marriage festival.

As for stars who must dress for tomorrow or, more specifically, for next year, Miss Head has the solution of this ever-present problet in her own little head. She creates clothes which look like a million on the screen but which in the main would look a little silly on the street. She knows what every star really looks like because she has forms of them. (By now I know what they really look like, oo.)

Some have pretty little figures and are easy to dress. Some require creative cheating here and there. She confesss that Hollywood designers contributed to the overemphasis of, the bust and is glad that Paris is leading the way to get women to show some modesty in this position (at times she is boss of 300 specialists i millinery, dressmaking, designing and costume jewelry). She doesn't try to unduly impress others, either.

As women go, Miss Head is an extremely honest person. That doesn't mean she goes around telling people all the things their best friends won't tell them, but it means she is perfectly able and willing to appraise a situation, even if uncomplimentary to herself.

She is a small, neat dark-haired woman, with her black hair tied i a big flat roll on the back of her head and short bangs in front. She is well dressed but not dressed to the teeth as a walking ad of her skill as a coutouriere. She doesn't seem impressed with her unusual position (at times she is boss of 300' specialists i millinery, dressmaking, designing and costume jewelry). She doesn't try to unduly impress others, either.

How Would You Dress A Burro?

She has some frustrations of course. One is burros. She has never designed a thing for them, not even a hat. She was born in San Berdoo and raised in Arizona and New Mexico, and her first love was a burro. Spanish being her native tongue, she taught it at fashionable girls' schools after graduating from the U. of California. Then she took some art courses at the Otis Institute. That set her up for a job as sketcher i Par's wardrobe department. She moved up rapidly to chief designer and has been head of the department ever since, having succeeded Howard Greer.

In her time she has won five Oscars. She has dressed every star from Olivia de Havilland in "The Heiress" to Hedy Lamarr in "Samson and Delliah," to pick extremes. Both won Oscars. Audrey Hepburn in "Roman Holliday," Elizabeth Taylor in: "A Place in the Sun," Bette Davis in "All About Eve," Dorothy Lamour in her first sarong, Gloria Swanson in "Sunset Boulevard" and Danny Kaye in "Knock on Wood" are some of her specials. She has also dressed Ginger Rogers in one of the early furlined reversible costumes as well as slinky things for Loretta Young and Arlene Dahl, Mae West and Joan Fontaine. But her dream models are Jane Wyman and Grace Kelly.

Queen Kelly Again

Miss Kelly's figure gives a designer little work and a great deal of pleasure, Miss Head says, "I have a feeling for soft, fluid lines and a more graceful womanly dress, and Grace Kelly best satisfies my own desires. But I don't push what I like. Down to bit players I give their a choice of at least two dresses that I believe best fat the character portrayed by the screenwriters and the director.

"I can camouflage, transform, or create a whole new personality through fashion, but the secret is not to destroy the star's boxoffice personality by chasing the spectacular. If the clothes get too loud, they will mar a

"Actually, they rarely see their creations on the women who eventually buy them. As a matter of fact, if more women could see how they look on a screen they wouldn't buy half the dresses they do. Commercial designers too would show more restraint if they had to face their mistakes as we do on the screen. Our only worry is just that. We can't afford to be wrong. We can't wipe out a folly by reversing our designs the following season. So we concentrate on creating clothes with grace-in-action, good fit from all angles, camera angles, that is, and colors that photograph well and give the stars a shot i the arm each time they put the costumes on."

She seemed a little surprised that a Variety mugg would be interested in clothes. I assured her that women and what they wore never-cluded me. They were chumps for cycles and if smart could save a fortune by having a clothes library, because commercial styles have a depressing habit of repeating themselves, with small variations, every 10 years or so. I asked if she got much fan mail, or requests for the designs.

Mail Order Glamor

every 10 years or so. I asked if she got much fan mail, or requests for the designs.

Mail Order Glamor

"Yes," she said, sadly, "mostly from countries where there is a lot of poverty or repression, or both. They ask for the dresses or patterns of glamor dresses that cannot be bought in stores. They couldn't be worn for everyday living or even on special occasions. They are strictly theatrical clothes designed for that particular actress in that particular part. Nevertheless, I send them a sketch and typed details of the dress. It's a phase of escapism that never fails to sadden me."

She was among the first to discount the degree to which Dior would go in flattening the female figure. Some people hoped that Hollywood stylists would fight the change to the last falsie, figuring that a sudden change in style dates a Hollywood picture. But she pointed out the wide discrepancy between studio clothes and street clothes have already taken care of sudden changes, and that moreover this change has been creeping up for some time even in street clothes.

Dior, in her opinion, has done a good thing for women in getting certain features of their figures back to what is more believable. The threat of making all women look like two by 12 plans didn't come off, anymore than the threat to lower the waistline did in 1948. There was a strong buyer-resistance and the waistline did in 1948. There was a strong buyer-resistance and the waistline stayed about where it belonged. She believes any effort to push women back to the 1920s will meet a similar resistance, especially if the extreme of fashion is uncomfortable or unhealthy.

Actor's first wifef was an actress in California legit. Evelyn Vaughan. Later he married a film star, Claire Windsor. The marriage with Grace Menken was to endure. For the past 20 years they resided at the Meurice Hotel on West 58th St. and Lytell was a familiar figure in New York's Central Park, where actors of the legit traditionally keep fit. In recent years he usually had a dog on leash. Grace Menken had built up a successful dress shop widely patronized by women of the theatre and broadcasting worlds.

Lytell had been in nearly all the branches of entertainment, with the possible exception of burlesque and cabarets. He had a number of long engagements in both radio and tv, notably with "I Remember Mama." He had also been a film director. His most recent professional assignment was as a special lecturer on the road for "The Egyptian."

In his status as five-time Shepherd of the Lambs, four-time president of Actors Equity and in the various wartime activities, Lytell's talents as a public speaker became traditional. He was often requested to speak at the funerals of show people and did so with unfalling good taste, something that frequently could not be said of others attempting the same difficult chore.

Lytell's younger brother, Wilfred, also an actor, died last Sept. 10 at the age of 62. Services for Lytell will be held tomorrow (Thurs.) at the Little Church Around the Corner, 5th Avc. and 29th St., N. Y.
Friends have been requested not to send flowers since it was Lytell's wish that the equivalent be sent to the Actors' Fund. As Grace Menken says, "Bert has nothing against florists but the Actors' Fund has always been close and dear to him. He has seen what the Fund does for actors, in hospital rooms and other charities, that he always willed it so."
